Germany Calls for Revision of Reparations

COUNTRY CANNOT MAKE PAYMENTS, SAYS STATEMENT

Liberation From "War Debt" Burden Declared by Government To Be Imperative in Manifesto.

NEW SACRIFICES ASKED OF PEOPLE

Nation's Purchasing Power Diminished by Reparations Payments, Document Points Out.

BERLIN, June 6.—(AP)—The time has come for Germany to tell the world that liberation from "unbearable reparations burdens" is imperative, the government declared today in an appeal to the people, published simultaneously with a series of new emergency tax decrees calculated to yield nearly $400,000,000 in new revenues.

"We must call our last reserves and tell the world that we have reached the limit of our capacity to bear privations," the appeal declared.

Germany's purchasing power, the document said, is diminished by reparations payments and she is compelled to increase her exports against which other nations are raising increasingly higher barriers in the fierce war for world markets.

"We are often told that Germany has not economized enough," the appeal said. "At the present juncture, that is not true. Including today's decrees we have saved 1,500,000,000 marks (about $345,000,000) in expenses, and so far as we can see now our 1931 budget is balanced."

Sacrifices Unavoidable.

The government is under no illusions regarding the severity of the sacrifices demanded from the nation and its citizens, the appeal said, but these are unavoidable.

"It is better to take from those who have than to risk discovering some day that we cannot meet our liabilities. We have done everything possible to meet them, and have taken up much foreign capital, but this is no longer possible."

The German manifesto calling upon the German people for new sacrifices and decbring that liberation from the "unbearable reparations burdens is imperative," read as follows:

"The expectation that the world economic crisis would ebb in 1931 and thereby relieve distress and unemployment in all industrial states and still more in the raw material and agricultural countries has proved deceptive. Germany is involved in the goods exchange of the world to the extent of 23,000,000,000 marks annually. (Approximately $5,750,000,000.) It cannot save itself from the common distress under which even nations victorious in the war are suffering severely.

Cares Aggravated.

"Our cares and difficulties are aggravated because in addition to the general crisis in which we live we have to carry the special burden of having to make payments as the vanquished in the World War.

"These payments were undertaken on presuppositions which have not been realized, and deprive our economic system, impoverished by the war and by inflation, of the capital it needs for its preservation and development. Deprivation of capital means the stoppage and restriction of plants, unemployment, diminution of private income and last, but not least, of the revenues of the state.

"In addition, our purchasing power on the world's markets is diminished by the amounts we have to pay in reparations for which we do not receive any returns. Tribute payments weaken us as purchasers and compel us to restrict our imports. They compel us to increase exports against which other countries are raising stronger and stronger barriers. The consequence is embittered intensification of the struggle for the world's markets.

Demands on Germany.

"The reich's government is compelled to ask the German nation to shoulder most heavy burdens and sacrifices in order to maintain the reich's solvency. This is a prerequisite for the continuity of Germany's economic system; from it depend the existences of millions of war veterans, the recipients of public relief, civil servants and employes.

"Both here and abroad the reproach has often been raised that we have not managed our affairs economically enough. This reproach, as far as Germany at the present juncture is concerned, is wrong. All along the line the strongest efforts have been made to throttle expenditure to the lowest bearable point. After the new emergency decrees have gone into effect, the reich's expediture, including the cuts of last year, will be less by the gigantic sum of 1,500,000,000 marks. So far as can be foreseen under present conditions, the reich's budget for the current year will thereby be balanced. The firm will of the reich's government is that these emergency decrees shall be the last step towards that goal.

"In view of the possibility that the crisis may continue, our strength must not be consumed by despair and dis-

Stillman Children Enriched, Fifi Honeymoons, All Happy

Mr. and Mrs. Fowler McCormick are shown in the above Associated Press telephoto in East Hampton, N. Y., where they were photographed on June 6 while on their honeymoon. The bride is 51, the groom 32.

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—The former Mrs. Anne Urquhart Stillman has received no settlement as a result of her divorce from James A. Stillman, multi-millionaire banker, but the World-Telegram said today their four children will divide $3,000,000.

Reports of a million dollar settlement on the former Mrs. Stillman, now Mrs. Fowler McCormick, were denied by her attorney.

The $3,000,000 given by Mr. Stillman to the children is in addition to the $10,000,000 trust fund left for them by the late James A. Stillman Sr., their grandfather.

The World-Telegram said the $3,000,000 gift marks the end of Mr. Stillman's former charge that the younger child Guy, now 12, was the son of Fred Beauvais, an Indian guide. Guy is recognized in the settlement along with Mrs. Anne Davison, James A. Jr. and Alexander and his right to share in the $10,000,000 trust fund of his grandfather appeared established.

Details of the divorce and Mrs. Stillman's subsequent marriage to Fowler McCormick, grandson of the late Cyrus McCormick, reaper magnate, came to light today while the couple continued their honeymoon in the seclusion of a small cottage at East Hampton, L. I.

There was only one witness at the divorce trial in New City, N. Y., Mr. Stillman filed blanket denials to the charge of infidelity, but he offered no contest.

Ten minutes was all that was required for the marriage of Mrs. Stillman and McCormick at the Stillman estate near Pleasantville, N. Y., on Thursday. James Mack, the bride's attorney, was best man, and Mrs. James A. Stillman Jr. was maid of honor. It was in sharp contrast to Mrs. Stillman's previous marriage and the open air wedding in Canada some years ago of James A. Stillman Jr. and his mother's former maid.

Mr. McCormick declined to say how long he and his bride planned to remain in the little cottage atop a Long Island sand dune. They were said to plan a visit to Mrs. McCormick's camp in Canada later.

BOROUGH AGREES TO COUNTY TERMS ON VIADUCT WORK

City To Turn Over Check for $34,000; Only Signing of Contract in Way of Bid Advertising.

Only signing of the contract between the borough of Atlanta and Fulton county Saturday afternoon remained in the way of actual advertising for bids for reconstruction of the Broad street viaduct.

Council, at a special session called by Provisional Mayor Pro Tem J. Charlie Murphy, unanimously approved terms laid down by the Fulton county commission as the basis on which the county could participate in assisting to erect the structure.

The contract will provide that Fulton county will erect the bridge, accepting as the city's part of the cost $34,000 already voted by council. The county agreed to provide additional money for the completion of the viaduct, limiting its part in the construction to $34,000. It had been estimated by the city that the bridge would cost $68,000.

As soon as the contract is signed, the borough's check for $34,000 will be turned over to the county, which will advertise for bids and award the contract. The only other interest the borough will have in the new structure will be engineering inspections to see that the structure is built according to plans and specifications prepared by C. E. Kauffmann, borough bridge engineer, which council also approved at the special meeting.

County authorities said Saturday they are ready to begin advertising at once and that the work will proceed at the earliest possible moment.

In order to push the work shifts will be kept busy on it for 24 hours a day, according to specifications.

Cuban Rioters Hide In U. S. Consulate

SANTIAGO, Cuba, June 6.—(AP)—Fifty rioters fleeing rural guards who were dispersing members of an unemployment demonstration today sought refuge in the American consulate here.

Those entering the consulate were part of a crowd of 1,500 who gathered in the streets shortly after noon and began a march through the business district, crying threats against employers and against the government.

As the crowd neared police headquarters the city police attempted to break up the procession, but were unsuccessful. Rural guards hurried to the aid of the police and with drawn machetes attacked the crowd.

The rioters quickly dispersed and about 50, pursued by the guards, burst into the consulate and begged Consul Edwin Shoenrich to give them protection.

The consul talked quietly to the men and women, urging them to leave. After half an hour they went to their homes.

French People Cling to Custom, Tradition And Abhor Innovation, Mayor Key Finds

Mary Lamar Knight, former Atlanta girl, now foreign correspondent for the United Press, is shown interviewing Mayor James L. Key in Paris. The story was obtained exclusively for The Constitution in Atlanta.

BY MARY KNIGHT.

PARIS, June 6—(UP)—"The thing that has impressed me most about the French people since I got out of the hospital and have had time to look around a little is that they abhor innovation. They prefer to do everything according to their long-established custom and tradition," said Mayor Key to the United Press in an exclusive interview. "In their manner of living and doing work they do not welcome new ideas."

Ruth Key, daughter of the Atlanta mayor, declared that "Paris may be the most glamorous city in the world to some folks, but even with all of its gorgeous clothes and shops and monuments, I wouldn't swap it for Atlanta, Peachtree, ready-made dresses and Five Points."

Mayor Key asserted that another thing which has impressed him is the cordiality of the reception of the visiting mayors. "They seem to deeply appreciate the visits of these people, already in touch with government problems at home," he said. "France has accorded the mayors a dignity that exceeds anything they could possibly have expected. I have been impressed with the bearing and dignified response of our visiting mayors for the hospitality that has been showered upon them. Their cities and their people are, indeed, well represented and they have left very fine impressions in the minds of the French people.

"The visit of the mayors should be interpreted in the light of that fact and not in the light of the fact that in all such groups of people there are

LACK OF SYSTEM, PROPER AUTHORITY SCORED IN REPORT

Governor Is Practically Devoid of Control Over Machinery of Executive Department, Reorganization Committee Finds

TAX COLLECTION METHODS HIT

Body To Resume Deliberations Tuesday on Information Obtained From Various Officials.

Georgia's "unorganized mass of administrative departments" is responsible for inefficiency and extravagance in the state government, a loss to the average citizen of the benefits intended for him to receive and "public disrespect for and distrust in public officials," the special legislative reorganization commission charged in a preliminary report of its findings made public Saturday.

As a resemedy for conditions they have been investigating since April 28, the committee hints at a series of consolidations which will likely be recommended to the general assembly convening June 24. The preliminary report, however, Hugh Peterson, Jr., commission chairman said, is not to be confused with the report yet to be prepared for the legislature.

A majority of the heads of departments prefer the present organization under which they work, the committee also found, "and would not commit themselves to any change." Some expressed "open antagonism" to any proposed changes, the report added.

Besides Peterson, who will serve in the next senate, other members, who will serve in the house, of the committee are G. A. Huddleston, of Meriwether; W. J. Crowe, of Worth; J. T. Colson, of Glynn, and H. B. Edwards, of Lowndes.

While public hearings, out of which came the information the committee reviews in its indictment of a loose administrative setup in the state, have been concluded, the committee expects to be in "practically continuous session" drafting its report and recommendations.

"Numerous charges against various departments and officials," the preliminary report concludes, "have been made to the committee by citizens of the state. There have also been numerous suggestions of a general nature regarding changes leading to economy and simplicity in government. In each instance the committee has investigated the charges as fully as was practicable. The information has been filed with the committee for study in formulating its report to the general assembly.

Text of the committee's report, in full, follows:

"The committee appointed to investigate the administrative machinery of Georgia has held public meetings on April 28, 29, 30, May 11, 12, 13, 14, 18, 19, 20, and June 4 and 5, 1931. An opportunity was given every public official and private citizen to appear before the committee. The majority of the heads of the de-

TWO MEN KILLED BY SPEEDING TRAIN

Party of Hikers Trapped on Curve Near Bolton by Freight and Express.

Stepping out of the way of an oncoming freight train, two Temple (Ga.) men were struck and killed by a speeding passenger train near Bolton early Saturday night. The men were Millard Spake, 20 years old, and Edgar Beard, 22 years old.

With four friends from Temple, the two men came to Atlanta Saturday to spend the day. Shortly before nightfall they started to hike back to Temple, following the N. C. & St. L. right-of-way.

As the six walked around a curve in the right-of-way a mile east of Bolton, they saw a freight train coming toward the city and stepped from one track on to another, used by outgoing trains.

5,000 Tons of Coffee Dumped in Sea at Rio

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, June 6.—(UP)—Five thousand tons of coffee were dumped into the sea today as part of the 45,000 tons which the federal government proposes to destroy during the year.

The coffee dumping is not analogous to the "Boston Tea Party" but a deliberate attempt by the government to reduce the stocks of surplus coffee and help the marketing of the remainder at a stable price. The coffee destroyed was purchased with funds obtained by a tax on each bag of coffee in storage.

CALDWELL HELD FOR TENNESSEE

Horton Refuses Kentucky Extradition Until State Disposes of Case.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 6.—(AP) Governor Henry H. Horton today announced he will not permit Rogers Caldwell, financier, to be extradited to Kentucky until disposition of cases against him in Tennessee is made. Request for extradition had been made by the governor of Kentucky.

Governor Horton required Caldwell to make $25,000 bond to insure his appearance "before me and abide by my final action on the demand for extradition, which will be after the courts in this state have disposed of the cases against him."

Caldwell is under indictment in Louisville on a charge of obtaining property by making a false statement in writing in connection with negotiations for the merger of his investment banking house with the Bancokentucky Company, of Louisville, now also in receivership.

The governor's decision was given to W. Mack Fuqua, Caldwell's attorney. Caldwell did not appear.

Caldwell is scheduled to go to trial

BANK 'BLEEDING' DENIED BY STATE

Mobley's Office Answers Suit Against Bremen Liquidating Agent.

Denying that W. B. Williamson, of Bremen, owns any stock in the Bank of Bremen now being liquidated by the department, a statement issued Saturday by W. J. Davis, assistant superintendent of banking, and Luther Roberts, attorney, declares that depositors of the closed institution have been paid 100 cents on the dollar and that the liquidating agents have in hand now assets valued at $23,487.79.

Williamson Saturday said that he disposed of his stock, with a par value of $1,150, within a six months' period prior to the closing of the bank and that, under the law, was liable to assessment.

"I agreed to assume one-half of the assessment against the other party and I paid this to the liquidating agent through the party to whom I sold the stock."

He further said that neither his mother, Mrs. W. B. Williamson, nor H. Meeks, co-plaintiffs in the suit, owned any shares of bank stock at the time of the closing of the institution. He said the only other stock held by the Williamson family was seven shares which were owned by his sister. The bank was capitalized at $28,000 and the stocks valued at $100 a share.

The statement, issued by Davis and Roberts in the absence of Superintendent A. B. Mobley, who is ill, is in reply to charges made by Williamson in obtaining an injunction in Fulton county superior court to restrain Mobley from further supervision of liquidating the bank.

It says:

"The charges made in this morning's Constitution with reference to the 'bleeding' of the resources of the Bank of Bremen, are so ridiculously absurd that ordinarily no attention would be given them. The department

YOUTH CONFESSES BUTCHER MURDER

Wife of Slain Speakeasy Owner in New York Also Is Implicated.

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—A trail of human fragments revealing a new Brooklyn "butcher murder" resulted tonight in the jailing of young Charles Obietes and widow of the murdered man, Lena Zubenski.

Held on homicide charges with them were Frank Ravins, a cousin of the Zukenskis, and Frank Markunas, 37, a friend.

The homicide charge was lodged against the latter two to insure their retention as material witnesses, police said.

Obietes confessed today that he slew Andrew Zubenski, speakeasy owner, dismembered the body and over a period of two days disposed of the parts in various sections of the city. He said the crime was done at the urge of Mrs. Zubenski and that he was paid $300 for doing it.

The motive, Obietes told police, was Mrs. Zubenski's fear that her husband intended to return to Cleveland, Ohio, where they lived until eight years ago, and "tell" about the death of her first husband, Adam Vilentis.

Mrs. Zubenski persisted in denials of any knowledge of her husband's whereabouts. She said he left home March 25. She went to the morgue, viewed the assembled parts of the

SCHOOL-POLITICS DIVORCE IS URGED

Separation Only Solution of City's Financial Problems, Murphy Says.

Solution of Atlanta's financial problems lies in permanent divorce of the Atlanta public school system from the borough government, Alderman J. Charlie Murphy, chairman of the finance committee of council, said Saturday in calling a joint meeting for 10 o'clock Monday morning of the finance group and legislators from Fulton and DeKalb counties.

This decision was reached, it was indicated, following a meeting Friday night of administration leaders and officials of the Atlanta Federation of Trades.

A. Steve Nance, president called the session.

A joint committee of the finance and charter revision committees of council and the legislative members are engaged in attempting to raise $1,666,000 to insure operation of all departments of the borough government for the remainder of the year, but Murphy holds that a permanent solution of Atlanta's financial ills lies in establishment of schools on an independent basis.

The discussions Monday will be directed toward both issues, Murphy said.

Endurance Driver Will Seek To Establish New Record Here

Monday morning at 10 o'clock, Endurance Davis, famous endurance driver and stunt man, will start on an attempt to break all existing records for automobile endurance for continued driving.

Heretofore drivers have gone out and made their mark at a hundred hours, which time "Dare Devil" Endurance Davis has made on many occasions, and for the Atlanta run he will attempt to set a new record of 127 hours' continuance driving.

He has reported himself in the very best condition for the gruelling test he will make behind the wheel of a Chevrolet Six sedan furnished to him by the East Point Chevrolet Company, located in East Point.

Endurance Davis will be locked to the wheel of the East Point Company's Chevrolet sedan by Lieutenant Jack Malcolm, head of Atlanta's traffic squad, and will not leave the wheel for 127 hours. His contract calls for the Chevrolet to be kept moving every minute for the entire time. No stops are to be made unless forced by a traffic jam, and should the car be forced to stop the engine must be kept running, or Endurance Davis forfeits his money and breaks his contract.

Should Endurance Davis fail to complete the drive for any cause—physical exhaustion or from a wreck caused from having lost consciousness, he also will forfeit his award.

Jouett Shouse To Be Speaker At Banquet Honoring Russell

In his first appearance in the southeast, Jouett Shouse, chairman of the democratic executive committee, will speak before the Young Men's Democratic League at a dinner to be given in honor of Richard B. Russell Jr., governor-elect of Georgia, at the Ansley hotel on the night of June 26. Announcement of the dinner and of Mr. Shouse's presence was made Saturday by R. J. Reynolds Jr., secretary of the league.

An elaborate program of entertainment is being arranged in honor of Mr. Shouse and present indications are that Atlanta will be the mecca for democratic political leaders of this section on that day.

Mr. Reynolds' statement contained the additional announcement from President Cann that a committee on arrangements had been appointed to take charge of the affair. It was announced that Clarence H. Calhoun, of Atlanta, had been appointed chairman of this committee. The other members o this committee are: Baxter Maddox, Bond Almand, John Wesley Weekes, Scott Candler, Bruce Woodruff, Wilson Parker, John B. McCallum, Samuel Levy, Grover Bell, John S. McClelland, Ralph Pharr, Gordon Singleton, J. Henson Tatum, Frank Hooper Jr., J. Sid Tiller, Clark Howell Jr. and Harllee Branch Jr.

In calling this meeting Mr. Cann made it clear that it is a democratic gathering and not a factional affair. The constitution of the Young Men's Democratic League does not permit the organization to take part in contests within the party, it was explained.

One of the fundamental purposes for which the Young Men's Democratic League was organized was to encourage young men to take an active interest in public affairs. In view of the fact that Governor-elect Russell is an outstanding example of a young man who has developed into an outstanding leader in public affairs and especially since he is a member of the Young Men's Democratic League, the league is taking this opportunity to pay tribute to Mr. Russell, it was announced.

Lindberghs May Fly to Orient Eastward Along Arctic Circle

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are considering flying to China and Japan over an eastern route, which would bring them close to the north pole on a 6,500-mile journey to the Orient.

Colonel Lindbergh is studying the possibilities of a great circle course across Greenland and Spitzbergen instead of taking the Bering straight route from the Pacific coast.

He is making inquiries as to fuel and supply bases and stores along that northern route. The whole plan is in a formative stage.

At North Beach airport, Queens, mechanics installing pontoons have been ordered to put a water rudder on Lindbergh's Lockheed plane. The equipment under consideration includes a tent, a rubber boat, two months' food supply and radio apparatus.

The northern-great circle route has been flown three times by the army round-the-world fliers; Von Gronau, who made it last year in a Dornier flying boat, and by Parker Kramer and Bert Hassell, of Rockford, Ill., who lost their plane in a wreck in Greenland.

There have also been flights to that part of the world by Sir Hubert Wilkins and Captain Albin Ahrenberg, Swedish pilot who went search-

Dallas Minister To Deliver Emory Baccalaureate Today

Sermon by Dr. Umphrey Lee Will Be Heard by University's Largest Graduating Class.

Dr. Umphrey Lee, pastor of the Highland Park Methodist church, Dallas, Texas, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at 11 o'clock this morning at Emory University. Announcement was made Saturday that commencement exercises will be held in the university auditorium, and that admission to the baccalaureate address Tuesday by Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times, will be by card only. The auditorium will seat 1,000.

The largest graduating class in Emory's history will be given diplomas this year, when 268 seniors will be graduated. Degrees have been awarded at earlier convocations during the year to 81 other students.

"Although Emory confers few honorary degrees, the board of trustees, at its annual meeting Friday, voted unanimously to award the degree of doctor of laws to Judge Orville A. Park, of Macon, and to Dr. Howard W. Odum, of Chapel Hill, N. C. Both Judge Park and Dr. Odum will attend the commencement exercises Tuesday to receive these degrees.

Alumni Day Monday.

Monday will be Alumni Day. Fourteen classes will hold reunions and approximately 500 old "grads" will return to the campus to hear the alumni oration by Judge Virlyn B. Moore, '02, of the Fulton county superior court. Judge Moore's son, Virlyn B. Jr., is a member of this year's graduating class. Other features of the alumni day program will include a barbecue luncheon at 1 o'clock, in the university dining hall, and a reception by President and Mrs. Harvey W. Cox to the alumni and seniors at 8:30 o'clock at night.

Faculty promotions and elections were announced Saturday by President Cox, following a meeting of the university executive committee. Promotions include the following:

Dr. Osborne R. Quayle, from associate professor to professor of chemistry; Dr. LeRoy E. Loemker, from assistant professor to associate professor of philosophy; Dr. Jack C. Norris, from assistant professor to associate professor of bacteriology and public health; Dr. Daniel A. McGinty, from assistant professor to associate professor of physiology, and Thomas A. Mitchell, from instructor to assistant professor of physics.

New Athletic Directors.

Two full-time men will direct Emory's athletic program next year, President Cox stated. Jeff D. McCord, of Atlanta, is the new athletic director. A full-time assistant has been provided for, and appointment to this post will be announced in a few days. Both McCord and Stovall were three-letter men at Emory, McCord in the class of 1916 and Stovall in the class of 1926. They will have six graduate coaches and seven student assistants under them.

Another important vacancy was filled Saturday with the election of Mrs. S. S. Haynie as dietitian and manager of the University cafeteria, succeeding Mrs. W. N. Newsome, who has resigned.

Miss Carrie Spurgeon was elected as acting director of nurses in the Emory University hospital, to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Mrs. Minnie Bass Schell.

always to be found, especially in American groups where people are noted for their independent thought, speech and action, someone who does not know how to behave in company.

Beautiful Weather.

"The weather," continued the visiting mayor, "is just beautiful. It is like our April weather—a little rain, a lot of sunshine, and hot and cool spells. It can't get too hot for me though, because I like hot weather.

"Another thing I like about the French is their strict adherence to the two-hour unwritten dinner law they all keep to. It's good for people to enjoy a midday meal without so much rush and hurry. They don't just take turns for being out of their shops and offices over that lunch time either. they all go at the same time and they pull down the shades and lock the door and hang out the sign, 'Closed from 12 to 2 p. m.'

"There is no place grander in the world than that magnificent Place de la Concorde—that is, next to our Five Points in Atlanta understand—and I don't believe any poets or orators could ever really adequately describe the beauty of those fountains in the center where the guillotine used to create fountains of blood.

"I don't think Paris is half as wicked as they tell strangers she is because I have only been accosted one time by a lady trying to get into my taxi. It was in the broad open daylight, too, and when I shook my head and waved her away she went on about her business without molesting me further. I guess they can tell I'm a serious man so they go away and leave me alone," he concluded with a laugh.

"I'm like my daughter Ruth, this trip has been fine even if I did have to get sick and go to the hospital. Being sick proved to me how many friends I had, and people I didn't even know were in this part of the world have been in to see me. When I get back I'll be ready to pitch in and do a lot of work and to tell my people what I've learned about France and the way the Frenchmen live."

Pretty Girls.

Miss Key said, "I think there are just as pretty French girls as there are American girls but American girls have lots more style and even if they do have to wear ready-made clothes they certainly do look better in them. Smart looking people on the streets in Paris are few and far between and at home and in New York you can't walk two steps without seeing them everywhere," continued the popular Atlanta girl.

"When daddy told me we were going to Paris I was at school down at Wesleyan. This is my first year there and it was just before examinations, but I couldn't do any more studying after that. I'll make it up this summer when I get back. This is the first time I've been outside of the state of Georgia, and I don't mind saying that New York impressed me a whole lot more than Paris. It's so grand and huge and bustling, while Paris is flat and old and a little grimy looking. It's like comparing a debutante to an old lady with white hair and a gray shawl," she laughed.

When asked how she liked shopping in Paris, the lovely blond mayor's daughter said: "It's terrible—except for little things that you see in the window and can go in and buy and walk out with. If you want a dress or hat or anything like that it takes ages to get them. You have to be measured and try things on over and over, and if you say you have to have something right away to wear tonight or tomorrow they look at you like you were some kind of strange animal.

In its new building, where it will Time means nothing in their language because I've learned that French women spend six months getting two or three outfits together and then they never think of clothes again for another six months. Americans would certainly never get used to that way of doing. If you happen to find a dress, a sample that is, that fits you they don't want you to have that one because they want to keep it as the sample and make you another one."

What Miss Key thinks of department stores in Paris she says might not look so well in print. "They stuff them so full of things that they ooze clear out in the street and all over the sidewalks. That's the truth. Tables piled high with everything under the sun line the sidewalks around the largest department stores and inside you can hardly plough through the counters.

"I love the cafes, though, and I had my picture drawn by a Montparnasse artist at the Cupole and it was a sure enough thrill. I just couldn't wait for him to finish it and it was exactly like me when he got through! Some of the artists in the Latin Quarter are terrible looking with long, bushy hair and bow ties, but the others look real human. Their eyes are the keenest things about them.

French Shows Not Bad.

"French shows aren't so bad. The girls just don't have to wear as many clothes but actually they're no more immodest than they are in New York, and not half as suggestive. I don't like French music, but it is fun to hear it because it is so different. It lacks rythm and smoothness.

"These side trips we take are fine and the country is beautiful. I think I prefer the country to the city—that is, in Europe. Atlanta is the New York of the South, you know, so that makes me a city girl at home all right. French people are awfully cordial after they get to know you, but they are mighty cautious about how they make friends. It may be a good way to be, but it isn't like our good old southern hospitality.

"The trip to Europe—New York, Paris, and all the little towns around Paris, the French colonial exposition, and just everything, has been grand, of course, and I wouldn't give anything for a minute of it, but—the Statue of Liberty won't be an eyesore to me, and after daddy and I see one or two shows in New York when we get back, the train from there to Atlanta, or the plane, if we decide to fly, can't move too fast to take me back to my home in Dixie!"

RUTH KEY BROADCASTS FROM MOUNT VERNON

PARIS, June 6.—(AP)—America's touring mayors broadcast messages to the folks back home today from the reproduction of George Washington's Mount Vernon residence at the Intercolonial Exposition.

Each of them was on the air about a minute and a half and most of them seized the opportunity to boost the old home town.

Eighteen-year-old Ruth Key spoke for her father, Mayor Key, of Atlanta. She was the only woman on the program. C. Bascom Slemp, United States commissioner to the exposition; Senator Coff, of West Virginia, and Maurice Bellonte, the trans-Atlantic flyer, also spoke.

STATE DENTAL SOCIETY WILL MEET TUESDAY

The sixty-third annual meeting of the Georgia State Dental Society will open here Tuesday for a four-day session.

The general sessions of the convention will begin at the Biltmore Tuesday morning. Following a meeting of the executive council, and registration of delegates, members of the society will inspect manufacturers' exhibits of the latest contrivances in equipment and instruments.

Features of Wednesday's program include the annual addresses by Dr. Klatte R. Armstrong, president of the society; Robert Todd Oliver, president of the American Dental Association; Dr. A. H. Parmalee, of Oak Park, Ill., and Miss Gladys Eyrich, supervisor of mouth hygiene work in Mississippi.

The luncheon Wednesday at the Biltmore will take the form of a roundtable discussion of the major subjects of dentistry, and will be concluded with brief reports by Dr. George H. Green, of Milledgeville; Dr. A. A. Lawry, of Valdosta; Dr. N. G. Slaughter, of Athens; Dr. Reginald Maxwell, of Augusta; Dr. Walter McFall, of Macon; Dr. P. J. Thomas and Dr. Robert F. Sullivan, of Savannah, and Drs. J. Ross Tucker, S. L. Silverman, Robert L. Dement, Tom Conner, Frank A. Daniel, Frank F. Lamons and John V. Pierson, of Atlanta. Director of the entire discussion will be Dr. B. K. Vann, of Atlanta.

Clinical Feature.

The clinical feature of the convention will begin with the progressive clinics Wednesday afternoon. The clinicians, nationally known are: Dr. Harry G. Morton, of Milwaukee, Wis., who will speak on "Occlusal Requirements;" Dr. Blaine Rowbotham, of Chicago, whose subject will be "Children's Dentistry;" Dr. W. E. Harper, of Chicago, who will discuss "The Amalgam Filling That Will Not Leak," and Dr. Harry B. Johnston, of Atlanta, whose topic will be "Electro-Sterilization."

At the annual banquet Wednesday evening honor guests will be Robert Todd Oliver with the past presidents of the Georgia State Society and their wives. Mr. Oliver will be presented by Dr. Sheppard W. Foster, president of the Atlanta-Southern Dental College and the past president of the American Dental Society. Dr. Armstrong will be toastmaster.

Thursday morning the clinical work will be resumed. At noon the Oral Hygiene luncheon has been arranged, with Dr. Harry T. Bledsoe, of Atlanta, as chairman. The speakers' list is headed by Governor-elect Richard B. Russell Jr.

Thursday afternoon a series of state clinics will be presented by twenty-six Georgia dentists, while in the evening the annual dinner of the dental hygienists and the dance of the fifth district dental assistants will be held.

Thursday evening the annual election of officers will take place. The final business session Friday will be marked by various committee reports, and that of the state board of dental examiners.

The annual golf tournament of the society will be held at the Brookhaven Country Club Tuesday.

THREE CAPTURED AFTER GUN BATTLE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 6.—(AP)—Three men, two giving their names as Harry Sulton, 24, of Kansas City, and John Ryan, 24, Chicago, the other refusing to identify himself, were held here late today, after a running gunfight with a state trooper and seige of a small woods in which the trio was captured. Nearly 50 state, county and city policemen took part in the seige, using an airplane and machine guns to make the captures.

The arrests followed an attempt by the three captured and a fourth still at large to flee after obtaining 16 gallons of gasoline at an Auburn, N. Y., filling station.

LA GUARDIA SCORES PLANE PLANT WAGES

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(UP)—Representative Fiorello LaGuardia, republican, New York, who recently charged that the war department was reducing wages in violation of an expressed administration desire for maintenance of higher levels, renewed his campaign today by attacking the scale of wages at an airplane plant working on government contracts.

In a letter to Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, LaGuardia urged that the department refuse to accept motors delivered to it by the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, of Paterson, N. J. LaGuardia said the company reduced wages 10 per cent last year and is now paying 25 per cent less than the prevailing wages in Paterson factories. This, the New Yorker said, is a violation of the spirit of a law requiring the maintenance of wage scales on public works.

LaGuardia also wrote the commerce department asking that the sale of rejected airplane motors to civilians be prohibited.

FINAL RITES TODAY FOR DR. MAGUIRE

Final rites for Dr. Gabriel Reed Maguire, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, who died of a heart attack Thursday night while reading a newspaper, will be conducted at 9:30 o'clock this morning at the Tabernacle. All other services at the church will be canceled. The ceremonies will continue until 10:30 o'clock, and then the body will be taken to the train to be sent to New York for interment services. Burial will be in famous Woodlawn cemetery there Monday morning.

Dr. Louie D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, will conduct the services here. The pallbearers will be Joseph W. Awtry, George P. Whitman, J. Elmer Slider, Morgan Blake, Walter Ward, W. C. Stradley, Horace J. Pope and H. A. Etheridge. The honorary escort will be composed of the other members of the board of deacons, the Baptist ministers of the city, and the Joseph Greenfield lodge F. & A. M.

SALE OF HERALD-POST AGAIN IS DEFERRED

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 6.—(AP)—Sale of the Herald-Post Company was deferred for one week when called today. The continuance was granted by Nat C. Cureton, referee in bankruptcy, at the request of Ben S. Washer, operating trustee of the newspaper.

Washer said J. E. Pierce, Huntsville, Ala., had renewed by telegram his offer rejected twice previously. Washer said he has several other prospects and desires more time.

Children and Adults Throng Municipal Bathing Pools; Instructors Given Assignments by City Park Department

Season's First Mishap Occurs at Piedmont

The first accident of the municipal swimming season occurred at Piedmont park swimming pool Saturday shortly after the official opening. Charles Allison, 19, of 823 North Highland avenue, sustained a fracture of one of the vertebrae in his neck following an off-balance dive. He was taken to Georgia Baptist hospital. His condition had not been determined at a late hour Saturday night.

Allison was unconscious when he reached the hospital, efforts to revive him at the pool being unavailing. Later in the evening he recovered his speech, and told his father, Charles H. Allison, who is connected with the Eberhart Dental Supply Company, that he started to dive when he noticed another swimmer dive in ahead of him from the side. It was too late to stop his own dive, he said, and in an effort to avoid landing on the other swimmer, threw himself out of the way, but was unable to avoid hitting the bottom of the pool.

WOODCOCK TO WAGE WAR ON SPEAKEASIES

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—Speakeasies and saloons, along with the large commercial violators, today were defined by Prohibition Director Woodcock as the "obvious objective" of the dry forces.

Satisfied that with the addition on July 1 of 500 new agents authorized by congress, his corps will be the most efficient ever engaged to enforce prohibition, he has warned officers they must not be "deterred by sentimentalists and opponents of the law."

"You will direct your forces against commercial violators," the commissioner said in a letter of instruction to agents. "Everyone knows that there is being conducted in this country a commerce in intoxicating liquors which we are not reaching. It must be reached and stopped.

"Speakeasies and saloons are an obvious objective for your forces. There is no reason why you should not in your vicinity stamp out this particular violation. The conviction of an operator is not nearly as important as the closing of the place, either by the co-operation of the landlord or by the use of injunction.

"The determination of the owner of the speakeasy or saloon is the most important part of the procedure."

Woodcock also warned the agents they must obey the laws.

"The conduct of our forces must commend itself to the public sentiment and the methods of securing evidence must have the approval of the courts," he said. "On the other hand, we are not to be deterred by sentimentalists and opponents of the law."

Atlanta Saturday afternoon took its first dip and thereby christened the municipally operated swimming pools for the summer.

Pool gates opened with little formalities to long lines of anxious youngsters and even grown-ups at 1 o'clock. The initial plunges were free to all comers, but beginning today a fee of 15 cents will be charged to all those seeking admittance who are over 14 years old. The youngsters will continue to enjoy the pools without cost as heretofore throughout the season.

As an added feature of the swimming season, two swimming instructors have been employed—Miss Jewel Lane, who has held the post for the last three years, and Miss Blanche Spinks. They will be at all the pools on a regular schedule to teach those who wish to learn the art of swimming.

According to the schedule released Saturday afternoon by George I. Simons, general manager of parks, Miss Lane will be at Piedmont park Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and at Grant Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, while Miss Spinks will be at Oakland City Mondays and Thursdays; Mozley Tuesdays and Fridays, and Maddox Wednesdays and Saturdays. Time for the lessons will be from 8 until 10 o'clock in the morning and from 3 until 6 in the afternoon.

Pools will open at 5:30 o'clock in the mornings and close at 10:30 o'clock except on Sundays, when they will close at 8 o'clock, and from 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon until 9:30 o'clock at night.

State Administration Hit By Legislative Committee

partments, boards, institutions, commissions and bureaus took advantage of this opportunity.

Conditions Outlined.

"The committee, basing its opinions on information gained through conferences with numerous state officials and private citizens and a study of the state's administrative laws, finds the following conditions prevailing:

"1. A chief executive practically devoid of control over the administrative machinery of the executive department of the state.

"2. An unorganized mass of administrative machinery in the executive department functioning without sufficient system, centralized authority, or proper responsibility of leadership.

"3. Lack of centralized authority and systemized administration throughout the entire tax collecting machinery of the state.

"4. A splendidly organized and managed treasury department which is carefully, diligently and thoroughly safeguarding the public funds entrusted to its care.

"The committee is of the opinion that, under such conditions, among the natural and inevitable results are:

"1. Inefficiency and extravagance in executive administration.

"2. Public disrespect for and distrust in our public officials and our government.

"3. A loss to the average citizen of benefits intended under our government.

"The committee has made only limited inquiry into the legislative and judicial branches of the state government.

Irregularities Probed.

"Reported irregularities in the 'motor carrier act of 1931' were investigated. Irregularities in the measure as finally engrossed were found, which irregularities materially changed the meaning of the measure as passed by the general assembly. These irregularities were officially reported to those whose duty it is, under the law, to handle such matters—the governor, the attorney-general, and the solicitor of the Fulton superior court.

"In the judicial department it is revealed that there are 33 superior court circuits with a total of 38 superior court judges. The circuits show large variations in population. It is suggested that there are too many such circuits, they in practically every instance being supplemented by local county and city court. Salaries among such courts and judges vary in sums up to $12,000 per annum. The committee has not made detailed study of the judicial department.

"In the executive department the administrative machinery is divided into approximately 100 units, and is like Joseph's coat, 'of many colors.'

(1) A single official chosen by popular vote. Such officials are directly responsible to the people.

(2) A commission of three or more officials chosen by popular vote. Such commissions are so organized that the people are not permitted to select the entire membership during any one election. Neither the chief executive nor the people have direct control over the activities of such officials and cannot effectively place responsibility for their conduct in administering the laws.

(3) A board or commission composed of heads of several departments. Neither the chief executive nor any other one member of such board or commission has control of its activities or can be held responsible for its conduct.

(4) A single official appointed by the governor. In practically every such instance the term of office extends beyond that of the chief executive, and in no instance is the office held at the pleasure of the governor. Neither the chief executive nor the people have direct or complete control over the activities of such officials.

(5) A single official chosen by a board, or the board itself, that is appointed by the governor. Such boards are so organized that no chief executive during his current term of office has power to appoint a majority of its members. Such officials are not responsible to the people, and the chief executive has no control over their activities.

Opinions Expressed.

"In conference with the various state officials the following opinions prevail:

"The majority of the officials preferred the present organization under which they work and would not commit themselves as to any change.

"A portion of the officials suggested changes which they deemed timely, or expressed an attitude of willing co-operation in any changes the legislature might desire to make.

"And a portion of the officials not only preferred the present organization but also expressed open antagonism to any change in their organization.

"The committee investigations have been received in a most courteous manner by the various state officials. Information requested has, in practically every instance, been furnished promptly and as desired. There has prevailed throughout the entire hearings a spirit of mutual desire to secure for the people the greatest possible benefits from their government.

"A previous summary covers the general findings relating to seven major departments—secretary of state, comptroller general, tax commissioner, commissioner of revenue, treasury department, attorney general and state auditor.

"Georgia's educational activities are under the control of one citizen elected by the people (the superintendent of education), and at least 27 separate and distinct boards and at least two commissions. The two commissions (the state school book commission and the illiteracy commission) and two of the boards (the state board of education and state board of vocational education) and the state superintendent of education have charge of the public, grammar and high school work. The other 25 boards have charge of the public higher educational work and special agricultural college work.

"In the grammar and high school department there is strong sentiment for a revised school code for governing the entire conduct of the department. There was discussion as to the advisability of merging the entire control of the common and high schools under one head. Three plans have been suggested:

"1. A state board of education either appointed or elected by popular vote, which board would appoint the state superintendent of education.

"2. A state superintendent of education elected as at present with all the powers and duties of the boards and commissions merged into the one office.

"3. A state superintendent of education elected as at present. And a state board of education either elected or appointed and acting in an advisory capacity.

Extension Work.

"The state superintendent of education advises of extension work done under his supervision through appropriations made to the woman's college at Milledgeville. This is suggested as inadvisable. He also suggests that the state discontinue its appropriation to the education department for summer school work.

"Georgia's 25 boards which govern its colleges and agricultural and mechanical schools are already famous. Heads of some of these institutions candidly advised the committee that the maneuverings of the heads of these institutions were largely responsible for Georgia's present unbalanced budget. The chancellor of the University of Georgia advises of an organization composed of officials of the various institutions for the purpose of obtaining from the legislature the greatest possible appropriations for the university system.

"There is divided opinion among the institutions as to changes in these departments. There is pronounced opposition by heads of several major institutions to any proposed changes.

"One thing appears evident—Georgia's higher educational system is at present in a chaotic condition. It would appear that a centralized governing body modeled along similar lines as that governing the grammar and high school department would be the first logical step in systematizing this work. There are several plans suggested. Among them are:

"1. A superintendent of higher education elected by popular vote.

"2. A governing board either chosen by popular vote or appointed by the governor.

Consolidation Urged.

"There are two experiment stations governed as independent units by boards. It is suggested that their work be consolidated with the department of agriculture, the university system or the public educational system.

"There are numerous state institutions governed by separate boards and commissions. Among them are the state hospital, training school for girls and boys, schools for deaf and blind, Confederate Soldiers' home, school for mental defectives and tuberculosis sanatorium. These various boards operate as independent units except the last two named above are under the state board of health.

"Among the suggestions for co-ordinating these institutions are:

"1. A board for governing public institutions. Said board either elected by popular vote or appointed by the governor.

"2. A merging of various institutions under departments with single heads and doing similar work, and the abolition of the present board.

"The department of agriculture is governed by two agencies, the commissioner of agriculture elected by popular vote and the state board of entomology. Many features of the work of this department have been brought to the attention of the committee. There seems to be widespread interest in its activities.

Plans Suggested.

"Among suggested plans for co-ordinating the work of this department are:

"(1) Merging the work of the commissioner of agriculture under one head elected by popular vote.

"(2) Merging the work under one head appointed by the governor.

"(3) Abolition of board and department.

"The highway department is composed of a board of three members appointed by the governor. The powers of this board are broad, and is suggested that they be more closely defined through proper legislation.

"It has a large sum of money at its disposal to be spent in building and maintaining the state highway system. It is suggested that this department be given supervision of all public building programs of the state.

"This department, as well as other smaller ones, has a custom of drawing its funds from the state treasury before they are actually needed. It is suggested that this is a dangerous practice. The state treasurer is held responsible for public funds and it would appear that they should be left in his custody until actually needed for disbursement.

"Numerous plans have been suggested for a reorganization of this department. They vary from a one-man department, this official being elected by the people, to a commission of ten, one from each congressional district and appointed by the governor.

"The banking department is headed by one citizen appointed by the governor. This department has sudation of closed banks. Its activities dation of closed banks. Its activties are of widespread interest and involve huge sums of money. It is shown that collection costs run about 16 per cent of total collected, plus considerable fees paid to local attorneys.

"There seems to be no organized system for employment of necessary legal help to this department. There has been but little comment regarding a change in manner of selecting the head of this department. However, there have been suggestions that the department be abolished.

Printing Department.

"The printing department is under a single official appointed by the governor. This department is supposed to have charge of purchasing all stationery and printing for the entire state. The head of this department advises the discontinuance of the annual report system of each state agency. He suggests one consolidated report of all departments by the state auditor.

"He also suggests that each such agency make a detailed annual report to be filed with the secretary of state and the governor.

"According to his report, numerous officials are ignoring the law requiring that this department do all the purchasing and printing, the law not having sufficient strength to force their obedience. There have been few suggestions as to changing the method of selecting the head of this department or changing it in any manner.

"There are numerous departments relating to veterans of wars. It is suggested that these departments should be co-ordinated under one head either appointed by the governor or elected by the people.

"Georgia's health work has unlimited possibilities and is of direct importance to every citizen. It would, therefore, seem advisable that this department head be placed under direct public responsibility. At present he is entirely removed from such responsibility by being chosen by a board which is appointed by the governor in such manner as to be almost a self-perpetuating body. It is suggested that the head of this department be either chosen by the people or appointed by the governor and that the board be abolished.

Duplicate Work Cited.

"Georgia's welfare work and prison work seem to be closely allied. There have been suggestions that these works, which duplicate each other to a degree, and in some instances come in conflict with health work, be merged into one department under direct responsibility either to the people or to the chief executive.

"There are 14 examining boards in Georgia which are each a government unto themselves. It would appear that they should be co-ordinated under one responsible head, giving the people a direct contact with their activities.

"The present commissioner of commerce and labor and industrial commissioner is elected by popular vote. There are two members of the industrial commission who are appointed. It is suggested that only four states elect these officials.

"The securities commission and insurance commissioner seem to do work closely allied with that of the banking department. This seems strong probability that this work can easily be merged into one department.

"The public service commission regulates public utilities. There are five members elected by popular vote in such manner that a majority is never elected in one year. It is suggested that department controlling matters of such vital importance to the people should be placed under direct public responsibility either by having the entire membership elected at one time or having the membership appointed by the governor.

"The work of the fish and game department, forestry department, geological department and other similar departments seem to deal chiefly with the natural resources of the state and would thus appear to be closely allied. It is suggested as feasible and desirable to co-ordinate these departments under one head directly responsible to the people, to be selected by popular vote or appointed by the governor.

"There are numerous other minor departments, some of which do not now function. It is suggested that they be either abolished or co-ordinated.

"Numerous charges against various departments and officials have been made to the committee by citizens of the state. There have also been numerous suggestions of a general nature regarding changes, leading to economy and simplicity in government. In each instance the committee has investigated the charges as fully as was practicable. The information has been filed with the committee for study in formulating its report to the general assembly as provided in the resolution under which it functions."

Egypt to Spend $120,000,000 On Water Control in Country

New Irrigation Project Will Supply Moisture to More Than 1,245,600 Acres of Highly Fertile Land.

BY JOHN F. SINCLAIR.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Egypt is planning to spend over $120,000,000 in water control. This work, which will closely follow the recommendations of an international commission appointed to study the problem, involves reinforcing the Nile barrages, heightening the Assuan dam, the construction of a new dam at Gebel-Aulia above Khartoum and the extension of the present irrigation system. This latter development will afford perennial water supply to more than 1,245,600 acres of highly fertile land.

It is interesting to note that the new dam being constructed in Abyssinia, which will control the flow of the White Nile, a tributary of the Nile itself, plays an important part in Egypt's irrigation projects. The starting of this dam was long delayed by international complications and the rival competition of various engineering firms in Europe. Finally, the White Corporation, of New York city, secured the contract and the work was begun shortly afterward.

RADIO PROBLEM FACES COMMISSION

Again the question rises, what can the federal radio commission do with Dr. John R. Brinkley, the Kansas country doctor, who by means of his own radio station, almost elected himself governor of that state at the last election. Although his name was not printed on the ballot, 182,000 voters took the trouble to write it on their ballots.

When the federal radio commission refused to renew Dr. Brinkley's license to operate station KFKS, at Milford, Kan., because of his persistence in broadcasting medical advice over the radio, he crossed the Mexican border and is now building a huge 800,000-watt station.

It is believed that the doctor now will attempt to carry on a political campaign in Kansas from Mexico, thus defying the federal radio commission's orders.

Dr. Brinkley's future plans will be watched in the western part of the United States with intense interest.

BETTER METAL PLATE FOUND IN TUNGSTEN

Professor Colin Garfield Fink, who is responsible for the chromium plated metal placed on motor cars now, has perfected a new wrinkle by plating with tungsten. According to Professor Fink, American automobile hardware will shine brighter, wear longer, and fight off corrosives longer than the Prent chromium luster.

Tungsten is harder than most metals, has a high melting point—2,974 degrees Fahrenheit—and the only things that bite into it are nitric acid and hot hydroxide solutions. The electro-plating process just worked out by Professor Fink can deposit the metal on brass, copper, iron, zinc, or carbon. It is certain to prove an important innovation in automobile manufacture.

Professor Fink's researches at Columbia University deal with both the past and the present. Those dealing with the past have won him gratitude and renown among archeologists. When metal statuary and implements are dug up in the odd corners of the world, they are usually covered with a sort of "rust" or coating of oxides due to weathering, etc. Professor Fink then douses them in an electrolytic solution and out they come, shining like new.

MILLIONAIRE ACCUSED IN PLANE LIQUOR RAID

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—(AP)—E. P. Halliburton, Los Angeles and Oklahoma millionaire oil man, was arrested today and later released by customs officials who seized his $65,000 transport plane which they said contained 10 cases of liquor.

The oil man's pilot, Frank Glennan, also was detained for questioning concerning ownership of the liquor, but likewise released. Charles Saltar, acting customs collector, said the plane would be held pending a decision on whether charges would be filed against Halliburton.

The arrests were made by agents who searched the luxuriously furnished aircraft upon its arrival at municipal airport from El Paso, Texas.

Henry H. Richmond and James C. Halliburton, members of the party aboard the plane, were questioned but not held. Mrs. Vida C. Halliburton, wife of the oil man, accompanied him to the federal building.

She asserted if there was liquor aboard "The Cementer," her husband knew nothing of it. Other members of the party concurred in her statement.

Saltar said the seizure resulted from "inter-office information" wired to Los Angeles from an unnamed city near the international border. He refused to divulge other information.

HEARING ON MONDAY FOR ALLEGED BIGAMIST

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 6.—(AP)—J. D. O'Sullivan, who recently was returned here from Knoxville, Tenn., to face a bigamy charge, will be given a preliminary hearing Monday morning, Peace Justice R. E. Copeland announced today.

O'Sullivan, who claims to be an inventor, obtained a license to marry Miss Louise O'Quinn here April 2.

J. J. O'Quinn, father of the girl, who brought the bigamy charges, contends O'Sullivan has another wife now living in Atlanta. O'Sullivan has denied the charge.

O'Sullivan said he met Miss O'Quinn when he attempted to sell a large clock, which he claims to have invented, to the Bank of Hazelhurst, where the girl was employed.

PARK HEAD URGES VACATIONS IN U. S.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(UP)—With the approach of the summer vacation season, Horace M. Albright, director of the National Park Service, today submitted a report to President Hoover recommending that the American people "find pleasure by spending their vacation in the United States."

"I believe," Albright said, "if they realized the attractions of our great parks and the facilities we offer, ever-increasing numbers of our people would take advantage of them."

A vacation in the national parks, Albright reported to the president, can be arranged to "fit any pocketbook."

The last two years, the park director said, have seen an unusual growth in the park system, with large additions in every section of the country.

BAN ON CO-EDS URGED BY RUTGERS TRUSTEES

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 6.—(AP)—A trustee committee today recommended to 600 alumni of Rutgers University that classes be kept non-coeducational. The report concerned the relations of the university to the New Jersey College for Women.

Labor Defends Dole as Salvation From Revolt; Writer Finds It Vicious

Herewith the fifth and sixth of a series of articles on the dole, written after several weeks of investigation in Great Britain. The series presents an unprecedented discussion of the dole, and an analysis of its disadvantages and its benefits.

BY CYRIL ARTHUR PLAYER.

LONDON, June 6.—Before long there will be a general election in Britain. The issue will be, once more, the solution of unemployment. But whereas on former occasions there has been no visible solution other than to keep alive the army of the impoverished, today there are emerging from experience sound ideas.

It is the task of the parties to seize these ideas and fit them to their respective political creeds. For whereas the issue of unemployment has long been non-political, even if not so recognized, it is not yet non-party.

If it were non-party, there might be better hope for a solution effectively applied. Therefore, the dim and swiftly crushed suggestion of a statutory commission which would automatically be free from parliamentary interference remains something to think about. At present it is theoretically simple for the authorities to deny benefit to an apparently workshy applicant; but it is only too practically simple for a member of parliament to "make it a case" for question in the house of commons.

All parties agree that unemployment is a state problem, that unemployment insurance is both workable and necessary. But where the conservatives take the long view that employment benefit should be at a minimum and unemployment itself eradicated or sensibly diminished by quasi-protection, and where liberals would, rejecting the quasi-protection, meet unemployment by demanding work for benefit, labor by its very essence has to take the short view and say: "Feed them now!"

The long view is sound, but the short view is human. And the short view, with all its defects and inevitable abuses, has saved this country from revolution. I have testimony to prove it.

The war began in 1914. This is 1931. Children born in 1914 are now approaching their 17th year. Children too young to comprehend the war even when it ended are now in the early twenties. Many of them have known nothing but an era of impoverishment, of underprivilege, of miserably insufficient rations, or none but home-made pleasure, and there is no work for them. That is serious.

Something, at any cost, must be done to keep at least a flicker in these hundreds of thousands of young men and women who are growing up in a false and demoralizing atmosphere; something, at any cost, must be done for the homes in which these youngsters are raised. The methods are uneconomic and the treasury is in the red? What of it? Sooner the treasury in the red than a generation in jail for thievery and vagabondage, or in the grave from starvation.

That is the short view. Labor takes it.

Official View.

Here is the official labor viewpoint:

The country will never get away from a system of unemployment insurance, but it must find a right financial basis. Sickness insurance could be based on known risks, because of preceding data of the sick benefit (friendly) societies. Unemployment insurance is sheer risk. This must be worked out on the ground of insurance. The ups and down of trade have not yet been sufficiently charted. Not until this decade have people studied trade in relation to unemployment. In many European countries, including Germany especially, unemployment has come to stay.

It is a question of perfecting the system to find methods to cover the risk. Unemployment insurance is necessary for three reasons, labor holds, presenting those reasons as follows:

1. The human reason, that the awful shadow of what's going to happen when the job stops should be mitigated.

2. Socially speaking, it is bad for trade and bad for industry to have this rise and fall in the standard of living. After workers have been submerged it is hard, later, to find first-rate men.

3. Relation to modern industry, mechanization is replacing human labor. A new distribution for incomes earned by machines is needed to make certain the level of the consuming power in the community. "In Great Britain we have weathered the storm of depression with less suffering to our people than has any other country in the world."

Government Doing Share.

The labor government has done more than fulfill its contract, and is paying those who have failed to keep up contribution. When unemployment started there was a certain period of relief for a certain period of payment, but that proved inadequate. "If we threw people on the poor law (local relief) it would be more expensive, and would bankrupt the local authorities." The burden has been taken off the rate-payer and placed on the taxpayer.

Unemployment insurance, it is agreed, might be difficult to apply in a big country like the United States. Such a system there would have to be on state lines. The United Kingdom has a fine system of labor exchanges, through which the unemployed can seek work. Unemployment insurance could not be administered without it.

The labor exchange, which never has been developed to its full usefulness, is an integral part of the insurance scheme, and has existed ever since the beginning of the plan. Its enlargement and effectiveness, as a local barometer of unemployment and a local test in eligibility for benefit, are a current theme for discussion.

As to abuses of the system, there is in any system a fringe of people who will sink lower down. There is always someone who would cheat the charities. But labor authority would not estimate the abuse at more than one-half of 1 per cent, an estimate with which the writer disagrees. The administrative system checks abuses and makes prosecutions. When a man receives relief to which he is not entitled, says the government, the government gets it back when he goes to work.

Idleness Greater.

At present the spaces of compulsory idleness are longer than contemplated when the fund was established. The fund is in debt now because of the excessive compulsory idlness. Therefore, the community was called on to keep unemployed workers in a state of physical fitness.

The 1930 act, sponsored by Miss Bondfield, made alterations in the existing provisions, and others are yet to be made. There is a difficulty in determining the justice of the claim put up by married women, who urge that they earned a certain income before marriage, are still capable of earning, and, therefore, failing a job, are entitled to the dole.

If a job is offered a man and he doesn't take it, he does not get his benefit. Married women can often satisfy legal conditions for benefit, but should they have it?

For instance, an insured woman married. She says she intends to go on working. You have to offer her a suitable job and she must refuse it before she is ineligible for relief. When a job is offered her, she may say she cannot take it because she has to be home to get her husband's dinner. The court upholds her in this legal point.

What regulations will enable the government to put the right sort of test for that kind of case? The various shades of political opinion are agreed to the necessity of reforming this abuse, but there is not agreement regarding many other things.

Debating Problems.

A royal commission is now debating all these problems. When it reports, Miss Bondfield will bring in amendments to the existing law correcting the difficulties. It is expected that an amending bill will be introduced in July.

Among the benefits derived from unemployment insurance, the labor government points to the fact that there is no unrest in Great Britain in the sense the word is used on the continent. The present system has saved many people from much suffering. A distressed area gets instant relief. This is a national responsibility, and this sense of responsibility has saved the situation.

Even the abuses have their redeeming side. For instance, the cotton trade has been saved from complete ruin by insurance for part-time workers. In the cotton industry recipients are fully paid-up members of the fund who are continuously paying into the fund. They would go back for a full week if they could get it. However, the government may not be able to continue absolutely in that relief. The government regards many of the tales of abuses as exaggerated.

In the distressed areas there are boys of 18 or 19 who never have been able to get steady work. The government tries to get them into occupational centers and to get them occupations.

The progress of science has taken away work from men and has given it to machines. Today, in harvesting, one or two men can manage hundreds of acres. The system of harvesting today does not provide a community, a place for families or homes. The 20th century revolution of processes is greater than that of the 19th century. People do not realize that they are living in the midst of a revolution, a revolution of thought, processes and organization.

This for the economic side of affairs. What of the people and their lives outside the balance sheet? The labor government believes there is a spirit of co-operation from many sources which may flower in a better civilization. The hard labor which has been placed on the shoulders of men shall be lifted to a large extent and they will have leisure to develop creative powers.

Education, science and the arts, as the handmaidens of labor, may build up a wonderful civilization. The work of the world can be done without a slave class. Side by side with social responsibility there is developing a love for art, amateur theatricals, walking clubs, amateur bands—the amateur spirit developing in the people. The world may see a recrudescence of culture in the people.

ARTICLE SIX.

What is poverty, real poverty which has nothing? Whose bread, margarine and tea come from the state, doled out in pittances? Poverty that is not the shabby badge of withered years but the dismal rags of childhood, youth, vigorous manhood and womanhood? How do these people live?

It is said that the condition of workers in Britain generally, even with the depression, has improved since the war. Yet in some few areas, particularly South Wales and Durham, poverty is acute and visible. South Wales has nothing but coal. Lancashire, Northumberland, the Midlands and Scotland have other industries. Not so in South Wales and Durham. In South Wales entire townships have become almost derelict. Even shops, by the street length, have closed. So sharp is the distress that there have been special relief funds.

It seems that the most naked regions have the most children; they swarm over the barren dumps of Durham and crowd the soiled back yards and alleys of South Wales. Children, children, children, hungry, happy, dirty, idle, all from empty homes and inheritors of unemployment.

The parents of many of them are on the dole. A large number have been unemployed since 1926, some even longer. A man receiving unemployment benefit gets $4.25 a week for himself, $2.25 for his wife and 50 cents for each of the children. Out of this, unless he manages to augment his income in some way, he must feed his family, pay his rent, which varies from about $1.35 a week to $3.75 a week; pay perhaps 6 cents for medical care for his family (the man himself is taken care of by the health insurance fund which he pays into when in employment), and perhaps 50 or 75 cents a week for burial insurance for himself and his family.

However, even with the help of the few small allotments available in the mining areas and the occasional shillings that may result from raiding the tips and the outcroppings, the fare of the family on the dole is pretty meager. I asked one 8-year-old boy what he had for meals. "Bread and butter (margarine) and jam with tea for breakfast," was the answer, "and bread and butter and tea for supper." He had a good meal at school for dinner. He said his hunger was satisfied after dinner but not after the other meals. Another lad of the same age told of a similar menu, except that he had no jam for breakfast.

Menus Similar.

The menu for breakfast and supper in the dole homes is all very similar—bread, margarine and tea, with sometimes a little jam; for supper, bread, margarine, tea and occasionally cheese. Sometimes that is all there is for dinner, too. At other times the housewife will be able to serve some soup for dinner; again a bit of bacon and potatoes and perhaps some beans.

It is not always possible to tell from looking at a home whether the head of the house is in or out of employment; much depends on the housekeeping ability of the wife. The first home we went into the man had work, but the wife and children were dirty, the home slovenly, dirty, poverty stricken. The second home we entered a young man came to the door. He was covered with coal dust—he had been out prospecting for a bag or two of coal—but the house was spotless and comfortable. A fire was blazing on the hearth, polished brass candlesticks adorned the mantel, and a large loaf of bread reposed on the dining table.

The man was smoking a cigaret. He went to fetch his wife who was, apparently, at a neighbor's, and they told their story. He was 32, although he looked 25. They had five children and he had had only eight weeks' work in four years. The eight weeks' work was in public improvement activities—road-building or cleaning out the river.

Under the dole he received 39 a week. They had five rooms and their rent was $1.50 a week. The man admitted spending 16 cents a week on cigarets, but his wife added defensively that it was the only pleasure he got. Asked whether he ever had a glass of beer, he said: "Only when my father buys it for me." The wife said she had been to see "the pictures" only once in three years.

In Merthyr Tydvil borough the miners' agent said there were 11,000 unemployed, who, with their families, made about half the population dependent on the dole. Hundreds of young men have gone to other parts seeking work. Half the people are said to wear second-hand clothes, and these are peddled in the streets. In Dowlais, part of the Merthyr district, a steel works employing 3,000 men has just shut down. Dowlais is very badly hit and half the shops are closed or boarded up, but a moving picture theater is still running.

Breaks Morale.

Discouragement over unemployment was breaking down the morale of men, according to the agent. He told of one man idle since 1924. In 1924 he owned his home and had something in the bank. He has six children. He was a pipe cutter, which meant that he was extra good at his work. He was proud and had a horror of "going on the parish." In the early days of his unemployment he did not apply for the dole, but used up his savings and then mortgaged his house. Then he went on the dole. Finally benefit was refused him. He came to the miners' agent one day, thoroughly down at the heels and sadly in need of boots. Asked what he was going to do, he shrugged and said he would have to go to the poor relief. The unthinkable had happened and his morale was so shattered that he no longer cared.

The Blaina district was the first to be affected, for the depression began there in 1920. At that time there were seven collieries employing 5,000 miners who lived in Blaina and the surrounding district. Now there is only one colliery working and the peak of employed men since then has been 1,500. There are now between 1,400 and 1,500 men in the colliery.

There is always the historic difficulty of separating the Englishman from his accustomed environment and his usually inherited employment, even though, as in many cases, that employment has forever vanished. The permanent contraction in the mining industry is estimated at 25 per cent, from 1,000,000 workers to 750,000. Efforts are being made to fit this surplus into an expansion of the program for public works on roads, etc.

The district was overburdened with taxation and many of the taxes could not be paid. The welfare guardians paid what they could out of what taxes were paid. Since April, 1930, largely due to Arthur Greenwood, minister of health, there has been a decided improvement in the amount of poor law relief. The former governors of the Bedwellty board had an overdraft of $5,000,000. So impoverished was the area that storekeepers who had been in business 40 years or longer are bankrupt.

Trains Young Men.

The government had established requisition camps and training centers particularly for young men. It sends for a number of young men periodically and asks if they are willing to be sent to these training centers. (Bristol, Dudley, Carshalton, Blackpool, Poole Harbor, near Bournemouth, are some of these.) The youths receive training in brick laying, forestry, painting automobiles, tool-making, etc. However, they are not looked on as being properly trained when they come out! The unions will have none of them, as they are afraid of cheap labor flooding the market, and the young man regards his training with contempt.

The idleness among the youths who have chosen to remain near their homes, or who, after failure elsewhere, have returned, is admittedly demoralizing. There are many youths of 21 and 22 who have never done a stroke of work. In the police court recently two boys were charged with 11 robberies—their crimes a by-product of unemployment.

A 20-year-old boy of fine character said he earned $8 a week driving a haulage engine in a coal mine. He had been working underground since he was 13. He added the following information concerning local conditions:

$9.80 a Week.

The maximum a single man can earn in a mine is $9.80 a week. A married man can earn from about $10 to approximately $17.25. A man on the dole, who has a wife and two children, will receive a little less than $7.50 a week, only about $2.50 less than the minimum wage paid married miners. If he is occupying a house built by the local council, his rent when he is out of employment is dropped from $2.60 a week to $1.35, making the difference still less. Thus many of the married men do not care very much whether they have a job or not.

A distinguished government official, asked by the writer what he would recommend as a solution, said he would do three things:

Spread knowledge of birth control.

Convert most of the pubs saloons into cafes where food would be taken with drink, and dominoes, etc., played.

Provide a place for every slum child to play.

"And after that?" I asked.

"Nothing," he replied.

One man complained that some employers in districts where there is great unemployment make a practice of offering a man in another district work in the expectation that the man will refuse, thus throwing him off the dole. A miners' agent said such attempts had been made but that employers "could not get away with it under a labor government." He added that some time ago in North Wales 5,000 men had been disqualified (off the dole) for not reporting for which which would have employed only 280 men.

This is the unadorned narrative of the view of those on the dole. It shows good points and bad points, and it indicates tendencies of thought, most of them, unfortunately, of a character to cause uneasiness. Side by side with a stout courage which preserves a healthy family in a clean home, through years of want, are the man and family who have let squalor cover them. Even the lad of intelligence, engaged in constructive tasks among his associates, begins to ask himself what this communism is, anyway, and has made up his mind that "no matter what happens" he does not intend to starve . . . and he speculates about riots.

Another point that strikes the visitor is the need among the women for more information about food values, and about varieties in cheap foods. It seems stupid to be feeding little children tea three times a day, although the children who need it have milk twice a day at school.

These unhappy children, inheritors of an empty life, with their makeshift scooters, hoops and kiddie cars, their thin, shabby and so often miserably dirty clothes, and their environment of idleness! Truly, in all this vast and disturbing problem, they stand out as the profound concern for England to ponder. They grow up, under-privileged, under-nourished, in a demoralizing atmosphere of false values, without that stimulating example of proud industry and thrift which is the core of home influence. And rapidly they reach the age when they, too, with this cheap and insufficient preparation, must go out into life and join the army seeking work. But there is nothing for them!

WHITE OPPOSES POWER OPERATION

Council Leader Says Municipal Ownership Means Tax Increase.

Issuing a warning that municipal ownership of utilities in a city of the size of Atlanta would not be feasible and objecting to governmental competition to private businesses, Councilman John A. White, newly appointed member of a special council committee investigating proposals for such operations in Atlanta, Saturday said a move in this direction would mean tax increases.

White's statement came just before the next meeting of the council group slated for 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the city hall, and Chairman John F. Scott, H. Turner Loehr and Ed L. Almand, other members of the committee, scored White's views as untenable.

Mr. White, in his statement, said:

"When the bonds are voted, the electric consumer would have to pay the bill; this would increase tax burdens, and also the city has no water development rights, and most of the electricity throughout the nation is now generated through water developments; our streets would be torn up over a period of several years with a large amount of money involved, with the citizens paying the bill. We all want as low rates on all public utilities as is reasonably possible, and should work to this end, and elect persons to membership on the Public Service commission who will be fair to all concerned.

has consistently conducted such litigation as was necessary in the court. But since the complaining party, for reasons doubtless satisfactory to him, has seen fit to go to the press before suit has been served upon the department, it is felt that the true facts should have equal publicity. Disregarding the motive back of this sensational attack the public should have opportunity to judge for itself the plaintiff's conception of 'bleeding' a bank.

"The press quotes Mr. Williamson as claiming to be the majority stockholder of the closed institution. The records of the banking department do not show that he owns any stock in the bank whatsoever, and no assessment has ever been levied against Mr. Williamson as a stockholder. On the contrary he appears to be a debtor to the bank in the sum of $527.73 and interest. This debt is past due approximately one and one-half years, and within the past few days it was found necessary to file suit against Mr. Williamson to collect this note.

Sale Called "Regular."

"With reference to the sale of the real estate of this bank the facts are that application for the sale of the property was made through the judge of the superior court in regular order and on November 8, 1930, Judge Price Edwards, of the Tallapoosa circuit, passed an order requiring that this property be sold at public outcry 'parcel by parcel, or piece by piece, as the case may be, and then offered in bulk, said sale subject to approval and confirmation as provided by law.' In compliance with this order the property was offered in parcels and then in bulk. When offered in parcels it brought the aggregate sum of $4,980, then all of the property was offered in bulk as required by said order and brought the total sum of $5,500, this being the bid of A. R. Lovvorn and J. P. Mangham. This being the highest bid the sale was confirmed by the court after notice to the bank and the property was sold to Lovvorn and Mangham.

"With reference to the allegations that Mr. Mangham is attempting to perpetuate himself in the position as liquidating agent and that the assets of the bank will be bled white from the payment of his fees the facts are that several months ago when the depositors and creditors were paid 100 per cent, in the interest of the community, Mr. Mangham offered his services to the department free of charge until the bank could collect from the assets in amount sufficient to pay the interest due to depositors. Mr. Mangham is now serving without compensation. The amount due depositors for interest is approximately $3,300. Soon after the closing of the bank in March, 1929, on the urgent insistence of the depositors, stockholders and the banking department, Mr. Mangham reluctantly accepted the appointment as liquidating agent of the bank and undertook this service in the interest of his community rather than for any personal gain. The record that he has made in the liquidation of the bank has amply justified the confidence of those interested.

"The depositors have been paid in full except interest as well as all other creditors of the bank except two small debts for which claims have never been filed. This 100 per cent liquidation has been accomplished at a total cost of $6,580.76 on cash collections of $74,224.27. The ratio of expense to cash collections being about 8 1-2 per cent.

Debts To Be Paid.

"At this time the face value of the remaining assets is $23,487.79 and consists principally of notes and amounts due by the stockholders on the legal assessment.

"From these assets under the law the remaining debts of the bank must be paid and when this has been done, a meeting of the stockholders will be called as required by law and the remaining assets turned over to them if they elect to continue the liquidation for themselves, otherwise the banking department will be required by law to completely wind up the affairs of the bank.

"A proposition has been made to the stockholders several times to pay in the small amount due creditors so that the assets could be surrendered to them. This proposition has been declined by the stockholders on several occasions. If at any time they care to pay the banking department a sum of money which will be sufficient to pay the remaining claims the assets will be turned over to them as soon as the formality of the law can be complied with which will be only a few days."

Mt. Vernon, Indiana, Satisfied With Name

MT. VERNON, Ind., June 5.—(AP)—There may be nothing in a name, but this town's going to stick to "Mt. Vernon."

The citizens rejected a request that the name of their town be changed so as not to conflict with Mount Vernon, Va.

The request came from Mt. Vernon, Wash., whose chamber of commerce suggested that only one place in the country bear the name of Mt. Vernon, in tribute to the first president.

Seven Are Injured In Rum Boat Blast

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—(UP). An old rum runner, recently converted into a police river patrol boat, exploded this afternoon while Director of Public Safety Lemuel B. Schofield was making his final inspection.

The director, Superintendent of Police William B. Mills, Assistant Superintendent Joseph Le Strange, and five patrolmen were thrown into the water and injured.

The blast occurred as the craft left its base at Penn Treaty Park. Assistant Superintendent of Police James Taylor said he saw a sheet of flame spread over the front of the vessel, followed immediately by a roar as the gasoline tank exploded.

CONSUMPTION CUT AS COTTON DROPS

Mill Profits Reduced by Difference Between Raw, Finished Product Prices

BY FRANK F. WELLER

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—It may seem a paradox, but low prices of raw cotton are doing the opposite of stimulating consumption.

Figures compiled by the department of agriculture show that 1,044,194 fewer bales of cotton moved to the mills from August 1, 1930 to June 9, 1931, than during the same period a year earlier.

The situation simply is one in which manufacturers cannot get enough for their products to make operation profitable even if cotton is the cheapest since 1915. As it works out, the knowledge that raw cotton is so low causes the purchasers of yarn and cloth to demand lower prices or limit their orders to bare necessities which in turn narrows the profits of the mills.

Executives of some textile concerns say they are entirely satisfied to keep their machinery running just enough to keep it in good order and to care for their operatives. Buyers in some of the primary dry goods markets are said to be in need of supplies to carry them through the summer but hesitate to place orders until they have more definite assurance of price stability.

The department of agriculture says that with cotton cloth orders diminishing and lower raw material quotations, mills show little incentive to place business. The dry goods market has not been able to resist the lower prices for raw cotton.

It was said improvement in cottton which would give the mills an opportunity to raise their prices, probably would stimulate yarn and cloth buying and move the whole industry up where the trade could get some idea of future business.

Some see the erratic price movements last week with final quotation down only about 3-16 cents a pound for an average price of 7.96 cents on middling 7-8-inch as evidence of strength at low levels. At the high time on June 3, cotton made the largest gain for one day since last December. Much of the upturn was credited to short covering, but it showed the market can advance on setbacks—a condition which traders said would bring the public into the market.

Commission houses, in some instances, were said to be receiving inquiries as to whether or not cotton at present levels was a good investment.

One firm said the only hope the market had was that investment buying on a grand scale would begin. It would lead to mill buying with those which are strongly intrenched financially probably purchasing for a three to five-year supply on all scale-downs.

Secretary Mellon To Sail for Europe

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—Secretary Mellon will sail next week to spend his summer vacation in Europe.

He will go first to England where his son Paul graduates from Clare College at Cambridge University. Later he will go to France where he and his son will join his daughter, Mrs. David Bruce, who has a cottage on the Riviera.

The secretary expects to be away about six weeks.

Nine-Day-Old American Child Of Polish Mother Faces Exile

DENVER, Col., June 6.—(UP)—Nine-day-old Pearl O'Loughlin Piasechi faces deportation to Poland despite the fact she is a citizen of the United States.

Pearl's case is unique, United States Attorney Ralph Carr said today. It isn't any fault of her's that she is to be exiled, but although the attorney general thinks it ought to be possible to find another way out of the problem, he hasn't succeeded yet.

Laura Piasechi, young Russian mother of the child, is a citizen of Poland and was arrested with her husband two years ago after they had entered this country illegally through Canada.

Extended proceedings followed. The husband was deported. The expected arrival of Pearl made it impossible for the deportation order against the mother to be enforced, however.

"Now that the baby has arrived, and is an American citizen, as a result of her birth in this country, we are faced with an unusual problem," Carr told the United Press.

"By sending the mother back to Poland we virtually will deport the child. In so doing we deprive her of rights that are her own by virtue of citizenship. We deport the mother because she is undesirable, and at the same time entrust to the 'undesirable' mother the life of an American citizen.

"But if we force the mother to leave little Pearl in this country we violate the sacred law of parentage."

Pearl was named after Mrs. Pearl O'Loughlin, sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of her 10-year-old stepdaughter, Leona. When the young Russian mother-to-be was placed in jail one of her cellmates was Mrs. O'Loughlin.

When the child was born, the mother told nurses, "I'm so glad it's a girl. I wish it to be named Pearl O'Loughlin, after the finest woman I ever met."

The child was born May 28. The next day the postman delivered a crudely written note to Pearl O'Loughlin at the county jail inviting her to the christening.

J. J. HAYNIE DIES AT SOLDIERS' HOME

J. J. Haynie, 92, died Saturday at the Soldiers' Home here after a brief illness. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. J. A. Baggett, of Atlanta, a son, J. P. Haynie, of Jacksonville, Fla. Fair, Warm Weather Forecast for Week

Fair and warm weather, fine for swimming but hard on crops because of the long lapse of rainfall, will be Atlanta's lot today, C. F. von Herrmann, United States meteorologist, said Saturday.

Mr. von Herrmann expects temperatures to range between 72 and 91 degrees. "As long as the night temperatures remain in the 70s we can say that summer is here," the weatherman said. Saturday's minimum was 73, and the mercury hit 90 during the day.

The weekly forecast calls for mostly fair weather, and there are no indications of any relief from the dry spell, the weatherman said. Rain is needed all over the state, for crops are beginning to suffer and will be injured unless rain comes along soon, he added.

Beaman and Weekes Debate Need for New Constitution

Member of Snelling Committee Favors Scrapping of Document; Senator-Elect Opposed to Change.

Urging a constitutional convention, designed to "place more trust into our legislative bodies and our governor," Henry A. Beaman, member of a committee appointed by Chancellor Charles M. Snelling to prepare a paper for study of the state constitution, Friday at a meeting in Decatur advocated changes in fundamental law. Senator-elect John Wesley Weekes, of the thirty-fourth Georgia district, now a member of the house, opposed the calling of a convention.

The two speakers debated the question before the DeKalb County League of Women Voters.

Reviewing the repeated warnings of leaders of the convention of 1877, Beaman said too many restrictions are placed about the authority of legislatures and governors in the present document. He cited opinions of former Governors Joseph Brown, Thomas W. Hardwick, Clifford M. Walker, John M. Slaton and Hugh Dorsey in support of his contentions, adding that Governor-elect Richard B. Russell can do much for Georgia if the restrictions are removed.

Senator-elect Weekes held that the present document has stood these many years, that it has been the salvation of Georgia and that even though some changes are needed the whole "ship of state should not be junked."

"It is useless to go on amending and amending a time-worn instrument," Beaman said. "We should remodel the whole construction, ripping out the bad and placing good with good.

"The constitution of 1877 was written in distrust and many of its provisions were contemplated to protect certain interests. There is no need for that distrust at this time. We should have a document, modern, protecting the fundamental interests of the people and leaving to the Georgia assemblies and executives the matter of making additional statutes which may be needed.

Scoring what he termed the "modernism" tendency, Weekes said, "Georgia has not been neglected in this trend toward modernism.

"There is a group who would tell us that the cause of our economic and social ills in Georgia is our old and worn-out constitution," he told the gathering. "I actually heard one very brilliant Georgian say that our lack of increase in population was caused by the constitution.

"None of the proponents of a constitutional convention can successfully point out more than four or five changes that should be made in our present instrument. If these changes are needed, make them, but do not scrap the whole fabric to get out one weak thread."

Beaman paid a tribute to Dr. Sam W. Small, from whose notes of the convention of 1877 he read many of his arguments.

American Waiter Inherits Estate And Polish Title

BERKELEY, Calif., June 6.—(AP). Karl E. Von Jankowski, 35, waiter, clerk, and certified public accountant, said today he had learned he now is Baron Von Jankowski, successor to a Polish title and extensive estates near Warsaw.

Sent to America in 1914 by Baron Felix Von Jankowski, his father, to complete his education, young Von Jankowski could not trace the movements of his parents or brothers and sisters after the World War began.

Forced to support himself he secured odd jobs, worked as waiter, finally qualified as a public accountant, and married.

Recently his wife asked aid of the Polish Red Cross at Warsaw. Tuesday a cable arrived. It read "Happy you live" and was signed by Marin, his eldest sister. Today letters followed saying his parents were dead and he had succeeded to the title and estates.

Von Jankowski plans to leave for Europe immediately.

BOOK CONCERN MOVES INTO NEW QUARTERS

Southern Book Concern, Inc., will open Monday morning in its new quarters at 100 Whitehall street, two doors south of the former location, it is announced by J. C. Gavan, president.

J. C. Gavan.

The company is one of the oldest of its kind in Atlanta and has long enjoyed wide popularity. In addition to Mr. Gavan, the officers are: Alex J. Rozetta, vice president, and Charles Rozetta, secretary and treasurer. For many years the concern has operated at 103 Whitehall street.

In its new building, where it will have the advantage of a first and second floor, 20 by 175 feet, Mr. Gavan states that his concern will continue to handle books, stationery and office supplies, as in former days. However, the company, with its enlarged facilities, has been enabled to add new specialty lines, and will be in position to serve parties, banquets, conventions and children's frolics, etc., with many new and clever ideas and favors. This new line will take up considerable of the entire second floor space, where also will be carried the picture line, and where picture framing will be continued as usual.

One of the features of the Southern Book Concern in the past, and which will be continued, has been the expert work rendered by Charles Rozetta as a fixer of fountain pens. He is perhaps one of the best-known men in the city on the repair of any make of fountain pens, although the company carries the Waterman pen.

"We are very proud of our new store," said Mr. Gavan. "Everything has been fixed up new and bright, clean and fresh, and with our two big floors, with something like a total of 4,500 feet of floor space, we hope to be able to serve the Atlanta public even better than we have in the past. I am still quite partial to Whitehall street as one of the solid, staple thoroughfares of the south side. Figures show that more than half of Atlanta's population live on what is known as the south side and while we always have a cordial welcome to north side patrons, at the same time we realize and appreciate that the south-siders are among thousands of our good patrons."

ENSIGN M'D. MOSES WILL VISIT FATHER

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 6.—Ensign McDonald Moses, of Columbus, Ga., Naval academy graduate with the class of 1931, has been granted leave of absence to go to San Francisco to join his father, Captain Stanford E. Moses, retired naval officer, formerly of Columbus, Ga., before reporting to the U. S. S. New York for duty on June 20.

Ensign Moses won his presidential appointment to the academy through competitive examination. His father was appointed to the academy from the fourth congressional district of Georgia, graduating in 1892.

Mrs. Moses, wife of Captain Moses, is the former Agnes Spencer, a sister of the late Samuel Spencer, who organized the Southern railway system. Both families are prominently connected in Georgia.

360 Georgia Tech Seniors To Receive Degrees Monday

Dr. L. O. Bricker Will Make Baccalaureate Address Today; Three To Get Honorary Degrees.

Three hundred and sixty members of the 1931 graduating class of the Georgia School of Technology will receive their degrees in commencement exercises beginning this morning with the baccalaureate address by Dr. L. O. Bricker and the presentation of diplomas at 10 o'clock Monday morning by Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of the institution.

Conferring of honorary degrees on three of the nation's leaders in business and the awarding of master's degrees will feature the commencement exercises Monday morning which will be preceded by the dedication of the new Daniel Guggenheim aeronautics building at 9 o'clock.

Honorary degrees will be bestowed upon Howard Earle Coffin, of Sapelo Island, motor car manufacturer and Georgia builder; Harry E. Guggenheim, business leader and present ambassador to Cuba, and George Gordon Crawford, outstanding Tech alumnus, now president of the Jones-Laughlin Steel Corporation, of Pittsburgh, and a former president of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company.

Dr. Brittain said Saturday night that Ambassador Guggenheim had notified him that he would be unable to attend the exercises. The degree will be conferred and forwarded to him. Mr. Coffin and Mr. Crawford will be present to receive their degrees.

The students who are members of the graduating class will march in a body to the Peachtree Christian church at 10 o'clock this morning to hear the address of Dr. Bricker. The pastor, one of the south's leading ministers, will be assisted by the Rev. Robert W. Burns.

At the dedication of the Guggenheim building, leaders in the city and state will participate.

Commencement Speaker.

The commencement address will be delivered by Edward Pearson Warner, editor of Aviation. H. H. Caldwell, registrar of the school, will announce honors and prizes for the year.

In addition to the honorary degrees, the following will receive diplomas:

FOX PAROLE FIGHT BEING PLANNED

Protest against a parole to Phillip E. Fox, former Ku Klux Klan editor, serving a life term in prison for killing Capt. William S. Coburn, will be made both by the Solicitor-general of Fulton county and William Schley Howard, representing the Coburn family.

Assistant Solicitor-general Ed. A. Stephens said Saturday that the State Prison commission would be asked to fix a date for hearing the protest. Judge E. L. Rainey, chairman of the commission, received a wire Saturday from Stephen N. Harris, of Savannah, a friend of the Coburn family, "most earnestly and vigorously protesting" the parole.

"Justice," the wire said, "demands that we be heard through our attorney, William Schley Howard. Please permit us to present our protest before making a decision."

Fox shot Capt. Coburn, who was attorney for a rival Klan faction, in the latter's office here in November, 1923.

in criminal court here Monday on the first of four indictments returned in connection with the operations of Caldwell & Co. and the Bank of Tennessee, of which he was president before their failure.

The first two indictments charge fraudulent breach of trust. The others alleged unlawful receiving of deposits in an insolvent bank.

Caldwell also is under federal indictment in the eastern district of Tennessee. He is alleged in that true bill to have been a party to a conspiracy to violate the national banking laws in connection with the operation of the Holston Union National bank of Knoxville.

Governor Horton pointed out that Caldwell is under bonds totaling $115,000 to answer state and federal indictments in Tennessee.

"To grant the demand for extradition," the governor said, "might cause Tennessee to lose jurisdiction of the person of Mr. Caldwell and might release the bail given for his appearance in the state and federal courts.

"I, therefore, decline to grant the demand for extradition at this time."

The $25,000 bond was signed by Meredith Caldwell, a brother, and James E. Caldwell, the father.

Atlanta Students at University of Georgia Are Honored By Election to Campus Offices and Membership in Clubs

BY TURNER M. HIERS.

ATHENS, Ga., June 6.—Included in Atlanta's more than 140 students at the University of Georgia, are several who recently have been honored by election to campus offices, membership in various honorary and professional clubs, and selection for various athletic awards.

In the Atlanta group are 24 candidates for degrees at the commencement exercises to be held June 17, when the 130th session of the oldest chartered state university in the United States closes. Twenty are to receive bachelor degrees, and the remaining four, master degrees.

Atlantans recently honored are: Miss Ruth Norris, president of the University of Georgia Women's Athletic Association; George Longino, College Park, best-drilled cadet; John B. Withers, president of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity; Joe McGee, Decatur, president of the 1932 senior class; W. Carroll Latimer, president of Phi Delta Phi, international legal fraternity, and the Gridiron Club; J. P. Allen Jr., award for best jumping for men in the recent University of Georgia R. O. T. C. horse show; Miss Lessie Bailey, who won Wilcox prize of $50 in French; Alfred E. Garber, selected for membership in Beta Gamma Sigma, honorary scholastic commercial fraternity and student assistant to Professor M. H. Bryan in the school of commerce; Miss Esther Anderson, Decatur, senior athletic award of the University of Georgia Women's Athletic Association, highest honor in the organization, which she also has served as president during the past school year; Joe I. Chandler, member varsity baseball squad; Miss Hilda Burnette, placed in Pandora beauty contest for past two years; John T. Carlton, Decatur, president of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity, was editor-in-chief of the Red and Black, campus weekly newspaper, during his junior year, and was one of the managers of the annual military ball; "Pap" Terrell, member of the varsity basketball squad, and president of the Sigma Nu fraternity for next year; Miss Katherine Bryan, membership in the Zodiac and Pioneer clubs, honorary for women, and Captain Herbert Maffett and Armin Waugh, of the 1930-31 football team; Captain Cliff McGaughey, of the 1931 baseball squad, and Fred I. Hodgson, of the swimming team, have received letters for participation in sports.

Candidates and Degrees.

The 24 candidates and the degrees they are to receive are: Bachelor of Arts—Nathan C. Brandon, Robert Vincent Conneral and William Crenshaw Palmour, of College Park.

Bachelor of Science in Commerce—Alfred Edward Garber, James Gordon Hardy, Herbert Sidney Maffett, Clifford H. McGaughey (of College Park), Thomas Hope Reeder, Egan Greer Skinner Jr. and Armin C. Waugh.

Bachelor of Science in Forestry—William P. David and James Hamilton Rasnake; Bachelor of Science in Agriculture—Major Harold Bishop; Doctor of Veterinary Medicine—John S. Lide; Bachelor of Arts in Education—Miss Sarah Bates Osteen; Bachelor of Arts in Journalism—John T. Carlton, of Decatur; Bachelor of Science in Home Economics—Misses Susan W. Everett and Marry Williams; Bachelor of Science in Physical Education—Miss Esther Anderson, of Decatur; Bachelor of Science in Pharmacy—Milton M. Lebos; Master of Arts—Malcolm Lockhart, Decatur, and Miss Martha Louise Worham; Bachelor of Laws—Hugh R. Aderhold, East Point, and Nathan Brady Hughes.

Thirteen Atlantans were honored recently at the second annual honor's day program, for meritorious scholastic work. They are: Misses Lessie Bailey, Leila E. Crist, Wilma G. Cleveland, Katherine Bryan, Madge Anna Stewart, Celestia Dunlap and Thomas H. Lokey, Clinton S. Sheffield, Hamilton M. Williams, Ben D. Watkins, Charles Stone, Charles K. Howard and Hugh C. Mason.

The "Gate City" was represented on the 1930-31 glee club by Malcolm Lockhart, Decatur, president; Atwood Whittington, E. Blair Proctor, Phinizy Calhoun, Harold Williams, Alex Gaines, Bill Alden, of Decatur, and Jack W. Goldberg.

I. E. SCHILLING DIES AT MIAMI HOME

MIAMI, Fla., June 6.—(AP)—Irwin Edward Schilling, 47, president of the I. E. Schilling Company, Miami building material concern and former member of the state highway commission, died at his residence here today after an illness of six months.

A native of Green Bay, Wis., Mr. Schilling came to Miami 20 years ago. He was a director of the First National bank and active in civic activities here.

He was appointed a member of the state highway commission by former Governor Cary A. Hardee in 1921 and served eight years, resigning in 1929 owing to press of personal business.

He is survived by his widow, two sons, Louis and Jerome, all of Miami, and a brother, W. C. Schilling, Green Bay, Wis.

WILLIAM ALLEN ERWIN JR.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., June 6.—(AP)—William Allen Erwin Jr., 35, secretary and treasurer of the Durham Cotton Mills at Durham, N. C., died of lobar pneumonia in a hospital here last night.

He had been ill about a week. His wife and personal physician from Durham were with him. Erwin's father, now in California, is president of the mills.

The body was to be sent this afternoon to Durham.

PROF. EDWARD HART.

EASTON, Pa., June 6.—(AP)—Edward Hart, Ph. D., LL. D., professor emeritus of chemistry at Lafayette College, a member of the faculty of that institution since 1874, died today. He was 78.

DR. E. G. WILLIAMS.

RICHMOND, Va., June 6.—(AP)—Dr. Ennion G. Williams, Virginia state health commissioner since 1908, died at his home this afternoon.

His death followed failure to rally from an apoplectic stroke suffered the night of May 19 and ended the career of a pioneer in the field of preventive medicine and the oldest state health officer in length of service in the United States.

Although he had been in failing health for several months, Dr. Williams, who was 57 years old, continued to actively direct his department until May 19.

Born January 31, 1874, Dr. Williams was the son of John Langborne Williams, prominent Richmond capitalist and businessman. A brother, John Skelton Williams, was president of the Seaboard Air Line railway and comptroller of the currency during the administration of President Wilson. Another brother, Langborne M. Williams, was head of a Richmond investment house until his death a few weeks ago.

New York Pastor Inaugurates 8 O'Clock Service for Golfers

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—The Sunday squabble that disrupts the peace of nearly every home where the head of the house would rather play golf than go to church has been settled in at least one congregation.

The Rev. Mr. Arthur Stanley, pastor of the White Plains Congregational church, has inaugurated a special 8 o'clock service for golfers at which sports garb, including knickers, blazers, hobnailed shoes and caps, will be the accepted thing.

Not only has this mandate pleased the members of his congregation, the women included, but it has received the approbation of ministers, priests and rabbis from Fifth avenue to Long Island urban communities.

"It's a most excellent plan in the country," said the Rev. Harold L. Gibb, assistant pastor at the fashionable St. Thomas' Episcopal church on Fifth avenue. Mr. Gibb, however, does not think it would be quite proper to wear knickers in city churches.

"If people want to come to church in knickers, God bless them," was the way the Rev. William H. Friday, of the Olivet Baptist church, Valley Stream, L. I., voiced his approval of the plan.

Rabbi Samuel M. Cohen, executive director of the United Synagogue of America, believes that "it is possible to feel prayerful in any garb."

"It is the spirit that is important, not the clothes," he said.

The idea is hardly an innovation in the Catholic churches, it was explained by representatives of that faith. The early services are often attended by those in sports garb. As far as clothes are concerned "anything that is reasonable is permissible."

"The churches must adapt themselves and their programs to present-day conditions," agreed the Rev. Harry Belcher, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, Hempstead, Long Island.

"So many men find it difficult to get outdoor exercise during the week that it seems logical to take this into consideration in arranging one's services."

body and said it was not that of her husband.

"Obietes is a liar and he's crazy," she said. "The body isn't my husband's. He's probably out west, around Cleveland."

Obietes was questioned more than eight hours before he confessed to Captain Carey, of the Brooklyn police. He fixed the date of the slaying as March 25. Two days later came the first discovery that murder had been done; a human thigh, wrapped in newspaper, was found on the Williamsburg bridge.

Subsequently other parts of the body were found; some in the East river, others wrapped in newspaper and tossed behind a pile of lumber.

Police took Obietes this afternoon to the lot where the body was dismembered.

"This is the place," he said, and then collapsed.

Zubenski in 1922 was bartender for Mrs. Zubenski's first husband, Vilentis, in Cleveland. On May 23, 1922, Vilentis' body was found in his backyard. He had been killed by an ax blow. Zubenski and Vilentis' widow were questioned but permitted to go. They came to Brooklyn and established a speakeasy, police said.

Obietes said that on the night of March 25 he, with a friend, went for a walk with Zubenski, hit him on the head with a brick, dragged the body to a vacant lot and dismembered it, using a knife and a cleaver. Obietes formerly was employed as a butcher, police were told.

Mrs. Zubenski, who is being held with Obietes, is 43 years old. Obietes is 26.

Ernest G. Beaudry Celebrates With 'Good-Will' Dinner

Guests of Ernest G. Beaudry, popular Atlanta Ford dealer, the wives and friends of his employes all enjoyed the "good-will" dinner at the Ansley recently. Short talks were made by Mr. Beaudry, C. M. Daniels, B. F. Hart and J. B. Paris. A. C. Menter was toastmaster.

G. O. P. Skeletons Rattled In Defense of Raskob Loan

Democrats Recall Sinclair "Hijacking" in Response to Opponents' Cry of "Party Mortgage."

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Aroused by republican efforts to make Chairman John J. Raskob a political issue in the coming presidential campaign, because of Mr. Raskob's advance of funds to run the party's national headquarters here, the democratic national committee rattled before the republican national organization some of the old skeletons of the Harding administration.

Replying to a charge hurled yesterday from republican headquarters that Mr. Raskob holds a one-man mortgage on the affairs of the democratic party, Shouse, chairman of the democratic national executive committee, brought into review by way of comparison, certain oil and tariff contributions which the republicans obtained to offset a party deficit during the Harding administration.

The Shouse statement, which served to add fuel to the spirited exchange that has taken place between the two major party organizations during the last week, must have proved embarrassing to Will Hays, present arbiter of the cinema and chairman of the republican national committee at the time the contributions in question were received. For his presence at the White House yesterday was made the occasion for the latest democratic reply.

Sinclair "Hijacked."

Republicans were reminded that the political resourcefulness of Mr. Hays enabled them to meet the Harding campaign deficit by "hijacking" Harry Sinclair out of two or three hundred thousand dollars of the Continental Trading Company loot that was denounced by the supreme court as the proceeds of a corporation "created for some illegitimate purpose and 'to circumvent the law and defeat public policy.'"

The Shouse statement was by far the most pointed and bluntly worded of any that have marked the relations of the two party committees. It seems designed to stop, for once and all, the republican effort to make an issue of Chairman Raskob's financial support of his party's headquarters organization activity, to which he has contributed generous sums from the start.

Senator Henry D. Hatfield, republican, of West Virginia, was the author of the republican national committee statement which started the attack. In it he referred to the latest report filed with the house of representatives by James W. Gerard, war-time ambassador to Germany and present treasurer of the democratic national committee, revealing that Chairman Raskob had loaned an additional $40,000 to the party during the last three months. He made the loan the basis of the statement that "Mr. Raskob is steadily increasing the size of the mortgage which he holds upon the once proud party of Jefferson and Jackson."

Hunts Skeletons.

It was all a little too much for Chairman Shouse, with the result that he today, in view of Mr. Hays' White House visit, raided the republican closet for some of the secret bones of the Harding regime. Not only were republicans willing to take money from Sinclair, later indicted in the Teapot Dome oil scandals, but accepted campaign aid to the extent of $1,000,000 from former Senator Joe Grundy, the acknowledged head of tariff lobbyists, for use in Mr. Hoover's campaign, he asserted.

The Shouse statement reads:

"Will Hays, formerly chairman of the republican national committee, was a visitor at the White House yesterday. Mr. Hays, it will be recalled, was the resourceful political executive who, when the G. O. P. had a deficit, following the election of President Harding, hijacked Harry Sinclair out of two or three hundred thousand of the Continental Trading Company loot that was denounced by the supreme court as the proceeds of a corporation 'created for some illegitimate purpose' and 'to circumvent the law and defeat public policy.'

"Shortly after Mr. Hays' conference with President Hoover yesterday, the republican national committee issued a statement under the pen name of Senator Hatfield, of West Virginia, reflecting on the loan of $40,000 by Democratic Chairman Raskob to aid in financing the democratic national committee's activities as evidence of the 'mortgaging' of the democratic party to its chairman.

White House Approval.

"Whether this statement was a consequence of or a coincidence with the closeting of Mr. Hays with President Hoover, I do not know. But the understanding in newspaper circles, or at least my information on that subject from newspapermen, is that no statement is issued from the republican national committee until it has the definite o. k. of the White House.

"Of course, the iniquity of Mr. Raskob's loaning his own money to meet the expenses of the committee of which he is chairman is monstrous compared with the purity of the enterprise in which Chairman Hays engaged. Here was Sinclair, with a multitude of criminal charges hanging over his head and with a republican attorney general of the United States presumably interested in the outcome of the prosecution. That Mr. Sinclair was willing to yield first $75,000 in the Liberty bonds, into which the proceeds of the Continental Oil robbery were converted, and then $185,000 more is, of course, merely evidence that the promoter of the Teapot Dome episode, for which he was indicted, is so good a republican that he could not resist the impulse to share the proceeds of his peculiar deals with the party under whose administration he was enabled to make those deals. To this good day there has never come from the present occupant of the White House, a personal beneficiary by cabinet appointment, one word of condemnation of the methods used to pay the deficit of the Harding administration of which he was a member.

Grundy Testimony.

"Another episode which illustrates by contrast the iniquity of the democrats was revealed in the testimony of Uncle Joe Grundy, who casually informed the senate investigating committee that he had raised a million dollars for the republican campaign fund to elect Mr. Hoover president with no other hope of reward than getting through the tariff duties for which he had lobbied so enthusiastically. Talk about mortgages on a political organization; Mr. Grundy not only took a mortgage on his party but foreclosed it in the form of the Hoover-Grundy tariff, which was expected to profit the particular industries in whose behalf the Pennsylvania lobbyist was working and which, because of the destruction of our foreign trade and the retaliatory duties it inspired abroad, has indefinitely prolonged the Hoover panic, now in the nineteenth month of its mournful duration.

"Perhaps an explanation of the persistence with which the republican campaign managers bring Mr. Raskob into their statements may be found in the naive paragraph in the Washington Post's story of yesterday's handout. 'In the congressional campaign of 1930,' says the Post, 'Chairman Raskob again was denounced by the republican orators. Why he should have been was something that republican leaders had some trouble in explaining although they were quick to deny that his religion had anything to do with it.'"

Acting Bear Killed After Attacking Two

ALBANY, N. Y., June 6.—(UP) A performing bear which clawed a child at Pittsfield, Mass., several weeks ago was shot tonight at Amsterdam when it suddenly became enraged, broke away from Trainer Mike Zinnery and attacked Mrs. Meline Coldarone and her four-year-old son.

The bear first attacked the child and Mrs. Coldarone went to the rescue. The bear was shot by Policeman Thomas Murphy after carnival attendants ineffectually fired blank cartridges attempting to drive him away from the woman and child.

Several hundred persons attending the show were panic-stricken. Mrs. Coldarone and her child were badly clawed and suffered possible internal injuries. They were taken to a hospital.

DRIVE AGAINST SMITH CHARGED BY ATTORNEY

Charging that ministers and laymen of the Methodist church are "waging a campaign" to influence Dr. Rembert G. Smith, Sparta minister, to dismiss slander, libel and defamation suits against Bishops John M. Moore and E. D. Mouzon, J. Ira Harrelson, attorney, Saturday said he had been instructed to ascertain who made statements that "Dr. Smith's activities are being financed by European and American liquor interests or the Roman Catholic church."

Harrelson represents Dr. Smith in the suits seeking $50,000 each from the bishops. The complainant Saturday had letters from Dr. Walter Anthony, of Macon, setting out that "certain persons have asked whether the Roman Catholic church, which in all countries seems to hate Methodism above all other protestantism, was sponsoring your activities — and whether American and European liquor interests have financed your campaign attacks upon your brethren."

Scoring anonymous communications, resolutions of small groups of Methodist gatherings and conferences criticizing him for having resorted to the courts for protection against and redress for alleged slanderous and libelous statements made against Dr. Smith, Harrelson charged the campaign of slander is still in progress and intimated that, unless it ceases, there will be other actions.

"Contrary to the letter and the spirit of the constitution of the United States providing for separation of church and state," he said, "these persons are attempting to perform the functions of judge and jury in trying the issues of legal proceedings in the conferences and committee rooms of our churches."

Excerpts from Harrelson's statement follow:

"Anonymous communications, resolutions of small groups of Methodist gatherings and conferences, and a letter written by a Methodist minister, have been sent to Dr. Smith criticizing him for having resorted to the courts for protection against and redress for slanderous and libelous statements made against him by certain bishops that are defamatory to his reputation as a minister.

"The protests to these suits indicate that certain ministers and laymen taking such an active part in the matter are not satisfied with their diligent endehvors to convert the church into a political party, contrary to the letter and spirit of the constitution of the United States providing for separation of state and church, but are attempting to perform the functions of judge and jury in trying the issues of legal proceedings in the conference and committee rooms of our churches.

"My office has been instructed to make a thorough and exhaustive investigation of the origin of utterances and insinuations that Dr. Smith is being paid by liquor interests and Catholic organizations."

GEORGIA PRODUCTS FOR P. O. SOUGHT

Delegation To Leave for Capital and Cite Improvements Planned.

Citation of a pretentious list of projected improvements for the congested area in the southern business section of Atlanta will be made as a means of obtaining a promise from Ferry K. Heath, assistant secretary of the treasury, Washington, that Georgia products be used in erection of the new postoffice building.

An Atlanta party will leave about noon today for Washington to attend a conference there at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Included among the group will be Horace Russell, president, and Ben S. Barker, executive vice president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Congressman Robert Ramspeck, Robert H. Jones Jr., and other business and civic leaders.

Raymond W. Torras, engineer-secretary of the borough planning commission, also will accompany the party, and will carry with him maps showing projected improvements for the area.

Among the major improvements will be extension of Broad street from its terminus at Mitchell into Whitehall; construction of a huge viaduct spanning the railway tracks to the northeast of the new postoffice site, and acting as a connecting artery between the western and northern sections of Atlanta; widening of main thoroughfares leading to the viaduct via Bartow street and Techwood drive to the north, and Magnolia and Mechanic streets to the south and west. Chapel and Haynes streets also will be widened. Rawson street will be projected to the intersection of Fair and Simpson streets, Windsor street widened and Fair street would be widened from Whitehall to Capitol avenue under the plan.

All widening operations contemplate boulevards from 70 to 80 feet wide, as a relief to traffic congestion of Spring and other streets to the south and west.

Another important argument will be the location of the civic center within half a dozen blocks of the postoffice site, with Fulton county courthouse, the city hall and the capital building as the nucleus.

Capitol square also would be projected, in accordance with Torras' plan, into Fair street.

Although Torras' projects are tentative, they will become a part of a general street improvement scheme for the central business district, he said.

GERMANY ISSUES CALL FOR CHANGE OF REPARATIONS

content. It is the statesmanlike duty of the government to make preparations now to master the coming difficulties. That this cannot be done without hardships affecting all classes of the population can readily be conceived by men of discernment.

"It is better, even though it hurts, in orderly fashion, to reduce outlays and demand contributions from those who still possess incomes than to run the risk that payments upon which the subsistence of the broad masses rests can no longer be effected.

"The German states and communes find themselves in a position similar to the reich's. They, too, have economized drastically and will have to restrict themselves even more. The government is under no illusions about the heaviness of the sacrifice the nation will make, but the maintenance of budget equilibrium and considerations for our economic system in view of its difficult position and the serious competition in the world market justify the measures taken.

Calls on Other Nations.

"We have harnessed all our forces in order to meet our obligations incurred through losing the war. And we have had to call on foreign assistance in the widest measure to do this. This is no longer possible.

"The putting forth of the last power and reserves of the nation entitles the German government and makes it its duty toward the German people to tell the world: The limits of the privations we have imposed on our people have been reached:

"The presuppositions upon which the new plan came into being have been shown by the course of world development to have been wrong. The alleviations the new plan was to bring to the German people as was the intent of the participants and which at first it gave promise of bringing, have failed to realize.

"The government is conscious of the fact that the direly menaced business and financial position of the reich calls imperatively for alleviation from the unbearable reparations obligations. The economic recovery of the world depends upon it, too.

Struggle for Future.

"The German nation is engaged in a decisive struggle for its future. A government with a sense of responsibility, must warn against the superstition that fruitful success can be obtained without sacrifice. If the German people has faith in its future, it must resolve to stake everything for it. Often Germans in their past history failed to perceive that in a critical situation, not a battle between the parties, but the will of the entire nation is decisive in holding out.

"Such an hour has come. The government cannot believe that the new generation has become so small-minded and the older so feeble that they are incapable of uniting in peaceable contests for our renascence to assert the greatness and idealism of the German nation as in previous fateful hours.

"The government will carry on with full confidence in the strength and will of the German people to live.

Berlin, June 6, 1931.

(Signed) The Reich's Government."

GERMANY'S FINANCE DISCUSSED IN ENGLAND

CHEQUERS, England, June 6.—(AP)—Like four businessmen discussing the affairs of a great corporation, the heads of the British and German governments met here today to talk over Germany's economic plight.

Chancellor Heinrich Bruening sought Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's assistance in sounding out Germany's creditors, including the United States, regarding postponement of some of the heavy reparations payments.

Foreign Minister Julius Curtius and Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson talked together of the matters most intimately connected with their offices while Herr Bruening and Mr. MacDonald strolled arm in arm through the garden of the prime minister's estate.

Those who have followed the interchanges preceding the visit of the German statesmen were inclined to think Mr. MacDonald had given Herr Bruening words of encouragement coupled with a promise to see which way the wind blows among the creditor nations.

Among other things the Young plan provides that Germany may give 90 days' notice of her inability to meet certain payments sometimes described as the "postponeable" payments which were written into the plan to guide Germany over such economic crises as she now faces.

Despite the Young plan provision reducing Germany's payments by approximately $168,000,000, Bruening said, the country has been obliged to raise taxes and cut expenses by about $600,000,000 in the past 14 months.

"Radicalism is growing in our country," he said, "yet we know that the solution of our problems cannot be reached by ourselves alone. The only possible way to solve them is by the frank co-operation of all the nations of the world."

Tomorrow the visitors will rise early, drive to Ayelsbury for church and return to resume their talks. They will leave for London in the afternoon and at that time a joint statement will be issued.

BORAH ASKS REDUCTION IN GERMAN WAR BURDEN

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—Germany's declaration of inability to meet her reparations payments today drew close attention of the administration and a demand from Chairman Borah, of the senate foreign relations committee, for a cut in the German war burden.

Senator Borah assailed heavy armament of the other European nations and blamed them in part for the European depression and Germany's financial plight. He declared the armaments violated the Versailles treaty.

Significance was added to Borah's pronouncement in view of his recent conference on the European situation with President Hoover and Secretary Stimson.

While the administration maintained silence on the new European developments, it was recalled that President Hoover recently called upon the foreign powers to reduce their armaments in a speech before the International Chamber of Commerce.

Secretary Stimson went into consultation with economic experts, but as he did so he made it plain again that the United States did not consider the reparations problem to be linked in any way with the war debts due to this country by European nations.

Consequently, the door was regarded as closed to any international parley on finances which might involve America's war loans. Nevertheless, American interest in the European situation was seen in Secretary Stimson's recent decision to visit the continent this summer.

2,000 Lemons Cure Stomach Disorders

BELGRADE, June 6.—When the local doctors told Vladimir Tomitch that he was suffering from a stomach disorder and doubted that he ever would get well, Tomitch decided to go on a diet of lemons. In 130 days he ate nothing but lemons. He figures that he consumed 2,000 lemons in the 130 days.

"If my stomach is no good," argued Tomitch, "then I will eat nothing but lemons."

Doomed Man Preaches One-Sentence Sermon

NEW ORLEANS, June 6—(AP)—From the death chamber of Parish prison, Herman L. Taylor, convicted bank bandit, today handed out a one-sentence sermon which he requested newspapermen to have published.

"Wake up and detour, because God never intended that fools should make a better living and be more successful than honest workers," it said.

Taylor is awaiting execution with three others for the murder of a grocer in a branch bank holdup last year.

VETERANS DEMOBILIZE AFTER BIG REUNION

With the dying strains of "Dixie" still lingering in their ears these gallant sons of the old south were storing away their bright gray uniforms and returning to their homes to await the call to muster a year hence at Richmond, Va.

But while their hearts were strong and the "rebel yell" rang as true as ever, their tottering gait belied the enthusiasm with which they yelled "On to Richmond" as they boarded trains and gave parting handclasps to their comrades.

Reuniting in the "cradle of the Confederacy" for the first time the veterans and their legions of friends were unstinted in their praise of Montgomery's gracious welcome and the tender care provided for them during their four-day reunion.

No little share of the glory for this service went to the Boy Scout troops, who constantly were at the beck and call of the feeble veterans and who likewise were demobilizing and deploying to their homes.

Special trains bore General C. A. DeSaussure, the new commander-in-chief, and his spirited little army back to their homes, many of the veterans having departed before the ball of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, which closed the reunion officially last night.

Hardly had the orchestra ceased playing at Camp Stephens before carpenters set to work with hammers dismantling the huge camp and the flags and bunting that decorated the city were being removed.

Undaunted, the little army moved out as it moved in, with its battle cry, "On to Richmond."

Charming participants in The Atlanta Constitution-Capitol theater beauty pageant who made their premiere appearance Saturday on the stage of the Capitol theater. The big beauty show, which will be repeated Monday, is to culminate in the naming of "Miss Atlanta" or "Miss Georgia" to attend the international beauty pageant at Galveston, Texas. Front row in group photograph, left to right: Virda Williams, Lester Harris, Margaret Redd, Effie Butler, Pat Hall, Peggy Race, Janis Williams, Frances Crowley and Pete Ladshaw. Back row: Myrtice Reagan, Carrie Blackwell, Blanche Eubanks, Mae Fraser, Jimmie Fraser, Brownye Carmichael, Eleen Garrett, Mildred Morrow, Frances Lassiter and Margaret Daniel. Individual photographs (left) Margaret Redd, (right) Marguerite Davis. Frances Lassiter at bottom. Group photo by Sandy Sanders, staff photographer. Individual photos by the Robert R. Jennings Studios, 761 1-2 Peachtree street.

Seventy-five Georgia beauties, selected from more than 200 entries in The Atlanta Constitution-Capitol theater beauty contest, Saturday afternoon staged a pageant at the theater which, for sheer audience-appeal, is probably the biggest theatrical hit of the current week. The pageant will be repeated Monday, and on Tuesday "Miss Atlanta" or "Miss Georgia" will be named to compete for the title of "Miss Universe" at the international beauty pageant in Galveston, Texas, June 13 to June 17.

The girls are strictly "home talent," a fact which adds great interest to the beauty show. Yet even greater interest is aroused by the fact that, home talent or not, they form quite the handsomest "chorus" Atlanta has seen in many a moon. It isn't necessary to single out individuals; the entire ensemble is eye-filling enough to please the most critical.

If you missed them Saturday, you can very well see them Monday, when three shows are scheduled. The girls go on at 3 o'clock and 5:45 o'clock Monday afternoon, and at 8:55 o'clock Monday night. Each one is identified by a number now; after Tuesday the winner will be known by her title, "Miss Atlanta" if she lives in the city, "Miss Georgia" if she lives out of town.

Her prize will be a trip to Galveston, Texas, with all expenses and those of her chaperon paid by sponsors of the contest. If you should happen to attend the show Monday, therefore, it would be a good idea to applaud generously for the girl who strikes your fancy. In that way you may keep her from being eliminated with those who receive meagre applause. For the audience is a preliminary judge in the contest. After the field is narrowed down by the audience, expert judges will step in to name the ultimate winner.

Venus de Milo figures and classically modeled features will count heavily towards determining the winner, of course. But "personality" in its way, will count just as heavily; the art of projecting your own individual sort of appeal across the footlights. Whatever the outcome of the contest, no one can deny that it has assembled on the stage at the Capitol theater one of the most fastidiously selected "choruses" Atlanta has ever seen.

Atlanta Youth Gifted Musician, Winner of Many Students Awards

Chester Wickersham Kitchings, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Arthur Kitchings, 3262 Peachtree road, N. E., has just completed a career of notable achievements as one of the outstanding students at the University School for Boys. Kitchings received his diploma June 1 and was valedictorian of his class.

CHESTER W. KITCHINGS.

He is a gifted musician, performing on ten instruments; sings and dances with the ease and grace of a professional. Recently he was awarded a medal by the U. D. C., Atlanta chapter, for an essay on "Stratford on the Potomac," home of General Robert E. Lee. He also won a medal given by the National Society of Colonial Daughters, Washington, D. C., on the subject of "Forests and Their Relation to Floods." He won the 1930 medal given by the University School for Boys on "Best Citizenship," and for four successive years he was given the scholarship medal by the same institution.

When ten years old he appeared with Neil O'Brien's minstrels in this city, also Montgomery and Selma, Ala., his performance was so well received that Mr. O'Brien offered him a large sum to become a member of this troup, which he declined. He also appeared with Weaver Brothers and Elvira in vaudeville with the same result. He is a member of the National Variety Artists, Inc. He arranges and conducts the programs for the musical organization of the West Point & Georgia railroads.

This company presented a complimentary performance to the United Confederate Veterans at their reunion in Montgomery, Ala., June 3 to 5, which was arranged and conducted by Chester, who is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Wickersham.

LABOR LEADER DENIES WAGE CUT AGREEMENT

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, said today rumors reaching him that the federation would agree to a 10 per cent wage reduction were "positively untrue."

"I don't understand how such a rumor could have been inspired," Green said. "There is no justification for it whatsoever. Not only has the federation not consented to any lowering of the wage scale, but it is not sympathetically inclined toward such a move."

Reports reached here also that Secretary of Labor Doak had been in conference with labor leaders and that a downward revision of the wage scale had been agreed upon. Doak characterized the rumor as "foolish." He reiterated he favored upholding the wage scale.

STILL BLAST KILLS NAVAL OFFICER

NORFOLK, Va., June 6.—(AP)—Explosion of distilling apparatus in the apartment of Lieutenant W. T. Smith, 44, assistant to the outside superintendent at the Norfolk navy yard, this afternoon resulted in his death and that of O. E. Whilden, civilian employe at the navy yard.

A visitor in a neighboring apartment who heard the explosion met the two men staggering out through dense smoke with their clothing ablaze. He smothered the flames with wet blankets, but both men died later at a hospital.

Police said there was evidence that a copper tank placed on the gas stove had blown up with terrific force. The explosion and fire which followed did considerable damage to the apartment in which officers reported finding a quantity of what appeared to be mash and beer and jugs and bottles.

Non-Stinging Bees Will Be Exhibited

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 6.—(AP)—There's not a sting in a jarful of bees to be exhibited June 10 at the annual field day of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station.

Breeding of the bees, known as Caucasians, has gone on for four years. The bees have stingers but do not use them.

Other exhibits will include a radio insect killer.

First Diploma at Georgia Tech Given Dalton Man in 1890

Monday will be a big day in the life of Henry Lesson Smith, of Dalton. For it will mark the forty-first anniversary of his graduation from Georgia Tech. Mr. Smith was one of the two members of the first graduating class who won their degrees in 1890. He then was 24 years of age.

HENRY LESSON SMITH.

Mr. Smith is now president and treasurer of the Smith Manufacturing Company of Dalton. The company also owns the Tennessee Tent and Awning Company of Chattanooga and the Standard Tent and Awning Company of Atlanta.

Mr. Smith was born at Snapping Shoals, Ga., May 7, 1866. His first school was the Conyers Female College. Later he prepared for college under the tutorship of Professor Robert A. Guinn and Thomas D. O'Kelley.

He entered Davidson College in 1885 and emerged three years later with a degree of bachelor of science. He entered what was then the Georgia School of Technology during the middle of the 1888 term. George C. Crawford was his only classmate. He received his diploma on commencement day, 1890.

Since that time Mr. Smith has been in active business in Georgia, his holdings growing until he now is recognized as one of the most prominent business men in the state.

"I actually was the first man to receive a Tech diploma," he said Saturday recalling the event. "Dr. I. S. Hopkins handed them to Mr. Crawford and myself. I guess I got mine first by accident."

FIVE MEN KILLED IN CAISSON CAVE-IN

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—(AP)—Five men, working in caisson holes, were killed in a cave-in early today and a policeman was fatally injured when a patrol wagon, en route to the scene, crashed into a truck.

The workmen, all negroes, were entombed at the bottom of a 30-foot caisson hole, when the 40-foot side wall of an excavation for a 32-story central city office building collapsed.

to see the men until too late to stop. Other men in the party said they heard the whistle of the passenger train, but added they believed Spake and Beard thought it to be that of the freight train locomotive as they did not leave the track.

An ambulance from Grady hospital was called, but both men were dead when it reached them. The bodies were removed to the undertaking parlors of the Awtry & Lowndes Company and will be sent to Temple today for burial.

Spake was a son of Leon Spake, while Beard was a son of J. P. Beard. The fathers of both boys are farmers of the Temple district.

METHODISTS TO FIGHT FLORIDA RACING LAW

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 6.—(UP)—Jacksonville Methodists will oppose passage of horse racing measures in Duval county under the provisions of the Florida county option law recently passed over Governor Doyle E. Carlton's veto, Rev. E. O. Heath announced today.

MEDICAL GROUP TO MEET MONDAY

An attendance of 800 physicians and their families is expected.

Plans have been made to disclose the latest and most important developments in medicine at this meeting, because the association was founded in Philadelphia in 1847, and returns to its birthplace now for the first time in 33 years. The sessions will last five days, two for general sessions, three for the presentation of about 300 technical and scientific papers.

N. Y. Woman "Dead," Asks Alimony in Court

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—Mrs. Amelia Froeshl, of the Bronx, is unwilling to play the role of a dead wife.

She appeared in supreme court today to demand alimony of the husband, who, she alleged, announced her death four years ago.

Mrs. Froeshl complained that her husband, Joseph Froeshl, a union labor executive, left her and went to live with another woman. The defendant denied all charges.

Mrs. Froeshl was granted $30 a week.

$171,131.74 JUDGMENT ASKED AGAINST LEA

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 6.—(AP) Larkin E. Crouch, receiver for Southern Publishers, Inc., today filed suit in chancery court asking a judgment for $171,131.74 "paid or credited" to Colonel Luke Lea as president of the corporation.

The suit asks that Colonel Lea be credited with $45,262.50, representing a payment by him of $45,262.50 interest on debentures of the corporation, and other credits.

The bill charges that Colonel Lea was "wrongfully voted and credited" with a salary of $50,000 per year as president of the corporation, which is a holding company for stock of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, Inc., and the Knoxville Journal, Inc.

The bill named Rogers Caldwell as a defendant as having concurred in the payment of the salary.

"Complainant is advised," the bill sets out, "that the nature and character of the services rendered did not warrant any salary, or in any event did not warrant a salary of such amount as was voted at that time."

MANY BEQUESTS IN THORNTON WILL

Trust Fund To Aid Students for Ministry Is Provided.

A trust fund of $10,000 to assist in the education of worthy young men for the Presbyterian ministry is established by the will of Mrs. Albert E. Thornton Sr., filed Saturday for probate. Mrs. Thornton died on May 28. Albert E. Thornton, a son, and the First National Bank of Atlanta, are named as executors and trustees.

Bequests of $10,000 each are left to Mrs. Robert Venable Roper, wife of Mrs. Thornton's deceased son, Austell Thornton; Miss Emily Little, a friend; Alfred Kennedy, her son-in-law; and Mrs. Albert E. Thornton, her daughter-in-law.

The balance of the estate is to be divided into six parts. Two parts, or one-third, goes to her daughter, Jane Thornton Kennedy, and a like amount to her son. One-sixth goes to each of her grandsons, Alfred Austell Thornton and William Albert Thornton. Spalding, MacDougald and Sibley filed the will as attorneys.

WHY SHOULD ANY MAN OR WOMEN HAVE GRAY HAIR?

Nature Will Keep Your Hair Youthful Shade and Free of Gray

LIFELESS GRAY HAIR REGAINS OLD BEAUTY

Everybody knows if color glands and hair roots are healthy and active, the hair will continue indefinitely a rich, natural color entirely free of gray or streaked locks.

A doctor several years ago asked himself this question: If I can stimulate digestion, liver, heart, etc., with a tonic, why not rub a stimulating tonic into the scalp that will revive those inactive glands so nature in her own natural way will resume putting plenty of pigment into the hair tube—surely the hair will then resume its original beautiful shades of youth regardless of user's age or previous condition of their hair.

REMARKABLE DISCOVERY.

The doctor's search led to endless experiments. He didn't want a dye or tint, and it, of course, must be harmless even if a person used it many years. Under the name Lea's Hair Tonic anyone may now purchase the tonic he finally perfected. For several years hairdressers, scattered over the country have been using it. Results are so nice and gradual men used it, too. It doesn't stain the scalp, and at a test one need only apply it to some small spot a few days to watch results. Shampoo as often as desired.

Most people are first induced to try Lea's for gray hair, but it primarily was intended as a tonic to put the scalp, hair roots, pigment glands and hair in a healthy, vigorous condition. Of course with a healthy scalp comes a change in appearance of hair and a restoration of the natural shade of brown, red, black, auburn or blonde. There are some three thousand shades of color in human hair—no dye expert can paint one's hair as exquisitely as nature. Lea's merely stimulates nature to renewed activity, puts nature back on the job, you might say, and the tint she imparts to your hair, once the scalp, roots and gland become healthy is natural. What is more beautiful or becoming than nature's own choice of shade to match your eyes, complexion and beauty.

SEE WHAT USERS SAY ON THE RIGHT.

If a reader desires to try Lea's Hair Tonic on guarantee of complete satisfaction they should get a bottle at drug store or pin dollar bill to this advertisement and send to Lea's Tonic Co., Brentwood, Md., for generous size bottle, full directions.

Experts cannot detect the use of Lea's Hair Tonic.

GRAY HAIR GONE STOPPED DANDRUFF ITCHY SCALP ALSO

Los Angeles User Says That Tonic Does All That Is Claimed and More

"I suffered with dandruff, itchy scalp and my hair was prematurely gray—a detestable shade of gray—writes Miss M. A. Benedict, 1502½ W. Adams St., Los Angeles, California.

Then about two years ago I learned of this truly wonderful Lea's Hair Tonic and started using it. My hair began changing right away to the lovely soft brown which was my original shade. The dandruff has positively disappeared and my hair is thicker and in perfect condition. It surely does all and more than they claim."

Thousands of men and women use Lea's Hair Tonic. Even experts and close friends cannot detect its use. Simple directions with each bottle for use at home. Read what another user says below.

HER HAIR WAS DRY FELL OUT IN HANDFULS

Dandruff, Itchy Scalp and Gray Hair Worried This Lady

NEW TONIC FIXED IT

"My hair was streaked, dry, and lifeless. Dandruff also bothered me and natural curl was all gone when I began using Lea's Hair Tonic. Now after using Lea's a short while my scalp feels fine, dandruff is gone, hair seems to be growing thicker and it is dark and luxurious and has ceased to fall out," writes Mrs. P. Bergner, Box 25, Clipper, Washington.

"I'm tickled with the appearance and condition of my hair now and it's so simple to use no woman should be without Lea's Hair Tonic."

IT RESTORED MY HAIR TO NATURAL COLOR AND BEAUTY

Previously Used Other Preparations, But Lea's Tonic Is the Best

"Two years or more ago I began using Lea's Hair Tonic and it is wonderful. Results came quickly and my hair went right back to its natural youthful color and then just an application now and then keeps my hair and scalp in perfect condition," writes Josephine Webber, 2114 Virginia Ave., Everett, Washington.

PINE NEWSPRINT CHEAP IN SOUTH

Experiments Show Paper Costs Are Lower Than in Other Sections.

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Production of newsprint paper from southern pine now has been accomplished experimentally and if the process proves successful on a commercial scale it may provide an entering wedge for the development of a newsprint industry in the south.

The foregoing announcement was made today by H. S. Betts, of the research branch of the forest service, United States department of agriculture, who revealed that southern pine newsprint production has been accomplished at the department's forest products laboratory at Madison, Wis.

At the same time, however, the department official emphasized that there still remain problems of commercial manufacture to be solved before the industry can be developed. Mr. Betts made available the following information on the southern pine newsprint situation:

Absence of Resin.

"The young pine has been found to contain practically no resin, which has been the chief bar to the use of southern pine in making newsprint. Resinous woods do not pulp satisfactorily.

"Costs of wood for paper making in the various parts of the United States have been computed by trade organizations in co-operation with the forest service, and the figures show the cost to be lowest in the south, next lowest in the west coast states, and far higher in all other regions. For the south, the cost is about $7.56 a cord, for the west coast $8.96, for the lake states $12.43 and higher for other regions up to $18.04 in New York.

"Since the cost of operation is generally the same regardless of the region, the south has a distinct advantage in the low cost of wood. For this reason, it has been able to dominate the kraft paper market, this type of paper being used for wrapping and for paper bags.

Quick Replenishment.

"The south also is able to produce new crops of wood much more rapidly than the more northern regions. Trees 20 years old there are amply large for cutting for pulp purposes, and since the supply now is estimated at more than 2,000,000,000 cords in the south, replacement would make the supply practically inexhaustable.

"It is unlikely there will be any sudden shift of the newsprint paper industry to the south, even if the newly-developed processes prove to be successful commercially. There are investments of millions of dollars in paper mills in the more northern states, and the supply of pulp wood there is far from exhausted.

"If the process is successful on a large scale, however, the newsprint industry may be able to establish itself in the south, using the cheaper wood supply. Diversification of products is one of the needs of the southern industry."

OVER 2,500 PIGEONS IN ANNUAL FLIGHT

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—More than 2,500 pigeons, released at Danville, Va., at 5:50 a. m. today, began to flutter into their coops on hundreds of lofts in many New York and New Jersey towns tonight. They flew in the annual 410-mile race of the United Homing Pigeon Concourse.

The fastest flyer will be announced as soon as the aluminum bands on the birds' legs have been clock stamped and checked.

FAMOUS CHEF HELD ON 17 DRY CHARGES

NEW ORLEANS, June 6.—(UP). Arnaud Cacenave, famous New Orleans chef, proprietor of the widely known creole restaurant, Arnaud's, was indicted here today on 17 counts of violating the national prohibition law.

He was arraigned before the United States commissioner and released on $1,000 bond.

Crude Oil Selling At 12 Cents a Barrel

AUSTIN, Tex., June 6.—(AP)—A barrel of crude oil at the price of a gallon of gasoline, if you buy gas at 12 cents a gallon, is the latest development in the scramble for petroleum in the East Texas field.

Reports from East Texas today said crude oil was selling as low as 12 cents a barrel and there were rumors of contracts under that price.

Following cuts in Mid-Continent crude oil prices early this week to from 25 to 37 cents a barrel, the larger purchasing companies withdrew posted prices for East Texas crude, announcing that chaotic conditions in the area made it impossible to maintain a fixed scale.

Failure to curb East Texas production is blamed by leaders of the oil industry for the crumbling of the national price structure.

R. H. Davis & Co. To Open Fur Department on Monday

Jane MacMillan, Agnes Scott student and popular member of the sub-deb and younger college set, who will serve as a model at the opening of R. H. Davis & Company's fur department Monday, and L. C. Ward, general executive of the store.

R. H. Davis & Company will open a fur shop Monday on the second floor of the store, it is announced by L. C. Ward, general executive of the company, featuring 150 coats in the initial showing.

The announcement says that the coats procured for the initial showing were showroom samples and represent extraordinary values. On the opening day they will be shown on living models and featured in window displays.

The second floor has been decorated with snow scenes for the opening of the department, and a cooling and ventilating system has been installed which will be placed in operation beginning Monday.

Miss Kitty Maugham will be in charge of the department.

Reapportionment Action Urged by Senator Harris

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(Special.)—United States Senator William J. Harris today joined Senator Walter F. George in urging the next general assembly not to delay reapportionment of congressional districts.

Probability that a number of the present Georgia members will gain important committee posts if the democrats win next year is stressed by Senator Harris as an important matter for the consideration of the legislature.

"For the past several weeks," Senator Harris says in his statement, "I have traveled over many sections of Georgia and found the greatest interest possible among the people in the efforts of members of the incoming legislature to accomplish matters needed for our state and without exception they stressed the opinion that nothing was more important than redistricting it."

Redistricting Important.

His statement in full follows:

"I read with interest the editorial in The Constitution relative to redistricting the state.

"Since I have been a member of the United States senate I have not in any way tried to influence matters before the Georgia legislature except in one instance—w n I appeared before the committee and urged an appropriation for a building for the Steiner clinic to take care of Georgia cancer patients. I was chairman of the senate cancer committee which explains my activities in this matter.

"The Georgia legislature has many vital questions confronting it at the next session, none more important than redistricting the state, and I have faith in their desire and ability to accomplish everything expected of them.

"Our constitution provides for reapportionment every ten years, and most of the legislatures of the other states have already done this. Only in Missouri have they failed, in so far as I know.

"Redistricting the state is a responsibility that rests entirely with the legislature. They are quite able to take care of this matter without any suggestions from me, and I have none to offer. However, delaying action on this so that the ten Georgia congressmen would have to be elected from all over the state, thereby depriving each congressional district of the right of electing its own representative, is a matter that concerns us all. It particularly concerns me as one of the Georgia senators, for it is necessary to have the co-operation of the house members in accomplishing matters for our state.

Value of Seniority.

"Under the seniority rules of the house and senate the members who have been longest in congress are at the top of committees. The house and senate rarely pass the same bill, and after it passes both houses it goes to conference. The vice president appoints five members of the conference committee, the three ranking republicans and the two ranking democrats, to adjust the difference between the two houses. The speaker does likewise in selecting the house conferees, and these ten ranking members of the house and senate decide on all changes in the bill, sometimes they almost rewrite the bill, and the house and senate seldom fail to approve their recommendation. When the conference report goes to the house and senate, they can vote only on the bill as a whole as recommended by this committee, and it cannot be amended except by sending it back to conference, which is not often done.

"As an instance: Congressman Edwards for personal reasons voluntarily retired from congress during the Wilson administration. He was at that time the ranking democrat on the rivers and harbors committee, which means so much to the state of Georgia, and had he been re-elected to congress he would have been chairman of this important committee. Georgia's rivers and harbors lost millions of dollars because we had no member on the rivers and harbors committee for several sessions. The Georgia congressmen are all high on the committees which make them members of the conference committees even though the house is republican. With the house almost certain to be democratic next time, some of the Georgia members will become chairmen of committees. The prestige of a member of the house or senate is controlled to a large extent by their rank on committees, those who have been kept there longest by their people naturally have more influence.

Danger of Failure.

"If the legislature failed to redistrict the state it would enable candidates from the largest cities to combine and elect the ten Georgia congressmen from two or three cities. Every new congressman elected, no matter how able, would have to go to the bottom of committees, and it would take them years to attain high places on the committees. The people of the different districts in Georgia should not be denied the right to elect from within their district a member of congress to serve them. It would be an injustice which could not be excused.

"For the past several weeks I have traveled over many sections of Georgia and found the greatest interest possible among the people in the efforts of the members of the incoming legislature to accomplish matters needed for our state, and without exception they expressed the opinion that nothing was more important than redistricting it."

COUZENS ASKS MITCHELL'S REPLY

Justice Department Hit for Action on $1,000,000 Hill Tax Case.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—Senator Couzens, of Michigan, made it plain today he expected Attorney-General Mitchell to reply to his questions about the million-dollar Hill tax case.

For two months, the Michigan republican said, the attorney-general had ignored his questions. There was no indication today that Mitchell intended to reply.

"I expect an answer from Mr. Mitchell to my question of why the department of justice refused to appeal that case to the supreme court," Senator Couzens said. "There may be a very good reason for it, but I don't know it."

Couzens said he was in earnest and, while he did not talk about the future, he left no doubt that he would not hesitate to go before congress, if necessary.

The tax case was one involving an assessment of $1,130,000 upon the estate of the late Mrs. James J. Hill, of Minnesota.

Mitchell was attorney for the estate. The district federal court ruled that the assessment should be paid. The circuit court of appeals held that the tax should not be paid.

"The treasury department and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, then assistant attorney-general, recommended an appeal of this case to the supreme court," the senator related. "Attorney-General Sargent refused to appeal. Mr. Mitchell at that time was solicitor-general.

"I do not challenge the personal integrity of Mr. Mitchell. I do say that on the face of it this case is a great example of tax evasion. I think I have a right to have my letters to the attorney-general answered."

"The trip will be made some time this summer and we plan to fly to China and Japan, and that is all we ourselves are sure of so far," said Lindbergh.

TOKYO HAILS PROPOSED TRIP WITH GREAT ENTHUSIASM.

TOKYO, June 6.—(AP)—The impending flight of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh to the Orient was hailed with enthusiasm here today.

Most vernacular newspapers ventured editorially they would succeed, although several commented that it was not "by any means what might be called a pleasure trip."

Various aviation authorities directed attention to the fact that the Kurile islands, extending northward from Japan, lacked harbors where landings could be made and that fog prevails seven days out of every ten throughout the year.

Nevertheless plans to receive the intrepid couple already are underway. Officials have met to discuss plans of entertaining them, while aviation leaders are prepared to extend every possible courtesy and assistance.

The newspaper Hochi, which is backing Seiji Yoshihara, Japanese airman, on a flight to the United States by easy stages, suggested the Lindberghs might care to use some of the supply vessels, placed along the north Pacific route for the Japanese airman. Yoshihara damaged his plane and is waiting on one of the Kurile islands for a new ship before continuing his flight.

As a whole, the vernaculars considered the announcement of Lindbergh's plans as one of the most important and interesting aviation developments here in some time. Japan is especially interested as Lindbergh has announced he intended to spend some time in this country.

The newspaper Asahi asserted that those persons who carry out such enterprises in the interest of civilization "truly manifest the strength of their nationalities." "Lindbergh's plan clearly indicates proved aviation progress in America," the newspaper adds. It was expected the embassy will soon file an application for permission for the Lindberghs to land in Japan. Granting of the application is a foregone conclusion.

EARTH TREMORS FELT AT ROCHESTER, N. Y.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 6.—(AP) A series of slight earth tremors were felt throughout the city early this evening. The first occurred at 7 o'clock and two others came two and a half hours later. No damage was done, but residents in all sections of the city were alarmed by the shocks, which shook houses and rattled windows.

Major Yardley, Expert in Codes, Joins University

CHICAGO, June 6.—(AP)—Appointment of Major Herbert O. Yardley, the cryptographic expert who recently revealed a purported plot to poison President Wilson, as a consultant in the scientific crime prevention laboratory of Northwestern Unversity, was announced today.

Major Yardley made the statement, in a book published recently, that he deciphered, while head of the American Cryptographic Bureau during the World War, a telegram reporting a plot on the life of President Wilson. He refused, however, to say whether he considered the report true.

The Daily News, interviewing Major Yardley by telephone at his home at Worthington, quoted him as saying he would be glad to "drop everything" and assist in the effort to clean up Chicago crime.

"Codes used by gangsters and the underworld in general are of the crudest kind," he was reported to have said. "Compared with the intricate and highly complicated code messages used by the allied powers and the entente during the war, they are child's play."

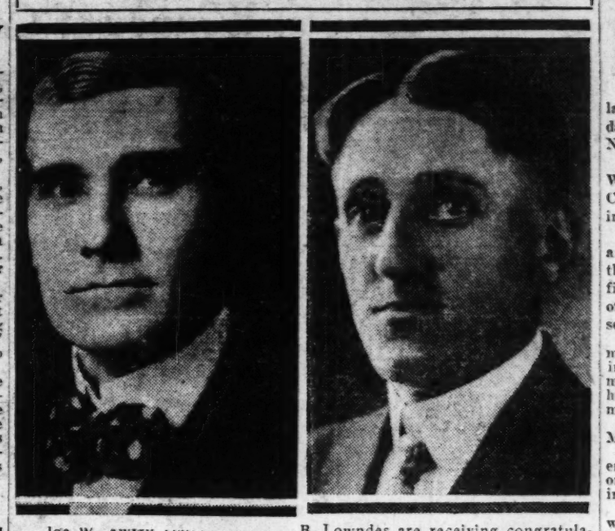

PATENT APPEALS COURT IS SOUGHT

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—Creation of a single court of patent appeals ranking second only to the supreme court was recommended today by the patents committee of the American Engineering Council.

A bill establishing such a court has been drafted by the committee, of which Edwin J. Prindle, former president of the New York Patent Law Association, is president. Establishment of the new court would abolish jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeal in patent cases.

"The present system of appeals in patent infringement suits is most inefficient," said the committee. "It is a deterrent to the production of inventions and to the investment of capital in patents. Correction of this sysem is by far the greatest need of our patent system."

Celebrate Anniversary

Joe W. Awtry (left) and Frank B. Lowndes are receiving congratulations on the occasion of the fifteenth anniversary of Awtry & Lowndes, funeral directors. Both Messrs. Awtry and Lowndes have been prominent for many years in the civic and business life of Atlanta, and their business is regarded as one of the leading firms in the profession. Their establishment has shown a steady growth, and they maintain a high and dignified standard in their funeral home. Among the modern features to be found in the establishment is a spacious and beautiful chapel, in which is installed a large pipe organ, handsomely appointed reception rooms, where a family may receive friends in the privacy afforded by a home, and slumber rooms for both adults and infants.

RITES IN PHILADELPHIA FOR MISS E. E. HOWSON

Miss Emily Elizabeth Howson, professor at Agnes Scott College, who died Friday at a private hospital, was head of the physics department and instructor in astronomy. She had been ill for several weeks. The body will be sent Sunday to Philadelphia by H. M. Patterson & Son for funeral services and interment.

She is survived by her father, Henry Howson, a well-known patent lawyer of Philadelphia, and three sisters, the Misses Beatrice and Margaret Howson and Mrs. Clara L. H. Skillman, all of Philadelphia.

NORTHERN BAPTISTS NAME LAYMAN CHIEF

KANSAS CITY, June 6.—(AP)—A layman, Mattison Boyd Jones, Glendale, Cal., was elected president of the Northern Baptist's convention today.

He will succeed the Rev. Albert W. Beaven, D. D., president of the Colgate Rochester Theological Seminary at Rochester, N. Y.

Another layman, H. T. Sorg, Newark, N. J., attorney, who was among the convention speakers, was elected first vice president, and G. I. Neal, of Huntington, W. Va., was named second vice president.

The report of the resolutions committee made public today expressed interest in the suggested establishment of a national daily newspaper to handle news from a Christian and moral viewpoint.

Action will be taken on the report Monday.

One section protested against present-day cigaret advertising and called on Baptists to "discourage the growing use of tobacco in any form."

All members of the denomination were urged to give "unflinching support" to the eighteenth amendment.

A resolution on disarmament commended recent utterances of President Hoover, favored the participation of the United States in the coming disarmament conference and expressed hope that this country would become a party to the World Court.

MILLIONS IN ART LOST IN FLAMES IN EXHIBIT HALL

Crystal Palace in Munich Destroyed With Three Thousand Historic and Contemporary Pieces by World's Masters.

WORKS OF RODIN LEFT IN RUINS

Monetary Loss Is Placed at $6,000,000; Only 100 Paintings of Little Value Saved.

MUNICH, Bavaria, June 6.—(AP)—Three thousand historic and contemporary works of art including five sculptures by Rodin were lost early today when fire destroyed the old Crystal Palace which housed an exhibition of paintings gathered from every part of the country.

The monetary loss was tentatively placed at $6,000,000. Only 100 paintings were saved and most of those were canvases which the jury had turned down. These had been stored in a small shed near the exhibition hall.

The origin of the fire was not determined.

The Crystal Palace was a complete ruin. The fire constitutes an almost unparalelled catastrophe in the history of art.

Among the works which were lost are collections constituting not only the life work of dozens of struggling contemporary artists, but 110 of the finest works of the more eminent 19th century German Romanticist painters, which means that the more representative works of that entire period of art have been destroyed.

Hamburg Paintings Lost.

Hamburg had loaned 17 paintings for display and many other pieces were exhibited from 40 other German towns and cities, including works from the National Gallery at Berlin and museums and galleries at Leipsic, Innsbruck and Breslau.

Among the works of the Romanticists which were destroyed were Moritz Von Schwindt's "Wunderhorn," Ritter Kurt's "Bridal Ride," "The Youth Wunderhorn," and "Night Journey"—paintings which are known the world over in reproduction.

Also lost was Philipp Otto Runge's "We Three," which was considered the most beautiful German group portrait of the 19th century, and the eight best works of Caspar David Friedrich and four works of Peter Von Cornelius.

Berlin's Picture.

The Berlin National Gallery lost one of its most famous pictures in Karl Blechen's "Striking Lightning," a work which showed the Italian influence on that master.

Nine pictures by Anton Koch were lost, as well as a dozen by the brothers Oliver, who were "discovered" at the beginning of this century.

A whole section devoted to the sculpture of Rodin, including 11 works, was destroyed as well as an adjacent section in which was exhibited the work of the Frenchmen Renauld, Maillot, Despain, Derain, Blanche and an entire hall of modern Milanese artists.

The life's work of the Swiss painter Cuno Amiet was consumed, as well as 67 of the best paintings of Otto Struetzel.

France Will Honor 16 Warriors of Past

PARIS, June 6.—(UP)—Sixteen fighting commanders of France will be borne to a final resting place tomorrow in the Invalides in the shadow of the tomb of Napoleon.

All the French commanders thus honored have died since the World War. The list includes one marshal, two admirals and 13 generals, out of a total of 39 army and navy commanders who met the enemy.

The marshal who will lie under the eagles of the first Napoleon is Marshal Manoury, who was wounded in the eye at Arras. The admirals are Boue de Lapeyriere and Gauchet.

WOMEN OF SPAIN ACCORDED RIGHT TO HOLD OFFICE

Senoras, Still Without Vote in Troubled Republic, Expected To Win Ballot Eventually.

BY CLARENCE DU BOSE.

Copyright, 1931, by the Associated Press.

MADRID, June 6.—(AP)—Although women cannot vote in Spain, they will for the first time be eligible for election in June as members of the new constituent assembly.

The provisional republican government has decreed that women and priests may also be elected to the assembly. The male voting age has been lowered from 25 to 23 years. This adds a considerable element to the republican strength, for the youth of Spain is strong for the new order.

Many observers think women will be given the vote, sooner or later, but there is some opposition to it among the republicans and also among the socialists and communists. This is because some of the extreme lefts fear that "more Spanish women might vote against instead of for republican principles, being swayed by conservative impulses more than Spanish men are."

Many women are champions of the republic and it is certain that numerous priests voted republican in the April municipal elections which caused the downfall of the monarch.

The national assembly elections will be the second elections Spain has had in eight years—since before the Primo de Rivera dictatorship which began in 1923. The new assembly will be Spain's first parliament since before the dictatorship and in many ways it will be more important than any similar body the country has ever known. Its job will be to redraft the nation's laws, regulations and form of government. It must make a new constitution and pass upon scores of perplexing problems, such as the status of Cataloma, the relation of church and state, the division of big estates, army reduction, budget and taxation, unemployment, revival of agriculture and industry, final disposition of properties formerly belonging to the crown, investigations of the financial operations of preceding regimes and possibly of the king's alleged responsibility for Spanish military disasters in Morocco.

The first thing the assembly will do will be to make the provisional republican government constitutional. It has the approval of the people as expressed in the municipal elections. But technically it will not be directly empowered by the people until a constituent assembly, elected with that authority, proclaims Spain a constitutional republic, writes such a constitution and names a republican government to succeed President Alcala Zamora's cabinet.

ANGLO-U. S. PACT ON MOVIES SOUGHT

British Critic Hits Intelligence of American Cinema Fan.

LONDON, June 6.—(UP)—The allegedly low mentality of the average American film fan must be taken into consideration if Great Britain is to save the United States from a movie famine, leaders of the industry here have been warned.

Their advisor, one of London's best known film critics, in discussing a reciprocity scheme with Hollywood and American theater owners, wrote: "There are two 'snags' in the outlook for reciprocity films. The first is that the average mentality in this country is more educated than it is in America, and British films intended for America must be pitched a little lower on that account."

Speed Production.

A movement is on foot here now to more than double the film output of Elstree, Britain's Hollywood. The leaders in the industry here have had one answer to criticisms from all sides on the quantity, quality and general inferiority of their product as compared with that of Hollywood. It has always been that their films did not have the large circulation of Hollywood offerings and therefore the sum of money that could be spent in their production was of necessity limited.

Experts, however, now point out that the Gaumont-British Pictures Corporation and British International Pictures who control more than 500 theaters in Great Britain are in a position to demand that Hollywood producers take an increased number of British films.

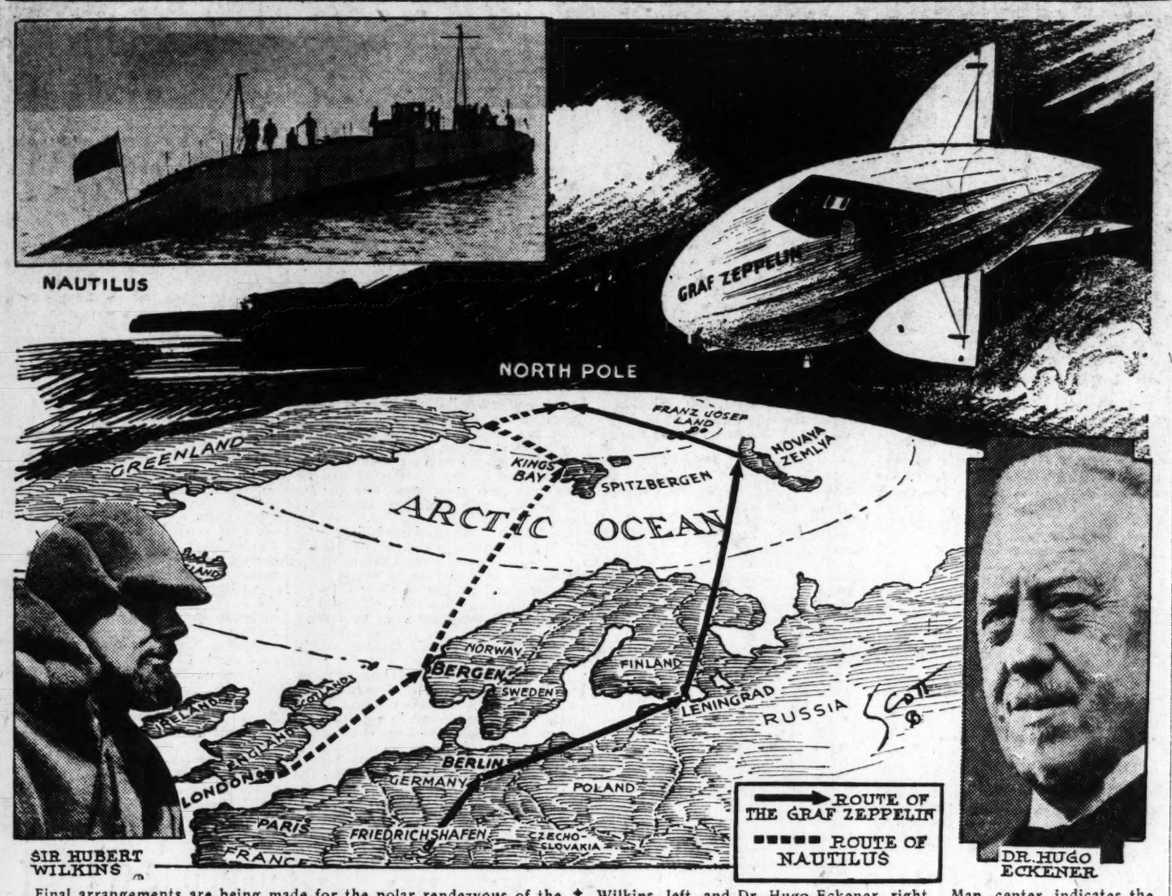

Scheme Worked Out.

It is reported that a definite "reciprocity" scheme with the United States has already been worked out, sponsored by Isadore Ostrer, brilliant financier and organizer, and sent to Hollywood for consideration.

If the proposed "reciprocity" proves successful, the British producer having access to the American market, it is said, will be able to untie the purse strings and produce on a more lavish scale than would be possible if he were assured of only a limited income provided by the British theaters alone.

Such an arrangement, it is believed, also would have the effect of encouraging Hollywood producers to establish studios in Great Britain and produce films which would rank as British films, giving employment to many and increasing the prestige abroad of the local industry.

Preparations Complete for Most Dramatic Rendezvous in History

Map, center, indicates the routes both craft will follow to the pole, where they hope to meet for most dramatic rendezvous in history.

STALIN LED REDS, WRITER ASSERTS

"Iron Man" of Russia Held Primary Role in Revolt, Biographer Claims.

BY EUGENE LYONS

NEW YORK, June 6.—(UP)—Joseph Stalin, now virtual dictator of the Soviet Union, played a much greater role in the earliest days of the Russian revolution than the outside world supposed.

This is one of the most striking facts revealed by the first full biography of the Bolshevik leader ever published, "Stalin," by Isaac Don Levine, just brought out by the Cosmopolitan Book Corporation here.

The limelight of world attention in the first years after the fall of the Romanoff dynasty was focused upon men like Lenin, Trotsky, Zinoviev and failed to pick out the iron-willed Georgian who now dominates the country. The erroneous impression was created that Stalin's part in the revolution was secondary.

Lenin's "Right Hand."

His biography refutes this impression, showing him as one of the prime movers of the events of 1917, the occupant of strategic political posts and a military leader of the first water. It reveals him as Lenin's "right hand man," in many respects closer to the father of Bolshevism than Leon Trotsky. Lenin's attack on Stalin for his "rude" political methods did not come until years later.

Stalin, it appears, was one of the inner group of five who engineered the actual seizure of power. Thereafter, Levine says, "Stalin became more than ever Lenin's right hand man." If Lenin used a political steam roller to crush all opposition inside or outside the Communist party, Stalin was at the wheel of the steam roller. Moreover, in solving the problem of the mutual relations among the nearly 200 different national and racial groups under the Red flag, Stalin took the lead.

"Stalin, more than any other leaders of his party," Levine writes, "is responsible for the cementing of the federation known as the Soviet Union. It was a problem of the first magnitude."

Stalin-Trotsky Duel.

The author served as correspondent in Russia in the first years of the revolution. He has not been there since the emergence of Stalin or during the period of strife between the Stalin and Trotsky factions.

The bulk of the book is devoted to a narrative of the epic duel between Stalin and Trotsky. The author seems to have followed rather closely the version of the duel given by Trotsky himself.

There is more information about the human, personal side of Stalin's career in this book than in anything else as yet published. Levine gathered all the facts available in print anywhere. Nevertheless, the sum-total of that information is still extremely small. His home life, his wives, his children are a small, almost negligible part of the Soviet leader's existence. Stalin lives for his cause. The story of his life simmers down to the story of that cause.

France Explains.

PARIS, June 6.—(AP)—Asked to clarify a report that the Pan-American Airways had been refused the right of refueling in French Guiana, the ministry of colonies said his probably was an erroneous interpretation of a general order issued recently to the authorities of all French colonies. This requires all foreign companies operating over French territory to make notification of their fuel needs well in advance.

King George, Astride Charger, Receives Horse Guards' Salute

LONDON, June 6.—(AP)—King George, for the first time since his serious illness in 1928, took the salute of trooping of the color at the horse guards' parade Saturday in observance of his 66th birthday anniversary. The ceremony was postponed from Wednesday so that he could attend the Derby at Epsom Downs.

His majest was a resplendent figure in a scarlet and gold uniform with the broad blue Ribbon of the Garter across his breast.

He was back again among his soldiers as he sat motionless on the big bay charger to take the salute, and the cheers which greeted his arrival was a testimonial of the pleasure of his people at seeing him astride a horse at a public function once again. Long before the king appeared distant cheering heralded his approach down the Mall.

Then the royal procession entered the parade ground in Whitehall, where the guardsmen were drawn up in two faultless lines.

In the middle were the colors of the Coldstream guard, chosen to be trooped this year. Four troopers with the sun beaming on the burnished breastplates rode before the king, who wore the uniform of colonel-in-chief of the Coldstreams.

Behind him rode the Prince of Wales in the uniform of the Welsh guards. He had traveled in the night from Scotland to be present at this ceremony.

The Duke of York, in the full dress uniform of the royal air force; the Duke of Gloucester, in the uniform of the Hussars; Prince Arthur of Connaught, the Earl of Athlone and the Earl of Harewood rode behind them.

Cheers rose from the great crowd as the king rode slowly around the ranks inspecting the guard before taking up his position for the salute. As he passed under the window of the home office he raised his white-gloved hand in salute to Queen Mary, the Duchess of York and other members of the royal family. The queen smiled down at him and little Princess Elizabeth waved her hand.

Then came the march of the troops, more than 1,800 officers and men, past their commander in chief.

Finally the guns boomed a royal salute and the procession reformed with the king at its head for the return to Buckingham palace.

BERLIN IRRITATED BY RISING TAXES

German Capital Sees Levies Mount Steadily and Swiftly.

BERLIN, June 6.—(AP)—While German scientists strive to perfect rockets which will zoom into the stratosphere, Berlin's taxes seem destined to be first to reach the superaltitudes.

Taxes are high and multitudinous. In addition to the extraordinary federal imposts under Chancellor Bruening's emergency decrees, which all Germans pay, Berliners have a municipal government which is unusually apt at spotting items for special taxation.

The levying of beer headtaxes last December set Berliners fuming. What they will say if Burgomeister Sahm approves a city council suggestion to double these, besides retaining the entertainment tax, which is already held accountable for the closing of 14 theaters, can be better imagined than printed.

It was last December, too, that a beverage tax was levied that caused thrifty citizens to drink their chocolate out of plates in restaurants and cafes, so as to make the beverage an untaxable soup.

The beer tax set them riding the busses and trains to remote suburbs for their Sunday afternoon "sociables," where they could drink without paying five pfennigs extra. True, there was no economy in the ride, unless the bout went long and hearty, but a man had the satisfaction of feeling he was smarter than the tax extractors. With the beer tax going up another five pfennigs, his satisfaction ought to double.

There's no way, however, to evade the "head" tax. It is levied through a little perforated slip attached to the regular tax statement, and must be paid with the total.

Other taxes peculiar to Berlin are a motorboat tax scaled to horsepower, a 24-horsepower boat costing $30, and a riding-horse tax, which is $30 straight.

Haunting the minds of the city fathers is the due-date of a loan of $150,000,000, just floated from international sources. Almost two-thirds of this is being applied to pay a previous loan.

GERMANY, HUNGARY TRADE TREATY SOUGHT

BERLIN, June 6.—(AP)—Representatives of Germany and Hungary have started negotiations for a German-Hungarian trade treaty. Preliminary work toward the agreement was done last November when Count Stephen Bethlen visited Berlin.

SLIGHT TREMOR FELT IN LONDON

Buildings in British Capital Sway; 'Quake Is Extensive.

LONDON, June 7.—(Sunday)—(AP)—A slight earth tremor was felt at 1:30 this morning in London and other parts of England.

Persons on night duty in buildings in London said they felt the structures sway.

Similar reports came from places as far apart as Swansea, Wales, and Norfolk, Bedfordshire.

Windows rattled throughout the city, and many people, feeling the shocks, hastily dressed and began inquiries.

A report from Hertfordshire said the tremor woke the inhabitants there and that it was accompanied by loud rumbling noise.

No damage was reported.

Officials on the top floor of the air ministry building said they felt the building shake.

Reports from Norfolk said the tremor was severe there, that it awakened the whole town, frightening the people and sending them rushing to the streets in alarm. A few people sleeping in higher buildings were reported thrown out of bed.

A severe thunderstorm preceded the shock and the sky afterward assumed a peculiar color.

Persian Oil Levy Hits British Firm

TEHERAN, Persia, June 6.—Because of the recent ultimatum by the Persian government for an increase in royalties on the production of oil the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, which is working the rich oil fields in southern Persia, has been badly hit.

Persia has become the fourth ranking country in the world in oil production, and the royalties paid to the Persion government last year amounted to close upon $8,000,000. The government's proposal now is to increase the royalties from 16 to 26 per cent.

The loss of British influence in Persia, where it once maintained a virtual monopoly, is glamed in various quarters to the enemies of Great Britain, particularly soviet Russia, which is trying, and with some success, to get a foothold in Persian trade and commerce. The Persian government itself is considered to be taking advantage of Great Britain's many difficulties in India to bring pressure to bear on British interests here.

ENGLAND REACTS TO KING'S EXILE

Case of Alfonso Arouses Demand for Parliament Reform.

LONDON, June 6.—(UP)—Rumblings from the recent overthrow of King Alfonso in Spain were heard in Great Britain, greatest of the few remaining monarchies, but they didn't rock the throne of King George.

The echoes took the form of a demand that parliament be reformed and transformed into a body of action instead of one of conversation. There is still one powerful school of thought here that blames Britain's decline as a world power upon ineffective politicians.

The causes of unrest, firebrand of revolt, are here just as they existed in countries where governments have been unseated and kings dethroned. Once the commercial mistress of the world, England has seen many of her foreign markets fall before the attack of United States, Germany and France; there are more than 2,000,000 unemployed, and millions of dollars are needed to rejuvenate industry which at present is antiquated.

More and more Great Britain must look to her dominions, who independent of the mother country. The British king is the symbol of empire unity. Thus, it is argued a republican form of government here would remove the last connecting link of the empire's vast possessions. The resultinging disintegration, economists say, would be felt in every home in England where the standard of living would be greatly reduced.

On the other hand, the parliamentary system here insures a government of the majority and politicians maintain a republican regime could offer no more. Outside of the great love the English bear for their king, as shown during his recurrent illness, the conservative nature of the Briton is believed to be a safeguard against revolt.

In addition there is the much-criticized unemployment insurance, more commonly known as the "dole" which statesmen of the liberal and labor parties insist is the greatest deterrent of an open insurgency.

Barbers Seek Tax On Safety Blades

BERLIN, June 6.—At the recent annual convention of the independent barbers' organization in Frankfort it was decided to press the German government to place a national or state tax on safety-razor blades. It is estimated that a tax of one and a quarter cents would produce a revenue of more than $3,000,000 yearly.

Astute observers of the complex political situation in Germany have gone so far as to suggest that the barbering boys may not have been acting from entirely disinterested motives in suggesting that life be made more expensive for the self-shavers. It is pointed out that barbers don't use safety razors and no tax is suggested on the common, garden variety razor.

Thus it may be that beards, imperials, side-whiskers and other facial shrubbery will be encouraged by legislation and dexterous self shavers are calling upon their friends to unite to protect the freedom of the razor blade.

Giant Seaplane, DO-X Will Be Overhauled

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 6.—(AP)—The giant German seaplane, DO-X, will remain at Natal, Brazil, at least three weeks for overhauling before proceeding here, it was officially announced today.

The great flying boat has been in the water constantly for two months, making repairs and readjustments necessary, it was said.

The boat also is to be refurnished inside.

The DO-X will proceed from Rio De Janeiro to the United States.

Queen Helen's Picture May Lose Royal Place

BUCHAREST, Rumania, June 6.—(AP)—Incidental to her reported expulsion from the royal family, Queen Helen's portraits may be removed from beside those of King Carol.

Patria, official organ of the peasants' party, says the cabinet has issued a confidential order that her pictures be taken down from government offices.

TWO PROVINCES IN SOUTH CHINA QUIT NATIONALS

Secessionists Reported Successful in Repudiating Nanking Under Chiang Kai-shek.

TOKYO, June 6.—(AP)—A new government in Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces, South China, opposed to nationalist rule, was reported today in Rengo news agency dispatches from Canton.

Eugene Chen, styling himself foreign minister of the Canton government, sent a telegram to representatives of foreign governments in Peiping, repudiating the Nanking central government.

The telegram was dated June 2. Believing it might have been suppressed by the censorship with which the nationalists shrouded the civil war developing in south China, Chen gave a copy today to foreign consuls in Canton, requesting it to be forwarded to the Peiping diplomatic corps.

Large bodies of troops have been mobilizing for weeks in south China for the expected struggle between secessionists of Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces and the nationalist government, headed by General Chiang Kai-shek. Before a censorship was imposed, dispatches said the nationalists were assembling 250,000 soldiers in neighboring provinces to march against the 100,000 troops asserted by insurgents to be gathering in Kwangtung to unseat the "Dictator" Chiang.

Leadership of the south China insurgents was assumed a few days ago by Eugene Chen, former foreign minister of the nationalist government, deposed because of his asserted communistic sentiments. Associated recently with Chen and other leaders was Sun Fo, son of Sun Yat-Sen, founder of the Chinese republic.

Victorious over provincial war lords in 1926 and 1927, Chiang led his Cantonese armies after a series of battles to form the nationalist government at Nanking, backed by the Kuomintang (the national people's party).

SPANISH CABINET ELECTIONEERING

Major Issues Will Await Meeting of Constituent Assembly in July.

MADRID, June 6.—(AP)—Members of the first Spanish republican cabinet since 1873 turned tonight from administrative cares to electioneering.

The most stubborn problems facing the new republic, including the Vatican question, labor, unemployment and agrarian problem, as well as the question of Catalonian independence, can wait, it was believed, until the constituent assembly meets in July. In the meantime the members of the cabinet will look to their political future.

Five of the ministers left today to begin campaigns for deputyships in the new Cortes and others will leave soon. Minister of Justice De Los Rios left for Granada; Minister of Public Works Albornoz for Murcia, Minister of War Azana and Foreign Minister Lerroux for Valencia, Minister of Instruction Domingo for Tortosa, Minister of Communications Martinez Barrios is already campaigning at Seville, while Minister of Interior Maura expects to leave next Sunday to begin his campaign at Zamora.

Honduran Aviator Faces Court-Martial

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, June 6.—(AP)—Press reports today said the war office was forming a court-martial to try Lisandro Garay, aviator, who is now in New York and who recently was planning a non-stop flight from New York to Tegucigalpa.

The charges against Garay, it was said, would be that he failed to return to Honduras, after a government order, to take part in military operations against the rebels.

The report said the government would probably seek to extradite him from the United States.

'FOREIGN POWER' BEHIND SOCIETY, FASCISTS AVER

Radio Reply to Vatican Challenge Accepted by Observers as Having Official Sanction of the Mussolini Faction.

CHURCH RESPECTED, SAYS STATEMENT

Matter of Prohibition of Religious Processions Ordered by Pope, It Is Asserted.

ROME, June 6.—(AP)—The Catholic Action Society was described tonight, in a radio broadcast purporting to give the Italian side of the government's controversy with Pope Pius XI, as "a strong organization taking orders from a foreign power."

The declaration was broadcast during the regular evening program of the Roman radio station. It did not purport to be official, but it was pointed out that it would undoubtedly not have been broadcast unless it represented an official view.

Catholic priests were accused in the broadcast of "black ingratitude" to fascism, which, it said, "guarantees religious liberty."

This unofficial reply to the Vatican and to the speeches of Pope Pius XI was made on the eve of the second anniversary of the ratification of the Vatican treaty and the concordat, the two documents which ended the popes' 59 years as "prisoners in the Vatican."

Papal Declaration.

It came also at the end of a day when the pope had declared: "We are fighting a battle for liberty of conscience." The pope's declaration was made during an address to a group of Catholic members of the fascist organization.

Italian listeners were reminded that fascism gave a place of honor to the church, which was "badly protected by preceding governments." It declared the church and not the fascist state had deprived the people of their religious processions. It said that many processions had occurred, with perfect order, through the co-operation of fascist authorities, in places where the pope's prohibition against them was disregarded.

The condition of the church in Italy was compared with that in "other countries, where it is really persecuted." The pope, it said, instead of criticizing those countries, spoke "sharp words against Italy."

Political Activity.

Referring to the demand made yesterday by an editorial in the Osservatore Romano that proof be offered that the Catholic Action Society was political, it said the society "had all the externals of a political party," and that most of the leaders, and many of the members, belonged to the old anti-fascist popular party which has been dissolved.

The act of the society, it was declared, also supported the political charge. Premier Mussolini's action in proceeding against the clubs was declared to have been justified by the government's high duty to defend itself. No government in the world, it said, would have permitted such a state of affairs.

"All the revelations of the Lavoro Fascista (fascist organ) have been at least 99 per cent confirmed," it said, "by the Osservatore Romano, which confined itself to corrections of form, and not of substance.

Respect for Church.

"Regarding the persecutions spoken of in Vatican circles, everyone can see that they are ridiculous attempts to make the church appear as a victim in a country where thousands of foreigners can testify to the respect shown priests, prelates, churches and church functions.

"Moreover, it is observed what black ingratitude is displayed by priests against fascism, which has guaranteed religious liberty throughout Italy, after it was poorly protected by preceding governments.

"If there were no public processions on Corpus Christi it was only by order of the ecclesiastical authorities. Yet they tried to make the people believe that it was the government that prohibited these functions. Wherever the order against the processions failed to arrive on time, or where local ecclesiastical authorities

First Picture Of Famous Gap

All the world knows of Rabun Gap, made famous by perfervid orators, but it has never been pictured. The Constitution-Chevrolet Roving Photographic car and its crew of expert photographers brought back a panorama of the range in which this noted Georgia gateway is located and it appears in today's roto section.

The slightest misjudgment meant certain death when a trio of vaudeville actors did their stunts on the top coping of one of Atlanta's skyscrapers. There was a Constitution photographer present and the pictures he got are displayed in today's gravure section.

The section is full of punch and beauty from cover to cover. Turn to it now.

HORTON TO FACE 7 MORE CHARGES

Congressman Crump Will Continue Fight on Tennessee Governor.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 6.—(AP)—Tennessee's house of representatives, after quashing one article of impeachment against Governor Henry H. Horton, turns next week to the consideration of seven charges awaiting disposition one by one. Upon reconvening Monday night from the week-end recess the legislators will hold a session devoted entirely to local legislation and resume impeachment debate Tuesday.

By a vote of 58 to 41 the house Friday defeated a presentment alleging that the governor conspired with Colonel Luke Lea, publisher, and Rogers Caldwell, financier, to promote his political ambitions by letting them dominate certain governmental departments for their private gain. In order to avert the possibility of reconsideration, impeachment opponents quashed the indictment definitely by voting 52 to 47 to reject it.

Administration forces saw in the first test the throwing out of all the proceedings, but Congressman E. H. Crump, Memphis political leader, and others leading the fight on what they term "corruption" in the state government said they were not deterred by the initial setback. Horton interpreted the house's action as "a victory for good government and righteousness."

The next article to be taken up probably will be the one charging Horton with dereliction of duty by failing to have proper estimates made of the amount of surety bonds that officials and employes handling state money are required to give.

Three days of debate preceded the roll call on the first article, but indications were that the others would be acted upon without lengthy discussion. Unless the legislature should decide to meet on Saturdays and Sundays, only 18 legislative days will remain after Monday.

VOORHIS SOUNDS CALL FOR CHEST WORKERS

Need of 2,000 volunteer workers for the canvass next fall to raise the Community Chest fund for Atlanta's social service work was expressed Saturday by Hal G. Voorhis, general chairman of the campaign, in his first statement of tentative plans.

Enthusiasm and devotion of the campaign organization must of necessity be greater this year than ever before, Mr. Voorhis pointed out, because the need of helpfulness is greater, the result of conditions.

Of the campaign plans, Mr. Voorhis said:

"In taking over the general chairmanship of the campaign, which is to be held this fall to raise the 1932 Community Chest fund, I desire to express my appreciation of the fact that those who were successful in last year's campaign are enthusiastic for this one.

"The organization of the Community Chest Workers' Association was a master stroke. The victory of last year has been kept alive. During the next sixty days we shall be organizing our volunteer personnel for the fall campaign. We shall not only look to the Association of Chest Workers to help us, but I sincerely hope that every citizen will regard himself as sufficiently interested in the success of this undertaking to accept some responsibility when asked or, better still, to volunteer his aid."

WAR ON RACKETEERING URGED BY DRY LEADER

BALTIMORE, June 6.—(AP)—Urging war on racketeering, Deets Pickett, research secretary of the Methodist Episcopal board of temperance, said today democracy was at stake in America.

The prohibition leader told the laymen's association of the Baltimore conference of the Methodist Episcopal church that unless the law is successfully enforced the people of the United States will resort to violence "to crush activities of privileged gangsters and extortioners.

"The vigilantes of the west did it," he said. "For five years the Texas rangers were the law in Texas, and they shot down thousands of criminals in orders to free that state from professional gamblers and gunmen. . . . What happened in the west will happen in the east unless business men and professional men of standing and patriotism read the riot act to their officials, who call infidelity to their oaths of office by the name of liberalism."

Pickett said law-abiding Chicago citizens could not engage in certain trades without paying tribute to gangsters and added that recent Washington killings were described as having "gangster aspects."

"The politician who talks of his liberalism, who inveighs against the prohibition law, who winks at gambling, is defending a system which endangers the personal safety of your daughter, which may cost you your life, which may at least mean the ruin of your business," Pickett said. "We need men in office who are willing to take the oath of office with sincerity, men with backbone to make that oath mean law in action, and jurymen who realize that organized gambling is not a joke but a menace."

Mrs. Marion Shearer Kills Self With Gun

VENICE, Cal., June 6.—(UP)—Marion Shearer, 35-year-old sister-in-law of Norma Shearer, screen actress, stepped up to a shooting gallery on the Venice pier late today, ordered a pistol for "target practice" and fired a bullet through her head.

Mrs. Shearer previously fired several times at a moving target. Her husband, Douglas Shearer, is a sound technician at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. A large crowd witnessed her act. Police were unable to ascribe a motive.

Pallbearers Chosen, Banker Kills Self

PONTIAC, Mich., June 6.—(UP)—After writing a note to his wife, listing preferred pallbearers, Klemer Smith, 53, president of the Pontiac Commercial & Savings bank, went to the private suite of a hotelman tonight and shot himself through the head.

Ascribing the suicide to ill health, John Patterson, chairman of the board of directors of the bank, declared the institution's accounts were sound.

CAPONE'S LAWYER SEIZES PROPERTY

MIAMI, Fla., June 6.—(AP)—Deputy sheriffs tonight attached Al Capone's Palm Island residence and removed a part of its furnishings, following the filing of a suit against him by Vincent C. Giblin, Miami attorney. The suit filed in circuit court seeks $50,000 which it alleged is on balance due Giblin as attorney fees.

Giblin said tonight he had made repeated requests to Capone to pay the balance. His last letter, he said, written May 8, was unanswered. The attorney did not say what fees had been paid by Capone.

Giblin and his associate, J. Fritz Gordon, represented Capone in several court actions here.

After a portion of the furnishings had been taken to a warehouse, further operations were ordered stopped at 10:30 p. m., when Giblin said he had been informed Capone would communicate with him during the night. The officers said they had been ordered to halt the further removal of the furnishings until Monday.

PERJURY CHARGES WILL BE PUSHED

CHICAGO, June 6.—(AP)—Double trouble was brewed for Al Capone today.

District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson announced he had detailed income tax prosecutors on his staff to see that Capone does not go free of tax evasion charges.

He revealed that hoodlums and gangsters who testified falsely when they were called before the grand jury, which indicted Capone to tell what they knew of his underworld operations are to be prosecuted for perjury.

"I'd like to get this case out of the way this summer," Johnson said.

At the same time he denied any negotiations with Capone or his lawyers for a barter which would bring a plea of guilty in exchange for "a satisfactory sentence."

"There have been no negotiations of any kind," he said.

Capone faces the possibility of a 32-year penitentiary sentence and a fine of $80,000 for alleged evasion of the government income tax.

This is the maximum sentence possible if he is convicted on the charges on which he surrendered yesterday, following his indictment by a federal grand jury.

The indictments constituted but one of a series of blows the government has struck at Capone, whose income from his liquor, vice and gambling interests are reputed to have reached enormous sums. Within a few hours after the news of Capone's indictment became public, Sam Guzik, one of his lieutenants, was on his way to the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., to serve a sentence of a year and a day for an income tax violation.

Almost simultaneously federal agents announced they had broken up what they referred to as a subsidiary of the Capone liquor syndicate, with the arrests of 20 men in Illinois and Iowa.

U. S. TO OPEN WAR ON NEW YORK GANGS

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(UP)—While the federal government awaited the next move in its anti-gangster operations in the Chicago area, directed against the giant liquor racket built up by Al Capone, officials tonight looked forward to a similar intensive campaign in New York city.

They promised some "interesting developments" in the near future as the result of the undercover investigation of rackets of all sorts in Manhattan which has been carried on for some time and which has been successful thus far in a minor way.

Gambling Casino Rising on Edge Of Boulder City

LAS VEGAS, Nevada, June 6.—(AP)—Almost on the edge of Boulder City, which the government has planned as a "model" town for workers on Hoover dam, steam shovels were tearing up the desert soil today for construction of a gambling casino and dance hall.

The venture brought to light the fact that the government, which presumably held all lands adjoining Boulder City and would be able to keep vice and gambling operations miles away, does not own a 20-acre strip of patent land within a mile of the city. On this propery steam shovels have begun their work.

Simultaneously it was disclosed the commissioners of Clark county, in which Las Vegas is located, have granted a gambling permit to a group of men, giving them the right to build the casino. The commissioners refused to divulge the names in the permit.

SMUGGLING OF ALIENS REVEALED BY ARRESTS

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—An alleged ring which in the last five years has smuggled hundreds of Chinese into the United States at $500 to $1,000 a head was revealed Thursday. Federal agents announced the arrest of five men and United States Attorney George Z. Medalie began presentation of evidence against them to a federal grand jury.

The Chinese were said by officials to have been picked up in Trinidad, West Indies, and brought to the United States on regularly scheduled ships with the co-operation of members of the crew.

If the gang feared capture, the Chinese were dropped overboard at sea, but not until their "fare" had been collected, authorities said.

Sex Story Magazines Banned in Texas Town

BIG SPRINGS, Texas, June 6.—(UP)—An order prohibiting the sale of magazines containing "sex stories" in this west Texas town was being enforced today.

The prohibition order aims especially at stories with sex themes. To enforce the rule and act as censor, a board of inspectors has been created by the city commission. The board will issue licenses to news dealers and pass on the magazines, periodicals, pamphlets and other printed matter offered for sale.

The board was instructed to inspect printed matter to determine whether it is "immoral or indecent or calculated to corrupt the morals of youth or the public generally."

Atlanta sales of cotton merchandise increased as much as 200 per cent in some instances as the result of National Cotton Week, which closed Saturday with the award of $1,000 in prizes to local stores by the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia for the best window displays of cotton products.

Enthusiastic statements of local merchants regarding the effect of the week on their businesses were accompanied by the prediction that National Cotton Week will be made an annual event. Observance in Atlanta of the week contributed greatly not only to prosperity of the various branches of the cotton growing, marketing, manufacturing and merchandising industries, but it was an important factor in the widespread upturn of business in general, it was said.

Prizes Are Announced.

Prizes were awarded as follows for window displays of cotton goods:

Drug stores, first, $60, Marechal's, Inc., 30 Marietta; second, $40, Crawford Drug Company, 122 Forsyth street.

Sporting Goods, first, $60, A. G. Spalding & Bro.; second, $40, Parks-Chambers, Inc.

Ladies' furnishings, first $60, Rich's, Inc.; second, $40, J. P. Allen & Company.

Home furnishings, first, $60, Sears, Roebuck & Company; second, $40, J. M. High Company.

Auto accessories and (or) tires, first, $60, Sears, Roebuck & Company; second, $40, Quick Tire Service, 603 West Peachtree.

Many attractive exhibits were entered in the contest. Awards were based entirely on the display of cotton merchandise actually for sale within the stores.

"Our cotton dress business for this week has been almost double the same week a year ago," declared J. P. Allen, president of J. P. Allen & Company. "In fact, our entire season has been very gratifying on cotton dresses. We believe that the extra promotion now being done by the association will ultimately be a great benefit to the retailer and also stimulate interest in cotton goods."

Rich Praises Association.

W. H. Rich, president of Rich's, Inc., complimented the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia on the splendid results of Cotton Week, and said that sales at Rich's will be at least 20 per cent more in volume all over the house, inclusive of cottons. Mr. Rich feels that it should be an annual event.

L. A. Wilhoit, advertising manager of the Davison-Paxon Company, declared that National Cotton Week was the biggest week in cotton piece goods in the history of the store, more cotton items being sold to more individual customers than ever before. On one window devoted to sheets, the department showed 210 per cent increase for the opening day, Mr. Wilhoit said. "In cotton fabrics and domestics, National Cotton Week showed an increase of 100 per cent over the average of this spring," he added. "National Cotton Week was not only dramatic, colorful and interesting, but it was a definite producer of greatly increased business in this store."

P. L. Jacobs, merchandising manager of the Keely Company, reported excellent results in his store, and expressed hope that the association will continue to sponsor the week each year.

A. R. Dorsen, general manager of the J. M. High Company, noticed an increase in volume of cotton piece goods of 10 to 12 per cent over what otherwise have been realized. Cotton rugs showed an increase in the neighborhood of 200 to 300 per cent, he said.

Hearty support was given National Cotton Week by Bradstreet in a recent edition of its journal of trade, finance and public economy. Attached to the journal was an announcement printed on cotton cloth, extending greetings to the cotton industry and expressing cordial wishes for success of cotton week. Stories based on cotton week appeared in the publication.

NAVY WILL JOIN ECONOMY BRIGADE

ORANGE, Va., June 6.—(AP)—Secretary Adams today informed President Hoover at a Rapidan camp conference that savings during the current fiscal year in the navy department had amounted to approximately $10,000,000 and that preliminary estimates for next year indicate they will run from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000.

It was determined that the island of Guam is no longer of any military value and that all activities there will be reduced to the minimum required by the civil government.

The navy appropriation for last year was $380,000,000 and for the coming fiscal year $360,101,000.

Most of the savings this year resulted from decommissioning a number of destroyers and reassigning a number of battleships. Through this operation 4,800 men whose enlistments expired were not replaced.

The navy last August had 84,500 enlisted men and at the present time has approximately 79,700.

A statement from official sources said every division of the navy was combed for economies that could be effected without sacrificing efficiency. Exhaustive studies, it was said, are being conducted with a view of increasing savings without danger to employment or inefficiency in training.

The meeting between the president and the navy officials began early in the afternoon after Secretary Adams had come to the camp in an autogiro plane with Assistant Secretary Ingalls at the controls.

Adams said he enjoyed his flight.

President Hoover came to his camp yesterday afternoon, making an unannounced and hurried departure from the White House. He spent the morning working on a speech which he will deliver about the middle of this month.

Mrs. Hoover arrived at the camp this morning accompanied by her son, Allen Hoover, who is home from Harvard where he is taking a post-graduate course in the business school.

Representative Simmons, of Nebraska, and Mrs. Simmons and Hugh Gibson, ambassador to Belgium, were guests.

Devastation of Crops By Grasshoppers Seen

BUTTE, Neb., June 6.—(UP)—Tons of poison bran mash were prepared by grain farmers of Nebraska and South Dakota today in the fight to save crops from hordes of striped yellow grasshoppers.

So important was the battle that routine tasks, corn planting and cultivation, were put aside while federal and state authorities of the two states met with farmers to consider methods of combatting the invasion.

Not since the historic grasshopper plagues of the 60's and 70's, when the sun was obscured by the insect swarms and fields left barren in their wake, has such a condition developed.

The threat is regarded as serious. The Rosebud region of South Dakota has been laid waste as the army of small hoppers marched through fields of barley, oats, rye, wheat and even hay fields.

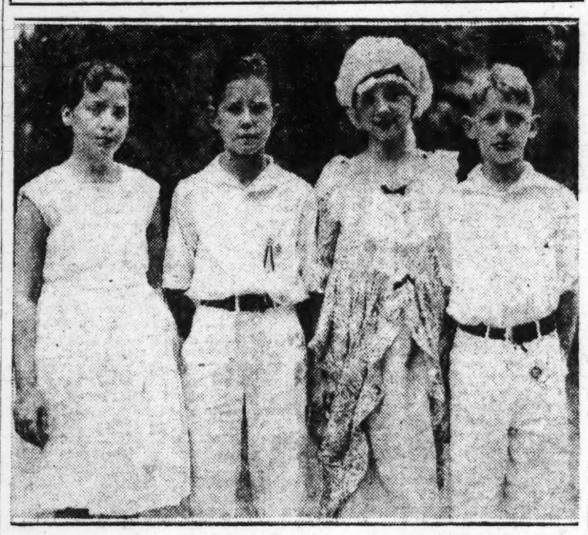

Surveys disclose that more than 2,000 square miles of farm land face invasion. New areas of infestation have been reported daily since the pests' first appearance.

SINGLE REGISTRATION ADVOCATED BY LEAGUE

A single permanent registration for all elections, city, county, state and national is provided in a bill prepared for presentation to the general legislature at its forthcoming session by the men's council of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, it was announced Saturday.

Officials of the council said they believed a single registration would result in a larger proportion of voters taking part in the various elections. The bill will be discussed at a meeting of the council Monday night at the Piedmont hotel, with W. Cecil Neill, of Columbus, the principal speaker.

Report of Al Capone Probe Reads Like Dime Novel

U. S. Agents Posed as Eastern Gunmen Looking for Job and 'Hobnobbed' With Gangsters.

BY CLEM LANE.

(Copyright, 1931, by N. A. N. A., Inc., and The Chicago Daily News.)

CHICAGO, June 6.—The inquiry into "Scarface Al" Capone's income—it took more than two years and enlisted at times more than a hundred men—was said by federal men today to have been the most thorough investigation ever conducted by the internal revenue department of the United States government, and the report of it reads like a dime novel.

The inquiry was conducted by the special intelligence unit of the internal revenue department—the local unit headed by A. P. Madden and special details from Washington sent by Elmer L. Irey, chief of the unit. The names of the individual agents were withheld by the government.

"But the agents, both the special men from Washington and our own men, did a great job," said Mr. Madden.

There were agents who posed as eastern gunmen looking for a job. They "hobnobbed" with gangsters in gangster haunts, attended their parties and banquets, frequented spots where a slip of the tongue might have made them the target for a hundred guns.

Agents scurried about the vast spider-web of Capone—its center in Chicago, its lines stretching into New York and Washington, to Florida and Pennsylvania, to Michigan and California.

Here there was the thrill of high adventure, the glamor of a man hunt; there the dull, prosaic but vital task of poring over bank records, wading through brokerage accounts, scanning the files of telegraph companies.

Aid came sometimes from unexpected sources, but mostly, the agents said, they found themselves against a stone wall of silence, silence on the part of the men who knew but who had greater fear of Capone and his machine-gun Micky Finn than of the government of the United States.

Agents Handicapped.

The agents were handicapped, too, by a wily foe.

So wily was Capone that rarely could they find where he had signed his name. Bank after bank, here and elsewhere, were combed in a futile hunt for a Capone bank account. Money he seemed to have at all times, but where he got it and how much he had were questions that kept the intelligence unit at work for more than two years.

When United States District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson determined to rid Chicago of gangs he looked about for a weapon. Prohibition inquiries usually netted only the hired men, who, refusing to talk, thwarted the efforts of the prosecution to indict and convict the bosses of booze and beer rings. The district attorney decided to utilize the income tax law.

The agents were set on the trail of the Capone gang. They went to Cicero, suburban stronghold of the hoodlum syndicate, to see what they could learn. They heard much gossip, but little that could be regarded as evidence. They checked the records of a Cicero bank. There they ran across a strange circumstance, a series of accounts in which the first name was always James—James Carter, James Costello and so on.

An account in the James series would run a month or two, then would be closed out, and, strange circumstance, a new James account would open with the balance of the old James account.

The bank officials were asked about these accounts. They professed ignorance, although District Attorney Johnson dryly observed they honored overdrafts of $4,000 to $6,000 a month.

The records of the James accounts had been done away, so federal men were forced to weary hours of examination of clearing house records. Into the James accounts they found the deposit of check after check made out by Cicero saloonkeepers.

They went to the saloonkeepers. What were the checks for?

"Chicken; we bought chickens to serve our customers," gravely replied the saloonkeepers.

"One saloonkeeper," observed District-Attorney Johnston, "had given checks for enough 'chicken' to feed all Chicago."

The hunt continued. A description records, thee found a photograph checks for the "chicken" was obtained. Through police bureau of identification records, they found a photograph of "the little man." It was identified by bank employes and saloonkeepers. Through him the bank accounts were linked to Ralph Capone, and the first step of the investigation was over.

A number of clews developed, for checks had cleared through the account that gave the federal men a number of other leads.

Jake Guzik's operations appeared in the account, and Sam Guzik's and Louie Lipschultz's and, most important, "Scarface Al" Capone's.

These incomes were investigated and further trails to the Al Capone income were indicated.

Internal revenue agents went to Washington to start the trail of the Liberty bonds. The trail led to the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, thence through a half dozen more Chicago banks and through other hands and were finally linked to the government investigation.

Agents were sent into the Michigan oil field about Muskegon and a tip that Capone had interests there. They went to California on the report that he owned ranch property in that state. They went to Pennsylvania, to Philadelphia, where Capone had spent something less than a year in jail for gun toting; to Villa Nova, where Capone's younger brother, Mathew, had gone to school.

The federal men went to Florida, where Capone maintained a winter home, and where many of the telegraph remittances from Guzik and other lieutenants had reached him.

They learned that Capone was accustomed to paying for everything in currency—using currency for even a transaction such as the purchase of a $175,000 estate or a $40,000 yacht. They learned he loved to gamble—that he could toss away thousands of dollars at a gambling table or a race track and finally they learned enough about Capone's income to ask and obtain an indictment.

"The agents talked to more than a thousands persons," Chief Agent Madden said today, "in prosecuting the inquiry."

BAUER IS SOUGHT FOR GAS SURVEY

Atlanta moved Saturday to begin at once an independent appraisal of Atlanta Gas Light Company properties and City Attorney James L. Mayson was instructed to communicate with Dr. John J. Bauer, rate expert of New York, and offer him the job.

The commission has before it an appeal that it fix temporary rates at once pending the city's appraisal. If the city notifies the commission before June 13 that it will make the appraisal, the commission has announced that it will "approach with an open mind" whatever facts are established in the city's survey.

It has been indicated, however, that a decision will be announced "about the 15th of June" on the application of the company for a revision upward.

Councilman Joseph E. Berman, chairman of the council committee opposing the rate hike, conferred with Mayson after a meeting Saturday. Dr. Bauer is the rate expert of the Municipal Utilities Rate Association of Georgia and assisted that organization in Atlanta in presenting arguments against the company's petition.

Councilman Joseph E. Berman, chairman of the committee, stated he feels that the valuation of the properties of the Atlanta Gas Light Company will be cut from $10,000,000 to $7,000,000 by the survey, thus saving Atlantans $210,000 annually.

BLACKINGRATITUDE LAID TO CATHOLICS

thought they could disregard it, the processions took place in perfect order.

Exaggeration Claimed.

"In short, it is a case of exaggeration that inevitably calls up a comparison of Italy with many countries where the church really is persecuted and against which we have not heard the sharp words which were pronounced against the Italian state, where religion has been restored to its true place.

"The declaration that the Catholic Action Society did not have a political character is completely false. It had banners, badges, cards and all the other external forms of a party.

"Moreover, and this is more grave, its leaders were almost entirely members, or even leaders, of that popular party which was one of the strongest opponents of fascism. Also, a considerable part of its acts were particularly political and had nothing to do with religious education or the propagation of the faith.

"The strongest argument that can be advanced to justify the dissolution of the Young Catholic clubs is the defense of the state, which is more than a mere duty of any government.

"There had come to be created the absurd situation of a strong organization taking orders from a foreign power—the Vatican state. No government in the world would have allowed it to exist, any more than Italy, which fought for centuries for its independence and political liberty."

The broadcast was made by a private corporation operating under government license.

It was given during an interval between musical programs as regular "wireless news." Broadcast news comes under the supervision of the prefect in the same way as newspapers.

Cross Sections of Life In Gate City of South

Mayor James L. Key will get one of Atlanta's most cordial receptions when he arrives here about June 25 from France, where he is a visitor, it was announced Saturday by Luke Arnold, executive secretary. The police and fire department bands and several private organizations will participate.

Homer Gullatt, member of the Georgia house of representatives from Campbell county, has been invited to address a meeting of the DeKalb County League of Men Voters at the courthouse, Decatur, at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday night on the proposed merger of DeKalb and Fulton. Gullatt led the successful fight for the consolidation of Campbell and Fulton, which takes place January 1, 1932.

Employment of Atlanta and Fulton county labor only in rebuilding of the Broad street viaduct was asked Saturday in a councilmanic resolution offered by Councilman Ed L. Almand and passed by the council.

Councilman Claude L. Barnwell, of the sixth ward, who is ill at St. Joseph's infirmary, where he was taken for an appendicitis operation, was honored Saturday by council. Resolutions of regret were passed and Borough Clerk J. Henson Tatum was ordered to send flowers in the name of his colleagues.

Two members of the Atlanta fire department will leave Atlanta June 10 for a course at the Detroit training school, under council action Saturday. A fund of $500 was set up for this purpose. They will act as instructors to other firemen on their return.

Former Councilman Wiley I. Moore Saturday was officially thanked for a $1,000 contribution to the police radio station. Council unanimously passed a resolution commending his action.

Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood and his family are in the mountains near Asheville, N. C., for a week.

Johnson H. Sutton, former secretary of J. K. Orr Shoe Company, Saturday was given 36 months by Judge G. H. Howard, of superior court, on forgery and embezzlement charges. Sutton was charged with misapplication of funds of the company, an estate and a mission fund, and was accused of forging names of officials to stock certificates. He entered a plea of guilty.

Judge T. O. Hathcock will speak at the opening service of the Grant Park Christian church revival scheduled for 7:45 o'clock tonight.

2 SOLONS OPPOSE NEW SCHOOL PLAN

Two of the four members of the Georgia assembly from DeKalb county Saturday failed to concur in the proposal of Legislator-elect William G. McRae, of Fulton, to establish a metropolitan school district including the Atlanta and Fulton county systems.

A portion of the Atlanta system lies in DeKalb.

Senator John Wesley Weekes, of the 34th district, objected to the tax levying provisions of the McRae proposal, while Representative Paul Lindsay said the Atlanta system should be divorced from council, but should not include so much territory.

Henry A. Beaman, a second legislator, would not comment, and Roy A. Leathers, third member of the delegation, could not be reached for a statement.

McRae proposed to include all Atlanta in the metropolitan district provided DeKalb legislators agreed, and, if they dissented, to cut off that portion lying in DeKalb, and turn it over to the DeKalb county system.

SPEEDWAY RACE FOCUSSES ATTENTION ON DIESEL-ENGINED CARS

Thirty-One Gallons of Fuel Consumed in Long Grind at Indianapolis.

BY E. Y. WATSON.

DETROIT, Mich., June 6.—As an aftermath of last week's Indianapolis motor speedway race, attention has been focused on the future possibility of Diesel operation for automobiles with furnace oil as fuel.

At Indianapolis, C. L. Cummins, engineer, of Columbus, Ind., who developed the Cummins-Diesel oil-burning racer, showed that he "had something."

His oil-burning car—with its tortoise-like speed compared with the gasoline-driven entries — accomplished something that no other car has ever been found capable of in 19 years on the speedway.

It ran 500 consecutive miles in competition with never a stop. The car, piloted by Dave Evans, with Thane House as mechanic, averaged 86.17 miles an hour. While it was moving unhampered by the caution flag that thrice warned the racers to slow down and hold relative positions because rain made maximum speed dangerous, the lone oil-burner was hitting off between 89 and 90 miles an hour without a falter.

In the official list of finishers, the Diesel at first was placed twelfth, but a protest and recheck put it back one notch and in the thirteenth position without altering the time average. This was in a field of 40 cars that were started, 15 of which failed to last out because of mechanical trouble, accidents and other causes.

In making the run, Evans started the Diesel off with 35 gallons of oil in the fuel tank. Only 31 gallons were used and only three quarts of water were required to replenish the radiator after the car came in.

An official view of the car's performance was expressed by W. D. Edenburg, chief steward of the A. A. A. contest board.

"The Cummins car," he said, "covered 500 miles without a stop and burned only 31 gallons of furnace oil. In speed, it suffered more than the gasoline cars in the controlled field during the rain as it did not have the reserve speed to make up the distance when the control was removed, never averaging much above 90 miles an hour.

"However, to the engineers its run meant a great deal more than it does to the racing fan and the layman."

The performance of the oil-power is significant in more ways than one. During the same week, an airplane using a Packard-Diesel engine stayed aloft longer than any other plane has ever done without refueling. In an endurance flight at Jacksonville, Fla., it stayed in the air 84 hours and 33 minutes, or nine hours and 10 minutes above the former record.

The Packard engineers who have developed the Diesel principle for aircraft use, have confined it to that field. Up to now, they have been cold on the possibilities for automobile usage.

In Germany, Diesel engine power for busses has reached an advanced stage. One year ago, a German bus with oil-burning equipment which had been imported to this side and rebuilt in Philadelphia, was driven overland to the Society of Automotive Engineers' meeting at French Lick, Ind. There, it engaged critical attention and comment.

It remained for Mr. Cummins, however, to work the idea up for automobiles. He is credited with adapting a marine type power plant to motor car use. As the car was raced last week, the engine had four cylinders with cubic inch displacement of 366 inches. Empty, it weighed 3,580 pounds. The chassis was a Duesenberg Model A, the design of which dates back to 1925.

Cummins in his little plant at Columbus, Ind., completed his first Diesel for passenger-car use a little more than a year ago. He drove it from Indianapolis to New York during the 1930 automobile show and averaged 27 miles to the gallon of oil fuel. This model had a speed of 60 miles an hour.

The same spring, Cummins took another model he had built to Florida, and at Daytona Beach he averaged 80 miles an hour in an official trial. This spring, he took still another car with a stream-lined racing body to Daytona and set an official record of 100.75 miles an hour. This was the same car with slight changes that was raced on the speedway.

In operation, the engine is similar to the gasoline motors as far as movement of the pistons is concerned, but no spark plugs or carburetor are required. The fuel is ignited by compression of air in the cylinders until it becomes so hot that it ignites the oil which is forced in the combustion chambers in vapor-like form.

In the speedway preliminary trials this year, the Cummins was the first car out on the track for qualification. In the 10-mile distance, it averaged 96.87 miles an hour, thereby waiving a special low speed minimum of 80 miles an hour which had been conceded for Diesels by the contest board. Ninety miles an hour minimum was required of the gas cars.

During both the trials and the race, the Diesel emitted no excess smoke, which heretofore had been one of the objections to it.

Summer School At High Museum To Open Monday

Art classes at the High Museum of Art will open a summer school on Monday. The courses will continue for six weeks and are expected to prove very valuable and popular with students whose time in the winter and spring months is largely taken up with school and college work.

An innovation for the summer school of art this year is a class for younger children, approximately between the ages of 10 and 16. This will meet three mornings a week, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, from 9 to 11 o'clock. It will also continue for six weeks.

Exhibition of the winners and other entrants for the Robert L. Foreman award is still on at the museum and will continue through June 15. This award is given annually for the best painting of a scene in or near Atlanta. It is open to all artists and the entrants include some really splendid pieces of work. The winning painting this year was of the Terminal station.

There is also on exhibit one gallery filled with work of the students in the art classes at the museum, displaying the remarkable progress made since these courses were inaugurated some three or four years ago.

The museum is open to the general public without charge. On Sunday afternoons it is open from 2 to 5 and it is open daily from 10 to 5 as well as on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings from 7 to 10.

CHOSEWOOD DENIES GRAND JURY CHARGES

Charges contained in indictments returned against him Friday by the Fulton county grand jury are groundless, Charles L. Chosewood, former councilman from the third ward, declared Saturday in a statement to the press. Chosewood said that he does not understand why the charges are made against him, and that he does not know "who is at the bottom of them, because I have no knowledge of ever having done anyone any wrong or injury."

Chosewood said that he is not guilty of previous indictments returned against him, and that he always has endeavored to do his full duty as a councilman and to live honestly as a citizen. "I have never during my whole life acquired, either in or out of council, any property illegally through any connection I have had with the city of Atlanta," he said. Indictments against Chosewood returned Friday accuse him of simple larceny in four counts and interest in city contracts in six counts.

Lived Here 50 Years.

In his statement Saturday Chosewood said:

"I notice in The Constitution this morning a statement to the effect that the grand jury presented two bills against me, one of simple larceny, charging me with having stolen during 1922 and 1923 various materials, and one charging me with graft in contracts made by my son with the city of Atlanta.

Demanded Trial.

"The first indictment filed against me was in March, 1930. The case was not placed on the calendar for trial until the fall of 1930, at which time I was unable to appear in court on account of trouble with my eyes, and the solicitor very kindly consented for the case to go over until I was able to be present in court. The first case was called some time in January or February, when my counsel interposed a demurrer to the indictment, which was sustained by the court, and a new indictment was returned at 6 o'clock the same afternoon, and the solicitor wanted to put me on trial the next morning at 9 o'clock, but my counsel claimed further time for preparing for trial under the second indictment. I have been trying through my counsel to have this second indictment tried ever since and the solicitor now has prepared a third indictment with the same offense charged as in the first indictment, and a statement has been made in the press that the solicitor is to put me on trial the twenty-second day of this month on this last indictment. This was after a demand placed on the docket requiring the solicitor to try the second indictment against me, for the first time. I was indicted on six counts in the second indictment for offenses charged against me alleged to have occurred, five of which were in 1927, 1928 and 1929, and the sixth count for something that occurred in February, 1929, involving a contract made between my son, C. L. Chosewood Jr., and the city of Atlanta for the erection of a building in Grant park, charging me with having profited from and being interested in said concession, which is absolutely untrue."

HUEY LONG'S FOE QUIET ON '29 OFFER

NEW ORLEANS, June 6.—(AP)—The Times-Picayune will say tomorrow that Lieutenant Governor Paul N. Cyr told them over the telephone that he did not wish now to be placed in the position of discussing overtures reported made to him in regard to his recent offer to resign his position if Governor Huey P. Long would leave the governor's chair.

The report was that the lieutenant governor was asked whether he would redeem his offer of nearly two years ago to resign if the governor would resign.

"The matter is one of very great delicacy at the moment," the paper quoted Mr. Cyr as saying. "Conditions are not at all what they were about two years ago when I made that offer. I do not wish to confirm or deny the report. I do not wish to discuss the matter at all just now."

The governor has announced that he would not leave the state to take up his national senatorial duties until after his gubernatorial term has expired because he said he did not wish for the state government to pass to his political enemy, the lieutenant governor.

PLANES DAMAGED BY 70-MILE WIND

TOLEDO, Ohio, June 6.—(AP)—Half a dozen airplanes were damaged when a heavy wind and rain storm struck Toledo airport at Lemoyne, and Transcontinental airport, both near by, late today.

Six persons escaped injury when a cabin plane was overturned by wind after landing at Toledo airport. A wing was torn off. Several light planes suffered slight damage when hurled into the air.

The wind, said by weather bureau officials to have reached 70 miles an hour, damaged several hangars and lights at both fields, and in Toledo tore down trees and poles. Rain flooded streets and basements and lightning damaged several homes.

PILOTS PLAN FLIGHT OF WORLD MONDAY

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., June 6.—(AP)—Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, Oklahoma City pilots who plan a world tour by airplane, announced today they might start Monday. Weather conditions are not conducive to a start Sunday, they said.

The Oklahomans made the announcement just before leaving on a short hop to Hartford, Conn., this afternoon.

Since arriving here to prepare for their takeoff, Post and Gatty have flown but little.

RESORT IN FLORIDA WILL BE AUCTIONED

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., June 6.—Gus' Baths, one of Florida's best-known bathing resorts and for many years a center of recreation for the Palm Beachers, will go on the auction block here July 6.

Notice of sale, as a result of a foreclosure suit brought by Cooper C. Lightbown, Washington, D. C., has been filed.

BENNING DESCENDANT WEDDED TO LAWYER

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—Miss Agnes Means Layng, daughter of Mrs. James D. Layng Jr., of New York, and great-granddaughter of General Benning, of Georgia, was married today to Edgar Aldrich Kniffin, a lawyer, of New York. The couple left on an extended wedding tour.

Mrs. W. O. Stanton, of Cheyenne, Wyo., was matron of honor.

Cabin of Lincoln's Parents To Be Made Kentucky Shrine

HARRODSBURG, Ky., June 6.—(AP)—The temple housing the cabin in which the parents of Abraham Lincoln were married 125 years ago will be dedicated at Pioneer Memorial State park here next Friday, with the federal government and four states represented.

The program was announced today by the Kentucky state park commission, the Kentucky Pioneer Memorial Association and the Harrodsburg Historical Society. The exercises will be broadcast over a coast-to-coast hookup of the National Broadcasting Company from 2:15 to 3:15 p. m., central standard time.

Dedication of the marriage cabin features the celebration of the 157th anniversary of the founding of Harrodsburg. The mansion adjacent to old Fort Harrod will be opened Friday morning. It contains colonial relics.

The logs of the original cabin in which the marriage took place make up the reproduction now housed in an edifice designed after a church, and donated by Mrs. Edmund Burke Ball, Muncie, Ind.

William N. Doak, secretary of labor, will deliver the dedicatory address. Others on the program are Governor Flem D. Sampson, of Kentucky; former Governor Edwin P. Morrow, now a member of the railway mediation board; United States Senator Alben W. Barkley, Kentucky; Dr. Albert Bushness Hart, historian of the George Washington bicentennial commission; Dr. William Lowe Bryan, president of Indiana University, and Mrs. Flora Myers Gillentine, Nashville, historian-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The marriage ceremony of Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks, Lincoln's parents, will be dramatized by students of Transylvania College, Lexington. In the evening there will be a Lincoln banquet.

RAMSEY IS DENIED CHANGE OF TRIAL

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 6.—(AP) Special Judge J. D. G. Morton, of Gallatin, Tenn., today denied the application of J. B. Ramsey, president of the closed Holston Union National bank and Holston Trust Company, for the removal of his trial from Knox to Hancock county.

The trial date for the Knoxville banker, charged with fraudulent breach of trust and larceny growing out of his alleged mishandling of state funds in the trust company, was set for July 27 in Knox county criminal court.

LOAN SUIT WON BY DEFENDANT

A jury in Judge Ralph McClelland's division of the municipal court Thursday returned a verdict in favor of the defendant in a suit of J. H. Bennett against J. C. Tucker for $21.50. Tucker's defense was that the amount remained due on a note on which usury was practiced.

J. L. R. Boyd, council for the Atlanta Association for the Prevention of Moral Usury, said Saturday that the decision of the jury in the case was hailed as a great victory for the opponents of "loan-sharks."

"Those seeking to contend that the assignments of salaries under certain conditions and of making of loans at high rates of interest had backed this case as their big test case," Mr. Boyd said. "The victory for the foes of usury is therefore significant."

Matched Pictures Fill Mails In 'Laughing Gallery' Contest

Stacked up in The Constitution editorial offices are huge mail bags brimming up with packages of matched pictures submitted in The Constitution-Paramount "Laughing Gallery" contest. Beginning Monday every mail brought increasingly large numbers of packages until on Saturday every mail was filled with hundreds of bundles, boxes and big envelopes all addressed to the Laughing Gallery Editor.

Bright and early Monday morning the work of checking the matched pictures will be begun and it is hoped to have everything in readiness for the announcement of the winners in next Sunday's Constitution.

As was specified in the rules of the contest, no pictures will be considered unless they were either in The Constitution office by midnight Saturday, or the package in which they were contained was postmarked before that time.

Accuracy in matching the pictures will be the first consideration in deciding the winners, but simple neatness will also be considered. Nothing else will count in the determining of the winners.

Under the rules of the contest The Constitution and the Georgia theater will give $250 in cash prizes: First prize, $100; second prize, $50; third prize, $25; fourth prize, $15; fifth prize, $10, and winners of the next five prizes, $5. The next ten prize-winners will receive a pair of passes to the Georgia theater each week for six months; of the next five prizes, a pair of Georgia passes each week for three months, and the next five prizes a pair of Georgia passes each week for four weeks.

CHILD'S BODY FOUND IN FLORIDA LAKE

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., June 6.—(AP)—The body of Jack Lambdin, 14, son of M. G. Lambdin, was found in Lake Magnolia on the outskirts of the city today. The boy had drowned while frog hunting. He had been missing from home since early Friday and a search was conducted through southern Florida.

ATTEMPT AT ENDURANCE RECORD STARTS TOMORROW

Davis, Famed Driver, Here To Pilot Chevrolet in Run

If Goal Reached, Will Mean New Record for Continuous Driving.

the Chevrolet car will be sealed and absolutely no water or oil be added. The distance he will cover will be more than 3,000 miles or further than from here to the Pacific coast. In fact with the good roads in Atlanta Mr. Davis expects that he will be able to set up a new world's record, which will give Atlanta nationwide publicity.

For this gruelling run Endurance Davis has selected the Shell Oil gasoline and greases. This well-known motor fuel and oil being of the highest standard are recognized by automobile men all over the country as ideal products for so hard a test.

For running equipment on this car Endurance Davis will use the Sears-Roebuck & Company's famous All State Tire. These tires were selected by Mr. Davis only after a most careful investigation of the material used in manufacture, and he says with a great deal of confidence that he expects no tire trouble during this run in spite of the midsummer weather Atlanta is experiencing.

Co-operating in the movement to bring this famous driver to Atlanta, in addition to the East Point Chevrolet Company and Sears-Roebuck & Company, are the following merchants whose products and services are absolutely essential toward making such a stunt possible:

Pig 'n Whistle, the popular sandwich drive-in stations that feed thousands of Atlantans every day. They will see that Endurance Davis gets the proper diet and introduce him to their famous steak sandwich.

Brown Tire Company, distributors for the popular Philco Transitone automobile radio. One of these sets is installed in the endurance Chevrolet, for demonstration purposes.

O-Boy Bread, furnished by the Stone Baking Company.

W. O. Pierce Dairy, one of Atlanta's leading dairymen, pure Grade "A" milk dispensers on whom hundreds of Atlanta housewives will attest to the fine milk they handle.

Primrose Dry Cleaning Company, a representative modern dry cleaning establishment.

Auto Electric Magneto Company, distributors for the Trico Clareon and Klaxon horns installed on the car; also accessories and the Bosch Pure Action spark plugs.

Taylor Drug Company, popular druggist, whose services are invaluable to hundreds of people each week.

J. H. Keen Optical Company, furnishers of the proper kind of glasses for summer driving. These are especially adaptable for driving in the sun.

Awtry & Lowndes, ambulance service, funeral directors who are always on the job.

Watch for him driving by on the street. Hop in and take a ride and see for yourself how a man under such strained conditions acts and talks, then, too, don't forget that sturdiness built into the Chevrolet is making this drive possible.

Studebaker Solves Bad Weather Bug-A-Boo for Roadster

The one bugbear of the roadster type body, its comparative lack of protection in bad weather, has been definitely eliminated in the new Studebaker President Eight roadster, according to J. E. Yarbrough, Studebaker dealer here. Aptly called the "four seasons" roadster, this model combines the airy freedom of the open car with the snug comfort of the closed model.

"This significant advantage is obtained through a novel arrangement of the car top in conjunction with plate glass windows which replace the side curtains. The top is smartly tailored and so shaped it can easily be raised or lowered.

"The side windows, of non-shatterable safety glass, lower or raise in the conventional manner, and when up fit snugly into specially designed flaps in the top. With top and windows in position, the President Eight roadster is as tight and warm as a closed car. With the top down the windows may be left up to act as a windbreak.

"The outstanding feature of the President Eight roadster is free wheeling with single lever gear control. The advantages of this remarkable engineering innovation include unusually quiet engine operation, unfettered car motion freed from 'engine drag' the instant the foot is lifted off the accelerator, the ability to shift gears between second and high at any speed without touching the clutch, and savings of 12 to 20 per cent in gas and oil. Single lever gear control makes the full braking power of the engine instantly available.

"The powerful 122-horsepower engine is of the same brilliant straight-eight design which Studebaker has so consistently used, and which today holds more official American stock car records for speed and endurance than all other makes combined. Remarkably smooth engine operation is obtained by the use of a doubly balanced crankshaft equipped with a vibration damper of the most effective design. The new carburetor silencer eliminates 90 per cent of carburetor noise. Dual carburetion and dual manifolding is used.

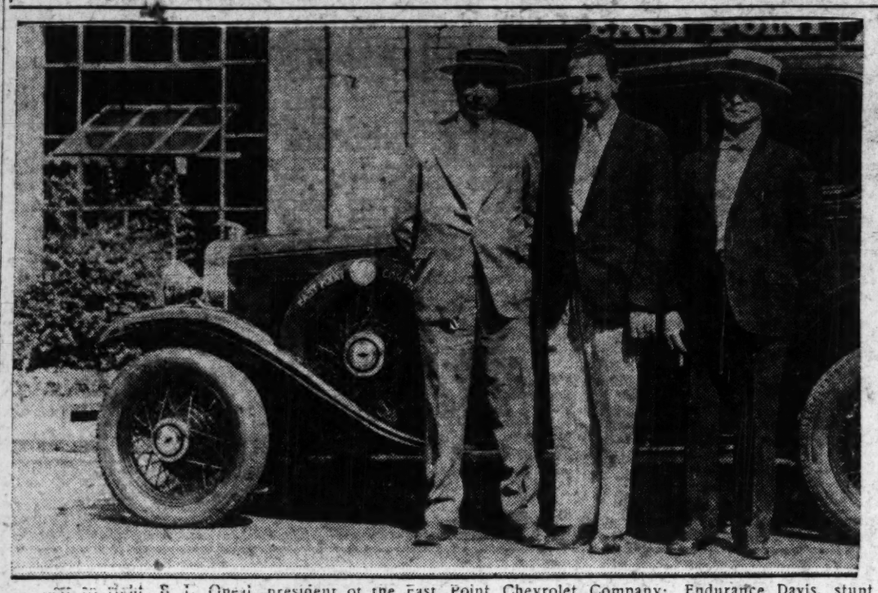

"Low, sweeping body lines on 130-inch wheelbase interpret the very spirit of free wheeling. The new sloping radiator, equipped with high turbulence air deflectors in the grid, together with Ovaloid headlamps, trim fender lights and LeModern bumpers combine to emphasize the smart beauty of this model. An added style note is provided by six wire wheels, two in front fender wells, and chromium brightwork. Color combinations are extremely voguish. Upholstery is genuine leather.

"An important feature of the car is its remarkable steering ease. This is obtained through a cam and lever steering gear of the new self-righting type and increase of the steering ratio. A so-called kick shackle, located on the left front spring horn, eliminates any possibility of shimmy and prevents the transmission of road shocks to the steering wheel.

"Comfort and safety are assured by wide, deep, generously proportioned seats; wide, accessible doors; adjustable front seat and steering column; safety glass in windshield and doors throughout; safety, steel-core steering wheel; double automatic windshield wipers; double drop frame construction; hydraulic shock absorbers; ball-bearing spring shackles and powerful four-wheel brakes of the new two-shoe Duo Servo type with long-life molded lining.

"Conventional instruments are provided, in addition to a hydrostatic gasoline gauge and engine thermometer. A clock and cigar lighter are standard. The coincidental lock to steering and ignition is provided with an individual dash lamp. The same key operates all locks on the car. Price of the roadster is $1,950 at the factory, bumpers and spare tires extra."

East Point Chevrolet Dealers and Famous Driver

Dodge Rust Proofs Metal Truck Parts

With the Bonderizing of all enameled parts Dodge Brothers have added a further measure of dependability to their line of standard and heavy duty trucks.

Rust has put thousands of trucks out of service years before their otherwise useful lives were ended. Prevention, therefore, means longer life, greater economy and the preservation of good appearance.

Bonderizing, regarded as the most modern and effective rust-preventative in use today, completely and permanently rust-proofs the metal to which it is applied. It covers the entire surface of each part with a non-metallic, paint-absorbent coating, chemical action making the coating a part of the metal. The new surface obtained by Bonderizing is rough, thus assuring permanent cohesion between the enamel and the metal. The enamel penetrates into the rough porous surface of the Bonderized metal, insuring a perfect, lasting bond. With this permanent coating protecting the metal, it cannot rust or deteriorate under the worst weather conditions.

The use of this rust-proofing process eliminates dangling and unsightly fenders and stops enamel from peeling off rods and brackets, allowing the bare metal to show through and become exposed to the attack of its greatest enemy. Bonderizing guarantees that the gleaming black sheen of new enamel will be permanent throughout the life of the truck.

High Mark Reached at Graham Plant

DETROIT, Mich., June 6.—May shipments of the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation set a new high record with an increase of 53 per cent over April, the company announced today. Overseas shipments increased 66 per cent, while Canada showed a gain of more than 20 per cent.

The introduction of the new Prosperity Six, with which Graham entered the field of low-priced cars, had immediate effect in increasing the company's sales activities. The production schedule was increased twice during the month, and the factory went on a five-day week basis instead of four.

East Point Dealer To Furnish Endurance Car

"I have always used a Chevrolet, wherever possible," said Endurance Davis when he reported to The Constitution and asked their co-operation in putting on the endurance run that starts tomorrow.

"The smoothness of the motor of this great little automobile makes it an ideal means of transportation for a test such as will be given a car by me this week. Its economy also is considered because it is most important that good mileage is secured."

The Chevrolet that Endurance will use in his attempt to break the record for continuous driving is furnished by the East Point Chevrolet Company, local Chevrolet dealers located on Main street in East Point.

"In selecting a dealership to service this car before we drive we made it a point to check their service facilities and record of service to owners, and I am certainly pleased at the manner this department is conducted. Every facility is there for the quick, efficient servicing of cars, and I expect no hitch in the running off of my endurance run."

The East Point Chevrolet Motor Company are co-operating with the factory in their nation-wide demonstration week and cordially invite the people of Atlanta to call up for a demonstration of these great little cars.

Owners Urged To Watch Engine Heat

With the advent of warmer weather and the greater use of automobiles, there is one dial on the instrument panel of the modern car which drivers should glance at occasionally, according to Oldsmobile engineers. That dial registers the temperature of the engine.

"Engine temperature has considerable to do with the efficient operation of a car," the engineers say. Therefore it should be maintained at a point best suited to the motor. This point of maximum efficiency ranges between 150 and 180 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Automobiles never should be subjected to speed or hard pulls until the engine has been warmed up to at least 120 degrees. Drive at a moderate pace until this temperature has been reached. Also, it is wise to check the car when the temperature nears 200 degrees as the water in the cooling system will start boiling just above this point.

"In the 1931 Oldsmobile several features have been designed to assist drivers in maintaining an efficient engine temperature. Probably the most important of these is the new method of applying heat to the intake manifold 'hot spot.'

"This 'hot spot' is provided with a heating grid controlled by an automatic damper, which is balanced by a small weight. When the engine is operating at low speeds, and heat at the 'hot spot' is desirable, the maximum volume of exhaust gas is applied to the grid. At high speeds, when a hot manifold is undesirable, the exhaust gas is automatically directed away from the grid.

"To this new feature are added a cooling system capable of keeping the engine at an efficient temperature even in the hottest weather, and radiator shutters which give the driver the last word in engine temperature control."

June 11th Set For Auto Dealers' Monthly Meeting

The monthly meeting of the automobile dealers' division of the Atlanta Automobile Association will be held Thursday, June 11, 12:30 luncheon, Atlanta Athletic Club. The automobile and truck dealers of Atlanta meet once a month for the purpose of discussing their mutual problems.

The membership of the Atlanta Automobile Association is divided into three groups—the automobile dealers' division, the garage division, and the allied automotive trade lines division. The association concentrates its activities on those things that are of benefit to the automotive industry as a whole and to the motoring public.

The association is affiliated with the National Automobile Dealers' Association, with headquarters in Chicago, which handles in a national way the problems of the industry.

Pennsylvania Rubber Co. Celebrates 32d Anniversary

The Pennsylvania Rubber Company of America will celebrate at Jeannette, Pa., this month its thirty-second anniversary as the manufacturer of Pennsylvania tires and tubes. But, according to W. O. Rutherford, president, there will be no red fire, speeches or parades, as the management and the plant are too busy. Pennsylvania's business has increased remarkably this spring, due to the creation of merchandising plans which have proved unusually successful for Pennsylvania tire dealers. In fact, demand became so strong that recently the plant went on a seven-day a week production schedule.

"Pennsylvania's present position is unusually strong and we look with confidence to the future," said Mr. Rutherford. "We are doing a good business both on our tire and tube line, and on our tennis balls. Success in the rubber industry is less one of selling strategy and more one of merchandising strategy. The tire merchant is not so much concerned with the price at which he can buy as he is with creative, constructive plans for moving merchandise profitably. Because our distribution is centralized in the independent tire dealer we can concentrate undividedly on his problems. We have no factory-owned or controlled stores, no entangling alliances, and consequently can go all the way for the dealer. In the recent business lull this factory has been of incalculable value. With nothing to temper or modify our policies, we have been able to work very closely with the Pennsylvania dealer and apply to his business principles best designed to help. The results have been most gratifying. The morale of the Pennsylvania dealer organization is good. It has seen methods, management and materials produce business and profits at a time when the world said neither existed.

"It is the opinion of many business men that the depression of the last two years has been the severest the country has experienced in the last thirty years. Pennsylvania emerges from it sounder and stronger, and with its dealer structure close-knit and unimpaired."

Repair Work Guaranteed By Dobbs Tire Co.

"Guaranteed tire repairing, and we mean just that," declares Claude C. Mason Jr., manager of the Dobbs Tire Company, Goodyear tire service station at 222 Spring street. "A great many people believe that it doesn't pay to have tires repaired. That's partially true. If you have the work done by men who don't know the fundamental principles of tire building, or, if you insist on repairs on tires that are too far gone to be worth the money expended.

"In our tire shop the men are graduates of the Goodyear Tire Repair school and are factory trained to know tire construction. That enables them to know after thorough examination whether or not the tire is worth a repair, and if it's not, they won't hesitate to tell you."

Tire repair equipment in the Dobbs shop has been completely reconditioned and some new additions made recently to bring the apparatus up to standard, thus keeping pace with progress in tire development and new methods of repair.

The firm maintains a staff of two men who are experts in the tire repair line. Moreover, Mr. Mason pointed out that if you bring tires in for repair at Dobbs and you get a definite promise of when they are to be done, you can absolutely depend on that promise being kept a guarantee against annoying delays.

POLICE CHIEF SLAIN IN CAROLINA TOWN

FOREST CITY, N. C., June 6.—(AP)—Police Chief Austin A. Price, 45, was shot five times and instantly killed in front of the city hall here at 11:30 o'clock tonight.

MURDER WITNESS BARES DEATH THREAT

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—(AP)—Mrs. Ethel Hamlin, wealthy clubwoman and state's witness against David H. Clark, charged with murdering Charles H. Crawford, political boss, and Herbert Spencer, former newspaperman, said today her life had been threatened.

She related that the death threat was whispered during the preliminary hearing of Clark last Tuesday, which she attended but was not called as a witness. Clark was held for trial.

Mrs. Hamlin said she was standing near Crawford's office when the shooting occurred, and shortly after a man rushed out and told her to move on. The same man, she said, last Tuesday in the elevator at the courthouse whispered to her:

"You're chirping too much. If you don't keep your mouth shut you'll be next."

Atlanta Boys, Girls Join West Coast Caravan Tour

BY W. O. KEY JR.

Next week a hundred boys and girls of Atlanta and neighboring cities are going to leave on one of the most interesting trips imaginable. They will have a vacation of eight weeks, during which they will see the places that, to them, have been merely spots on the maps in their geography. The Petrified forest, the Painted desert, the Grand canyon — all these places they will see, as well as others, such as the movie colony of Hollywood, and Catalina island.

It will be the second annual tour of Georgia Caravans International Corporation, and the first on which girls have been taken. Mrs. B. M. Boykin, former president of the Atlanta Woman's Club, is vice president of the organization, and she will be directly in charge of all girls participating in the tour.

Four especially constructed busses and two trucks will convey the party on its round trip to the west coast, and every item of comfort and practicality has been arranged for the tour. The first of the party will assemble in Atlanta next Sunday and will leave on Monday, June 15. The second group will depart on Thursday, June 18, and the two caravans will meet at Memphis, two days later.

The caravan is an educational affouting of an ordinary camp, with the interesting advantage of new scenes and a camp in a different place daily. The plan this year is to visit all the national parks, including Muscle Shoals, Hot Springs, Grand Canyon, Salt Lake City and Yellowstone, with side tours into such points of interest at the Petrified forest and the Painted desert.

Trained cooks and a dietitian will take care of the dining arrangements during the tour, and special counsellors will go along to act as guides and chaperons. The caravan is equipped with the most modern of camp tables and chairs, and the luggage to be taken by the youngsters will be standardized with the view of conserving space and at the same time allowing both boys and girls to take along "nice" clothing as well as out-of-doors garments.

Assisting Mrs. Boykin in directing the girls' tour will be Mrs. R. L. Turman, and the list of those who have made arrangements to go on the two-month tour include Mrs. John C. Staton, Mrs. C. Spurgeon King, Mrs. J. L. Brooks and Miss Florence E. Perkins. The members of the caravan who have made arrangements to leave next week include the sons and daughters of some of the most prominent citizens of Atlanta.

The Georgia Caravans tour last year took 57 boys to the west coast. It was decided this year to include girls, because, as Mrs. Boykin expressed it, girls who are members of out-door organizations usually find the routine of camp life too monotonous. The travel idea, with a new camping site each day is expected to have a greater appeal to both boys and girls. All expenses of the tour are paid by parents of children who are making the trip, and no child is permitted to carry in excess of $25 for incidental expenses during the trip. In this way, it is expected the educational and travel advantages of the trip will be more equally enjoyed.

The caravan will travel in 18-passenger busses, and each bus will carry a model kitchen, attended by trained colored chefs. All foods will be carefully selected by the dietitian, and first-aid medical kits will be carried. Each bus likewise is equipped with a fireless cooker, which will insure a good, appetizing meal in the middle of the day, even if the caravan is en route.

Outlines Purpose of Tour.

In outlining the educational purpose of the caravan tours, Mrs. Boykin pointed out that certain conditions are necessary for boys and girls to gain real educational advantages from travel.

"The people and places read about in textbooks must be visited and studied with the assistance of others who are experienced in travel," she said. "Boys and girls must be helped to see and to appreciate the things that are noticeable, and, even more important, they must be guided to find and understand the numberless opportunities that offer themselves for study on all sides, but which are missed by the inexperienced traveler. In this way that the Georgia Caravans tours have adopted, the interest unravels and expands into a real understanding of the significance of the places visited and studied."

The itinerary of the trip, as announced by Mrs. Boykin, is as follows:

Florence, Ala.; Memphis, Little Rock, Oklahoma City, Amarillo, Texas; Raton, N. M.; Sante Fe, N. M.; Alberquerque, N. M.; Gallup, N. M.; Holbrook, Ariz.; Flagstaff, Ariz.; Phoenix City, Ariz.; Yuma, Ariz.; Tia Juana, Mexico; Agua Caliente, Mexico; San Diego, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Santa Maria, Monterey, Carmel, Cal.; San Francisco, Sacramento, Carson City, Nev.; Reno, Salt Lake City, Ogden, Utah; Pocatello, Idaho; Cody, Wyo.; Thermopolis, Wyo.; Laramie, Wyo.; Denver, Colorado Springs, Kansas City, Kas.; St. Louis, thence back to Atlanta.

ROCKEFELLER BOY WINS HIGH HONOR

WINDSOR, Conn., June 6.—(AP)—Winthrop Rockefeller, New York, grandson of John D. Rockefeller, was one of three graduates at Loomis Institute, here, today to win the Gwendolyn Sedgwick Batchelder prizes, most coveted award among the graduation honors. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr., were among the guests at the exercises when the prizes were awarded. The prizes are awarded for industry, loyalty and manliness.

Co-Ed Vote Unanimous For Early Marriage

BATON ROUGE, La., June 6.—(AP)—Co-eds of this year's graduation class at Louisiana State University believe in marriage and motherhood as a career.

The senior girls, answering a questionnaire submitted by the university, voted almost unanimously their desire for homes and husbands. Only one girl voted "no," and she added a qualifying "not yet."

Nearly all, on the marriage question, answered with frankness, "yes," one with the added emphasis "indeed," and another with the positive assertion "sure."

The amount of a husband's income requisite for marriage varied from a minimum of $150, voted by a majority of the co-eds, to $800 a month, laid down by one young woman.

HIGH'S WILL STAGE 1931 'PROGRESS SALE'

Annual June Event To Open at Store on Monday Morning.

High's annual progress sale, considered one of the outstanding merchandising events staged by the store, will be held Monday with thousands of exceptional values featured in the long list of offerings.

The progress sale has been held each June for a number of years and it has come to be one of the most important events during the year. The present sale, according to A. R. Dorsen, offers greater values than any for the past 10 years.

Mr. Dorsen says that the event is being staged principally for the purpose of stimulating business, as most of the items in the sale are marked close to the cost and in many cases where the store was in position to make fortunate purchases the goods has been marked at less than the actual cost of replacement.

The sale will extend into every department of the store, according to Mr. Dorsen, and in view of the values that are being offered it is expected that many customers of the store will make purchases that will provide for their needs for some time in the future.

Mr. Dorsen expresses the belief that the event will be instrumental in placing a great deal of money in circulation, as it is expected to greatly stimulate interest in buying.

Many of the values offered in the sale are announced in a six-page section appearing in this issue of The Atlanta Constitution. The sale will be held for one day only.

Blind for 25 Years, Minister Sees Light

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—(AP). Blind since birth, the Rev. Robert Fraser, 25, an evangelist, saw light today for the first time.

Mr. Fraser was operated on about two weeks ago by Dr. G. H. Moore, who performed a similar operation on Earl Musselman recently with success.

The bandages were momentarily removed from Mr. Fraser's eyes today and he exclaimed he could see light. The operation was performed on one eye.

"This is the most dramatic day of my life," Mr. Fraser said. "It is all so strange, so wonderful, I hardly believe I am in the same world."

It has ever been Sears policy to pass volume savings along to our customers. Although from the beginning ALLSTATE undersold any comparable tire by a wide margin, prices were reduced as often as its phenomenal growth in sales led to new economies in manufacture and distribution. One day the tire industry woke up to find a so-called "mail order" tire had come from an unknown to a leader! Naturally our competitors lowered prices in an effort to keep pace. But they incur tremendous selling expenses that Sears avoids by distributing direct from factory through our store to you. They cannot hope to meet the ALLSTATE price with tires that equal ALLSTATE in performance. ALLSTATE still sells about a fourth below any tire worthy of comparison.

Kidnap Accuser Jailed On Counter Charges

VALDOSTA, Ga., June 6.—G. Z. Roberts, who early in the week swore out a warrant charging kidnaping and had Miss Jessie M. Cannon arrested in Atlanta and brought back to Valdosta, is himself an inmate of the county jail.

It is charged that Roberts failed to support his two minor children and Miss Cannon carried them to Atlanta to take care of them.

FIVE ATHENS VETERANS GET "SERVICE CROSSES"

ATHENS, Ga., June 6.—Five Athenians, World War and Spanish-American War veterans, have been awarded military "crosses of service" by the Laura Rutherford chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy. A Spanish-American cross of service will also be given to the family of the late Carl Von De Leith, Athens, and Stephen Harris, Savannah, at the state convention of the Spanish-American veterans and auxiliary Sunday.

The awards will be made by Mrs. J. J. Harris, president of the Georgia division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Mrs. Mildred Rhodes, Athens, president of the Spanish-American War Veterans' Auxiliary, will preside at the Savannah convention.

Those given the World War crosses of service here are D. Weaver Bridges, commander of the Allen R. Fleming post, American Legion; Pearce Mathews Stovall and Carl Saye.

The Spanish-American War service crosses were awarded to James T. Burden, Elberton; Hershell Carithers, Athens, and Carl Saye, Athens.

The crosses awarded given at the home of Mrs. George D. Thomas, on Milledge avenue, with Mrs. T. W. Reed, president of the Laura Rutherford chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, presiding. Heads of all the patriotic societies of Athens were invited guests.

SARAH POWERS FACES SECOND TRIAL MONDAY

MACON, Ga., June 6.—(AP)—With the second trial of Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Powers, 73, in connection with the death of James W. Parks scheduled for Monday, Solicitor Charles H. Garrett was uncertain today, he said, as to the advisability of introducing in evidence circumstances surrounding two other insurance transactions which he claims directed suspicion to the woman.

The elderly woman, once condemned to die in the electric chair, is alleged to have hired Earl Manchester, 21, to kill Parks in order to collect $14,000 insurance on his life. Manchester confessed the murder and told of the insurance plot when he was arrested May 28, 1929, but several months after his trial he refuted the statement and said he had nothing to do with the murder. He is under sentence of death.

Mr. Garrett said, too, that he had not decided whether to place Manchester on the stand against Mrs. Powers. At the woman's first trial nearly two years ago the condemned youth refused to testify.

While Mrs. Powers trial is in progress it was indicated today that Manchester will leave the Bibb county jail for the first time since the woman's first trial. Judge H. A. Mathews, of the Macon circuit, this morning signed an order which will allow the youth to go, under guard, to a dentist.

The second trial of Mrs. Powers will bring into the courtroom Monday probably more jurors than ever assembled there at one time, it was said. More than 200 men have been summoned to appear.

The Georgia supreme court granted the woman a new trial because Judge Mathews failed to charge the jury concerning circumstantial evidence.

LADY TOURISTS FREED IN VALDOSTA COURT

VALDOSTA, Ga., June 6.—A criminal prosecution against two elderly lady tourists came to an abrupt end in the city court yesterday when Judge J. G. Cranford, after hearing the evidence on both sides, promptly dismissed the case.

The evidence showed that the two ladies while coming into the city from Florida were bumped by an automobile backing out from a parking space, the man in the backing car waved them ahead indicating that no harm had been done.

The tourists got as far as Tifton, when they were met by an officer with a warrant who told them they could either pay $22 or be carried back to Valdosta. The ladies were brought back to this city and delayed until yesterday, when the case was heard and promptly dismissed.

WARRANT IS ISSUED IN "BUMP" ACCIDENT

VALDOSTA, Ga., June 6.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Bob Corbett, of Echols county, charged with being responsible for the serious if not fatal injury sustained several nights ago by J. W. Pope when it is alleged that in a collision with Corbett, Pope was thrown under a moving freight train.

It is alleged that Pope's car was standing at the River street crossing of the Southern railway while a freight passed and that Corbett, while in an intoxicated condition, struck Pope's car from the rear. Pope was thrown under the moving train and suffered a concussion of the brain from which he has not yet regained consciousness.

Revival Services.

McDONOUGH, Ga., June 6.—Revival services at the McDonough Methodist church will begin Sunday. Rev. G. W. Hamilton, pastor, will do the preaching, and the music will be directed by Mrs. L. L. Strawn, chairman of the music committee, and C. J. Dickson, chorister.

Wins Five Medals

BARNESVILLE, Ga., June 6.—Martha Howard, sixth grade pupil of Gordon Grammar school in Barnesville, was presented with five medals during the commencement exercises. The medals were given by the Civitan Club, Three Arts Club, American Legion Auxiliary, U. D. C. chapter, and W. C. T. U., and were for excellence in expression, historical essays and note books, and an essay on "Temperance. Miss Howard is the daughter of Major and Mrs. John M. Howard.

Schley County, Money in Bank, Cuts Farm Taxes Ten Per Cent

BY WILL D. BAUGH.

ELLAVILLE, Ga., June 6.—Schley county, one of Georgia's smallest counties in area and population, with less than 7,000 residents, including both white and colored, and the county seat, Ellaville, with less than 1,000, is today one of the richest in the state and, as a result, taxes have been cut 10 per cent.

Schley county has one accredited high school, located in Ellaville, and seven schools conveniently located over the county. Ellaville High school has an enrollment of 256; Glenn Holly 60; County Line 22; Ebenezer 51; Three Points 18; Midway 56; Concord 46; Fellowship 38, making a total of 547 white children in school, while the colored enrollment is 920 in the county. Six busses and a number of private cars bring children from the country each day to attend school.

The county school system is managed by J. L. Duncan, county school superintendent. The school system has paid all its obligations this term and has enough money on hand at present to run the county schools for two months of the fall term. The state owes the county around $9,937.

B. C. Cheek, road warden, reports of the 16 miles across the longest part of the county on state route No. 3, 8 miles is now paved and 8 miles is now being put in shape and will be paved within eight months. The other state road across the county is in excellent shape.

The county chain gang is a modern camp with a new two-story concrete stockade, equipped with shower baths, electric lights and all modern conveniences. The county recently removed and sold all mules and purchased new up-to-date road machinery, so that the repair work can be quickly and well done with less cost to the taxpayers of Schley county. In an interview with J. H. Statham, chairman of the county commissioners and chairman of the county board of education, he said the county has no bonded indebtedness and has several thousand dollars in the local bank. Serving with Mr. Statham on the commission is S. M. Etheridge, secretary and treasurer; A. L. Smith, W. C. Tondee and J. J. Holloway.

One of the most pleasing things to the taxpayers of the county was the report of the tax assessors, who recently adjourned their annual session. After careful study of the conditions of the farmers of the county and in order that the county would continue to prosper and to meet the poor crops situation that confronted them last year the assessors, L. G. Stewart, capitalist, chairman; W. L. Reid, planter, and J. O. Smith, lumberman, reduced the tax 10 per cent on all farm lands in the county. The city taxes were left the same.

The city of Ellaville, small but progressive, has its own light and power plants and in connection with this plant they own an ice plant which is now on a paying basis. Ellaville, located 14 miles north of Americus, is among the very few towns or cities in the state that has a white way that is lighted all night. This modern improvement is only two years old and was installed during the administration of H. Willis Hogg, then mayor of the town and a former state senator. The town now is installing, under the administration of E. J. Hart, mayor, all methods of sanitation, for the preventing of diseases distributed by insanitary environments.

The town and county has never had a bank failure caused by unsuccessful banking and today has one of the safest small banks in the south. The Bank of Ellaville has lost in several large bank failures in the state, but through the management of its cashier, H. F. Dixon, is still the strong bank it started over 20 years ago.

VISITING EDITORS SEE MIDDLE, S. W. GEORGIA

Macon, Montezuma, Radium Springs, Albany Are Hosts to N. E. A.

ALBANY, Ga., June 6.—(AP)—Completing a full day's visit to middle and southwest Georgia with a supper and dance at Radium Springs, near here, tonight, members of the National Editorial Association, on an eight-day tour of the state, were to reach the seacoast at Brunswick tomorrow.

Today the editors were entertained at Macon and Montezuma before arrival at Albany. Tomorrow they are to spend the full day at Brunswick, going to Savannah Monday.

Albany sent a delegation to Andersonville to meet the editors' special train and accompany them here. A short automobile tour of the city and through some of the 70,000 acres of bearing paper shell pecan trees followed arrival of the train.

Six trophies won by the Albany fire department in national contests in fire prevention were on display as the editors stopped for a moment on their tour of the city.

A number of those in the editorial association party took advantage of the invitation to take a swim in waters of Radium Springs, where a buffet supper was served, followed by a dance. The supper menu was largely of Georgia products.

A five-minute address of welcome was the extent of the welcome at Montezuma, where lunch was served at the Woman's Club by the women of the city.

At Montezuma the editors saw the first peach-freezing plant in the country. An automobile tour was made of some of the surrounding farms and peach orchards.

The editors reached Macon at 4:45 a. m. from a full day Friday at Warm Springs, Columbus and Fort Benning.

On arising, Macon entertained with breakfast and an early morning tour of the city. The city's many historical spots were visited and at breakfast the editors rubbed elbows with leading citizens who told them of the city's progress since De Soto crossed the Ocmulgee river in 1540.

Macon's entertainment was in the hands of the Chamber of Commerce, but with the assistance of W. T. Anderson, editor and publisher of the Macon Telegraph, and his brother, P. T. Anderson, vice president and general manager of both the Telegraph and News.

Mark Ethridge and Ben B. Johnston, managing editors of the Telegraph and News, respectively, also assisted in the entertainment.

MONTEZUMA KIWANIANS HOSTS AT LUNCHEON

MONTEZUMA, Ga., June 6.—Approximately 100 visitors were in the editorial party which was entertained by the Kiwanis Club of Montezuma during a two-hour stop today in the statewide tour.

The special train bearing the editors was met in Marshallville by some 50 cars and an automobile ride through the peach orchards to Montezuma, on the Dixie highway, preceded an informal luncheon which was served at the clubhouse. A simple program included a few words of welcome by Mayor Jule W. Felton, a response by L. M. Nichols, recently elected president of the N. E. A., and music by Mrs. A. C. Richardson and Mrs. Muldrow.

Following the luncheon the visitors were taken to the plant of Tom Huston Frozen Foods, Inc., where they received a cordial welcome from Dave Mangham, Pat Keating and Jim Stewart, and during a tour of the plant were served a variety of frozen delicacies which included strawberry and peach and grape combinations. A trip through the freezing rooms which have a temperature of 40 degrees below zero, effectively dispelled the memory of the heat outside.

A magazine supplement of the Montezuma Georgian, giving facts about the history and development of Montezuma and Macon county was distributed on the train as the party left on its way south. The next stop was at Andersonville cemetery.

The Boy Scouts of Montezuma patrolled the town while the visitors were here to give aid and information.

ALLEGED FORGER HELD BY BRUNSWICK POLICE

BRUNSWICK, Ga., June 6.—(AP) The Brunswick News says Thomas A. Moore, wanted at Jacksonville, Fla., for passing worthless checks, was arrested here today after, it was charged, he issued $600 in checks on a Jacksonville bank.

His arrest revealed he was also wanted for robbery of postal savings certificates in South Jacksonville, bearing the name of Dant Allie, the name Moore is charged with using to issue checks.

Officers said $400 of postoffice certificates were found in his possession when arrested. Federal officers are reported en route here to take him back to Jacksonville.

Graduates This Week

MARIETTA, Ga., June 6.—Loren F. Cole, of Marietta, son of Colonel and Mrs. Fitzhugh Lee, will graduate on June 11 from the U. S. Military Academy at West Point. Cadet Cole stands high academically and is a cadet sergeant. After spending his graduation leave in Marietta he will be assigned, in accordance with his own request, to a cavalry regiment of the regular army.

More Farm Lands Sought For Georgia Sanitarium

Watermelon Season Due in Three Weeks

THOMASVILLE, Ga., June 6.—A survey of watermelon fields of this region leads to the conclusion that the melons will begin to move to the markets within the next three—or not exceeding four—weeks. From reports that reach here from Florida it seems likely the south Georgia and Florida crops will be marketed almost together.

IT HAPPENED IN GEORGIA

Lee Elrod, of Hall county, made the mistake of running into a barbed wire fence. At the time he was escaping from Deputy Sheriffs L. Moss and Parks Lawson, of Hall county, after abandoning a car containing 105 gallons of liquor. After medical treatment Elrod was released on $500 bond.

A horned rattlesnake was captured last fall by E. E. Standridge, who lives near Clermont, Ga. Placed in a wooden box, with a small pipe for air, the snake was buried for the winter. It was in good condition when dug out and was shown in Gainesville last week. It is four feet long, has six rattles and a button and an inch-long bone horn on its head.

Ninety Augusta goats were picked up dead by the street cleaning department of that city during the past month. Despite the well-deserved digestive reputation of the animals, it seems that even their stomachs could not assimilate too much rat poison. The street cleaning department fails to report how many rats—if any—succumbed to the poison.

CHAMBER SECRETARIES WILL CONVENE IN ROME

ROME, Ga., June 6.—Fifty or more secretaries and other officials representing 40 chambers of commerce in Georgia cities are expected to meet in Rome next Friday and Saturday for the annual convention of the Georgia Association of Commercial Secretaries. Acceptances received indicate the largest attendance in years.

Much of the program will be devoted to discussion of problems facing Georgia, and the various angles of chamber of commerce work will be discussed. The business sessions will be held in the Coosa Country Club. On Saturday afternoon the visitors will go to Cloudland, on Lookout mountain, to spend the week-end.

Atlanta speakers will include B. S. Barker, executive vice president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, on "Sound Finance as a Basis of Success;" J. L. Lambert, membership secretary of the Atlanta chamber; Lincoln McConnell, of the Atlanta Convention Bureau; W. L. Mitchell, of the United States department of commerce, and L. P. Dickie, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, southern division.

On the program also will be W. T. Anderson, of the Macon Telegraph; C. F. Redden, of Sea Island Beach; John A. Davis, president of the Albany Chamber of Commerce; J. Ralston Cargill, of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, and Miss Hattie Hardy, of the Albany chamber.

Wilton E. Cobb, of the Macon chamber, is president of the association and J. M. Hughes, of Cairo, is secretary.

SPALDING COUNTY HIGH HAS FIRST GRADUATION

GRIFFIN, Ga., June 6.—Spalding County High is holding its first commencement. Class night was held Friday. The new county high school was built as part of the new county school system and was opened for its first classes last September.

Thirty-two boys and girls compose the first graduating class. Jack Flynt, son of Judge and Mrs. J. J. Flynt, is president. Class night was featured with a pageant, "The Rainbow Trail," acted by members of the senior class.

Sunday morning Dr. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the Griffin district, will preach the commencement sermon. The services will be held in the school auditorium.

Diplomas will be awarded Monday night. Rev. Ansley C. Moore, of McDonough, will deliver the commencement address. Miss Kate Lou Mitchell, first honor graduate, will deliver the valedictory address and Manson Manley, second honor graduate, will deliver the salutatory address.

BODY OF MAN FOUND ON ST. SIMONS BEACH

BRUNSWICK, Ga., June 6.—(AP) The body of an unidentified white man was found on the beach at Little St. Simons late today.

A ring key holder bearing the name of "Southern Shores, Miami sub-division" and a belt with the letter "M" were found. The man apparently weighed about 147 pounds, was 35 years old and 5 feet 7 inches tall.

Tobacco Curing Begun Early by Hahira Man

HAHIRA, Ga., June 6.—In advance of any previous season, tobacco curing was begun here this week when W. M. Merwin, a tenant on the farm of Mrs. E. L. Ivey, gathered and cooked out what is supposed to be the first barn of 1931 tobacco in the state. The first gathering is known as primings or sand lugs and is supposed to represent the cheapest grade of tobacco grown. However, this season the bottom leaves seem heavy, sizeable and very bright which all go to make up a good grade of tobacco and it is said to have cured out nicely.

The early date at which tobacco curing has begun is due wholly to weather conditions. The extreme dry, warm weather has tended to ripen the weed some 10 days or two weeks in advance of the date that it would have ripened had seasons been favorable.

Millidgeville Institution Wants To Buy Several Hundred Acres.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., June 6. The Georgia state sanitarium is negotiating for the purchase of several hundred acres of land for addition to the colony farm it became known here today. J. M. Pitner, of Athens, and Dr. Richard Binion, of Milledgeville, members of the board of trustees, have been appointed a committee to consider tracts of land offered and to make recommendations.

While it is preferred that the land be in the vicinity of the present sanitarium, yet it is not believed this will be entirely necessary and bids will be considered of lands lying in Baldwin or adjoining counties or in the middle Georgia territory if the tract is sufficiently large. One of the first tracts offered is owned by Congressman Carl Vinson, in south Baldwin. While the amount of bid made is not known it is understood that it was offered to the trustees for approximately $40 per acre and is sandy land.

All offerings must be submitted to the committee at once in order to be considered. The sanitarium owns at present several thousand acres.

ENLARGING HOSTELRY ON MOUNT BURRELL

TATE, Ga., June 6.—Work has been started on the addition to Connahaynee Lodge, Tate Mountain Estates, which will double the capacity of this hostelry atop Mount Burrell. It is expected that this addition, which includes a larger ballroom, dining room and additional sleeping rooms will be completed some time in July.

"Although Connahaynee Lodge was only opened late last fall," said Luke Tate, "it has become so popular that there was nothing else to do but enlarge if we wanted to accommodate our constantly increasing circle of friends. It is also really amazing how many people have been attracted to the mountains by the displays of wild azaleas and laurel which I think this year have been more beautiful than ever. The golf course is also luring many guests now and will attract more as the season advances, and this also applies to Lake Sequoyah. Of course we have Winnarreta camp this season, which can take care of about 30 guests, while the new

VETS OF SPANISH WAR TO MEET IN SAVANNAH

Three-Day State Encampment Opens Today in Port City.

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 6.—(AP)—The state encampment of United Spanish War Veterans, under command of Captain Stephen N. Harris, Savannah, convenes here tomorrow for a three-day meeting.

Unveiling of a monument in Park extension tomorrow evening at 6 o'clock, followed by memorial exercises at night, presided over by Colonel A. R. Lawton, war-time commander of the Second Georgia infantry in the Spanish-American conflict, will be the features of the first day. This memorial will be presented by Mrs. Mildred V. Rhodes, departmental president of the ladies' auxiliary, and General William L. Grayson, past national commander, will receive it.

Monday will be featured by presentation of a distinguished service cross to Junior Parrish for exceptionally meritorious service in the Spanish war and for which he has heretofore held a certificate. Congress has, in lieu of the certificate, awarded the medal. It is hoped to have Major General Fran R. McCoy, fourth corps area commander, make the presentation at Fort Screven. Otherwise Lieutenant Colonel Erle M. Wilson, commandant at the post, will act. Sergeant Joseph B. Sharp, Company B, Eighth United States infantry, will at the same time receive the medal for excelling among army riflesbots at a standing position in the 1930 international competition, while Company D, of the same regiment, will receive the Edward Howard Clark trophy for excellence in machine gun fire for 1930. The battalion of the Eighth infantry stationed on Tybee will parade in review in honor of the recipients.

Tuesday Senator Walter F. George is on the program as the principal speaker at the final session. There are many entertainment features provided, among them being a sea trip aboard the revenue cutter Modoc.

GEORGIA EASTERN STAR TO GATHER IN MACON

MACON, Ga., June 6.—(AP)—Delegates and visitors from 150 chapters in Georgia will begin arriving here tomorrow for the thirtieth annual session of the grand chapter, of Georgia, Order of Eastern Star. The formal opening business session will take place at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. It is expected that 600 visitors will attend.

Preliminary to the opening of the general session there will be a series of programs on Monday evening, including a banquet for members and visitors at Hotel Dempsey at 6 p. m., at which an address will be delivered by W. G. Mealor, Gainesville, grand master of the Grand Lodge of Georgia. F. and A. M. Mayor Glen Toole will welcome the visitors at this meeting.

The Patrons' Club, of Atlanta, will present a play at the Grand Lodge building at 9 Monday night as the entertainment feature.

Formal sessions will be opened at the Volunteers' armory Tuesday by Mrs. Mary L. Askew, Arlington, past grand matron.

A visit to the Masonic home here is planned for Tuesday. There will be a banquet for past grand matrons and patrons Tuesday night at 6. A memorial service will be held at 9 Tuesday night.

Election of officers and other business will occupy the second day of the convention.

THREE HURT IN JUMP FROM BURNING HOME

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 6.—(AP)—Three members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Athas, of Savannah, were seriously injured early today when the father, mother, and three children jumped from the second floor of their burning home to escape the fire.

All were in the hospital, but the injuries of the father and one of the children were not considered critical. All of the family's belongings except the night clothes the members were wearing were destroyed. A pet bulldog died in the blaze.

NANCY HART MARKER CONTRACT AWARDED

HARTWELL, Ga., June 6.—Contract for carving and erecting a marker to the memory of Nancy Hart, famed Revolutionary War heroine, has been let by the United States war department to the Empire Granite Company, Felix Solana and H. H. Stoner, proprietors, it is announced here. The marker is to be of Elbert county granite, some 14 feet high and will bear a bronze tablet telling the story of Nancy Hart's well-known participation in events of the Revolutionary War.

The marker is to be placed at the intersection of roads in Hart county just to the east of Hartwell. This county was named for Nancy Hart.

JURY FINDS NO BILL FOR AMERICUS BANKER

AMERICUS, Ga., June 6.—The grand jury in Sumter superior court has just returned a no bill in the case of Charles M. Council, former Americus banker, charged with accepting a deposit knowing his bank to be insolvent.

Council, who was vice president and cashier of the defunct Planters bank of Americus, was recently bound over to the grand jury after a hearing before Judge William M. Harper, of the city court of Americus, upon complaint of Mrs. Johnny Schneider. Mrs. Schneider alleged she lost approximately $2,000 through the failure of the Planters bank and that her deposit had been accepted by the cashier while he had knowledge of the insolvency of the institution.

Hot Weather Worries S. Georgia Farmers

MACON, Ga., June 6.—(AP)—Farmers of southern Georgia are complaining of losses from the heat wave which has centered in this section for several days, reaching a maximum today of 97.2 degrees. Unless rain comes quickly, farmers say, there will be heavy damage to crops of all kinds.

Already there has been damage to some fields of melons, indicating a considerable reduction in the probable yield in the south Georgia territory.

Ripening of tobacco is also taking place earlier than usual. Peaches have not been damaged by the heat, it is stated, but moisture would improve the size.

FORT HAWKINS, FROM 1806 TO 1811.—DRAWN BY E. D. ERVINE, MACON, GEORGIA.

ROBERTA, Ga., June 6.—(AP)—In the sun-flooded public square today stood some 2,000 people to see honor done Colonel Benjamin Hawkins, pioneer personage of Crawford county and middle Georgia, in presentation and unveiling of the new federal-built Hawkins monument.

It was the culmination, in a single day, of the two objectives for which daughters of the American Revolution of this vicinity have been striving for years. It was the realization of their dreams to place a tablet over the old grave of Ben Hawkins, beside the Flint river, and to unveil a monument to his memory in the town square.

The day's celebrations began at 10:30, when Captain R. T. Edwards, United States army, of Fort McPherson, who has assisted in the building of, the big monument, supervised the unveiling of the marker over the grave.

It was seven miles by a long, dusty, hot, red road, from Roberta to the field where the old Indian agent lies buried, and where hundreds of people went in a long caravan of automobiles to pay him tribute.

On the top of a high hill, with cotton growing on rolling acres, with a view of the slow river through some trees, and with a single elm tree drooping overhead stood the veiled marker of redish field stone. Captain Edwards called little Walter Carr, of Roberta, and little Mary Carr Westmoreland, of Brunswick, from the crowd, and assisted by two cadets, they pulled aside the drape and exposed the bronze tablet. The two children were selected because they are Colonel Hawkins' descendants.

Then Mrs. E. T. Nottingham, regent of the John Houston chapter, D. A. R., Thomaston, and Mrs. J. W. Kendrick, regent of the Jeffersonian Hawkins chapter, Roberta, placed wreaths on the gravestone and a squad of cadets from the Robert E. Lee Institute, Thomaston, fired three volleys over the century-old grave.

A military band, sent from Fort McPherson, furnished music at the monument in town.

Among those on the platform were a number of descendants of Colonel Hawkins. They were Mr. and Mrs. Milton B. Carr, Roberta; Mr. and Mrs. George E. Badger, LaGrange; Mrs. Torrance Traynor, Milledgeville; Mrs. Mark Mote, Columbus; William Johnston Andrews, official representative of North Carolina, of Raleigh, and his two daughters, Misses Jane Virginia Hawkins Andrews and Martha Hawkins Andrews.

Bearing credentials from Governor O. Max Gardner, and a flag of his state, Mr. Andrews had come all the way to see his forebear honored.

Mrs. B. F. Walker, former regent of the Jeffersonian Hawkins chapter, introduced Representative Sam Rutherford, who was master of ceremonies, and his mother, Mrs. Julia Rutherford.

Mrs. Bun Wylie, Atlanta, state regent of the D. A. R., made a short address of congratulation upon the completion of the monuments.

Senator Walter F. George made the principal address of the day. He gave a biographical sketch of Colonel Hawkins, depicting him not as a rough Indian trader as do the uninformed, but as a cultured gentleman, an owner of many acres, an exponent of advanced farming methods, a diplomat and a statesman.

He told how Colonel Hawkins was a friend of George Washington, a student at Princeton, and the first congressman from North Carolina; how he moved to Crawford county; how he established Fort Hawkins, cradle of Macon, and finally, how he was buried beside the Flint.

"Benjamin Hawkins sleeps on the bluff overlooking the Flint," he said. "Today his last resting place has been marked by an appropriate tablet. Let us hope that the marker may be preserved and renewed by patriotic men and loyal women as long as the waters of the Flint flow down to the sea."

Sixteen miles away, at Macon, the old blockhouse of the original Fort Hawkins, established by the war department in 1802, stood as the monument to the man who founded the tiny establishment in the days of trading with the Creek Indians, and from which grew the city of Macon.

It was just such a day that Colonel Hawkins, as commissioner plenipotentiary of the government, met the kings, chiefs and other headsmen of the Creek nation in this little square of the fort. History describes that day, more than 129 years ago, and gives a glimpse into the meeting. Efau Haujo, an eloquent Upper Creek chieftain, spoke as follows:

"We, this day, a fine one for the occasion, a clear sun and sky, meet our friends, brothers and fathers, to take them by the hand, according to the custom of our forefathers, as old as time itself. We have, at the foot of the general (Oglethorpe) buried the sharp weapons of war, which were in use in old times, and such as we have; our white deer skins are placed on the seat of our friends, and cover them with the same; we add one more emblem, a pipe."

As the result of negotiations with the Creeks, and upon the strong recommendations of Colonel Hawkins, who had served on the staff of George Washington, a fort and trading post were established on a bluff overlooking the Ocmulgee. Colonel Hawkins accordingly selected the site, on which this day a solitary blockhouse remains. Fort Benjamin Hawkins, as it was named, became one of the most formidable and impregnable fortifications south of the Ohio river.

Senator Speaks.

In his address today Senator George praised the qualities of Benjamin Hawkins, both as an officer in the Revolutionary War and as a statesman. Hawkins served six years as a United States senator.

"It is fitting," Senator George said, "that this monument is erected here at Roberta, in the county seat of Crawford, to the memory of Benjamin Hawkins, who won and held the friendship of Washington; who served his native state (North Carolina) in the continental congress and in the senate of the United States. A man of letters and the faithful friend of the southern Indians—one who, having power over a weaker race, never abused it. It is too much to think that in life he escaped all of the flings of envious minds, as no worthy servant of the public may hope to escape them, but he survived them and lives. He peacefully sleeps in the midst of a civilization which now flourishes in the ancient seat of the savage red men served by him in life.

"The credit for this monument erected by the government of the United States," Senator George continued, "with its message of inspiration to the people of the state, is largely due to the Daughters of the American Revolution, the John Houston chapter of Thomaston and the Jeffersonia Hawkins chapter of Roberta. This worthy organization, in dedicating this monument to a soldier of the Revolution, seeks to preserve the memories of a great struggle in arms, but not for the purpose of fostering national animosity, but in the spirit of national friendship and for the purpose of fortifying the interests of peace. It is a happy circumstance that the crowning glory of Colonel Benjamin Hawkins, who is thus honored today, was achieved in the interests of peace."

Th granite shaft bears a bronze plaque on each of its four sides. The inscription reads as follows:

Text of Inscription.

"Erected in 1931 by the United States government to commemorate the life and public service of Colonel Benjamin Hawkins, who was born in Warren county, North Carolina, August 15, 1754, and died at the Creek Indian agency on the Flint river June 6, 1816. He was a student at Princeton and shortly after the beginning of the revolution became a member of General Washington's staff with rank of colonel, serving with distinction throughout the war. He was one of the first senators from North Carolina and was conspicuous for his interest in Indian affairs. Colonel Hawkins was asked by General Washington to assume jurisdiction of all Indian tribes south of the Ohio river. At the height of his career he came to Georgia and established his home among the Creek Indians on the banks of the Flint river in Crawford county. He built the fort which was named in his honor on the Ocmulgee river at Macon and lived there while the fort was being erected but his permanent home was at the Creek agency. His body lies on a bluff overlooking the Flint river, where he lived among the savage tribes for 16 years. A man of letters, a mentor of peace and faithful unto death."

Fort Benjamin Hawkins, which is in the city limits of Macon, was one of the strongest in the country. The Indians had no artillery, resorting to such primitive weapons as the bow and arrow and the tomahak. It was not until 1806 that the entire fort and trading settlement were completed and it was garrisoned by troops from Fort Wilkinson.

In 1812, William Eustis, the secretry of war, sent to Henry Clay, speaker of the house, a statement of the capital employed in the Indian trade, showing the status of the trade at each of the nation's far-flung trading posts, or "factories" as they were called. In his report the secretary of war stated that Fort Hawkins ranked as "No. 1" of all such "factories" in Indian trade.

From the enclosed trading post grew the city of Macon. In today's rotogravure section of The Constitution will be found pictures describing the government marker, the old blockhouse of Fort Hawkins, and the grave of the Revolutionary War founder of Fort Hawkins.

Great Granddaughter to Unveil Henry W. Grady Bust at Athens

ATHENS, Ga., June 6.—Betty Black, great-granddaughter of Henry W. Grady, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Black, of Atlanta, will unveil the bronze bust of Henry W. Grady at the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism, University of Georgia, in connection with the visit of the National Editorial Association at Athens next Thursday, Chancellor Charles M. Snelling announced tonight.

Henry W. Grady, also of Atlanta, and Mrs. Black, only children of the celebrated editor of The Atlanta Constitution, and their families have been invited to attend the unveiling ceremonies.

The Grady bust is the first of several memorials to distinguished Georgia journalists which will constitute a hall of fame, sponsored by the Georgia Press Association, to be located at the Grady journalism school.

Chancellor Snelling will preside at the unveiling exercises. Louie L. Morris, editor of the Hartwell Sun, and president of the Georgia Press Association, who will be presented by the chancellor, will explain the scope and purposes of the hall of fame, and will present the Grady bust to the university for the press association.

T. W. Reed, registrar, secretary and treasurer of the university, who was associated with Henry W. Grady on The Constitution, will accept the bust for the university and will deliver a eulogy of Mr. Grady.

Steffan Thomas, noted Bulgarian sculptor, who has been living in Atlanta for the past several months, and who designed the Grady bust, will be presented by the chancellor, as will the president of the National Editorial Association, George B. Dolliver, of Battle Creek, Mich.

The exercises will be held at 11:30 a. m. in the auditorium of the commerce journalism building.

4-H CLUB GIRLS BEGIN CAMP PERIODS MONDAY

ATHENS, Ga., June 6.—Miss Lurline Collier, State Girls' Club agent, announced Saturday that 225 4-H Club girls were expected to begin their short courses Monday at Camp Wilkins, on the campus of the Georgia State College of Agriculture.

The short courses are to last through the week, when the girls will return to their homes in the different parts of the state, to make room for that many more to attend each week for the next three weeks. Practically all girls who will attend the camp have won scholarships offered for outstanding club work in their respective communities. Many of them have finished high school and will enter college at the State College of Agriculture in September. After the first three weeks the vocational agriculture and 4-H Club boys will occupy the camp for the remainder of the summer.

FUNERAL DIRECTORS MEET IN BRUNSWICK

Burial Association Issue To Be Discussed at Convention in Brunswick.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., June 6.—The Georgia Funeral Directors' Association will hold their thirtieth annual meeting at Brunswick, June 9, 10, 11. The Georgia state board of embalming will meet on Monday, June 8.

This will be an important meeting of the G. F. D. A. as there are a number of important questions on the profession coming up for discussion. Among them is the issue of the abolition of the burial association, which is of great interest both to the funeral directors and the public. There are other issues of legislation for discussion including one fare for transportation of bodies in which the public has a vital interest. The national association is trying to induce express companies to reduce the express charges on bodies to one fare, the same as railroads.

The social side will be well taken care of with banquets, dances, fish frys, fishing trips, boat rides and sight-seeing trips.

There have been many reservations already made at the Oglethorpe hotel, headquarters of the convention. Sam R. Greenberg is president, and Frank B. Lowndes is secretary and treasurer of the association.

RITES FOR MRS. ALLEN WILL BE HELD SUNDAY

BUFORD, Ga., June 6.—Funeral services will be held here Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, eastern time, for Mrs. Victor Allen, wife of one of the leading businessmen of the state, who died suddenly Friday afternoon.

The services will be held at the Allen residence, with burial in the Buford cemetery.

A woman of charming personality, deeply devoted to her home and family, Mrs. Allen had an enduring interest in the life of her community and was instrumental in carrying forward various movements for its welfare. She was a devoted member of the Methodist church.

She is survived by her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Everette Greer, of East Orange, N. J., and Miss Patricia Allen, of Buford; a sister, Miss Janie Miller, of Indianapolis, Ind., and two brothers, M. J. Miller, Jr., of Indianapolis, and J. G. Miller, of East Orange, N. J.

GOOGE WILL ATTEND TYPOGRAPHICAL MEET

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 6.—(AP)—George L. Googe, southern representative of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, left tonight for Mobile, Ala., to attend the Southern Typographical conference to be held in that city this week. W. V. Durkin, delegate of the local typo union, accompanied Googe.

Googe will confer in Mobile with Charles B. Howard, president of the typographical union, about matters pertaining to the labor situation and will leave Tuesday for Nashville, Tenn., to be present when President William Green appears before the Tennessee legislature Wednesday.

DAILY PRICE REPORTS FOR TOBACCO GROWERS

ATHENS, Ga., June 6.—(AP)—Daily market reports will be available this year to tobacco growers at key markets throughout the tobacco belt, C. G. Garner, extension specialist in cooperative marketing at the Georgia State College of Agriculture said.

Key markets will probably be selected from those having the federal-state tobacco grading service, and daily reports will show the average prices paid for a few representative grades on those markets only. Government graders were stationed last year at Tifton, Baxley and Douglas.

State Deaths And Funerals

JOHN M. FARMER.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., June 6.—John M. Farmer, 74, the oldest engineer on the Brunswick-Albany division of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad, died here today. He was in the railroad's employ for 42 years. He retired two years ago. Funeral services will be held tomorrow.

A. E. McRAE.

LUMBER CITY, Ga., June 6.—A. E. McRae, 75, retired farmer and merchant, died here today.

Surviving are two brothers, Major General James H. McRae, United States army, and Judge Max L. McRae, of McRae, Ga.; one sister, Mrs. C. F. Day, of Lumber City.

All members of the family were here today except Major General McRae, who wired that he would be here for the funeral, which is to be held Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Lumber City.

JIM WORTHINGTON.

VALDOSTA, Ga., June 6.—Jim Worthington, 50, well-known farmer of the Barretts section, died unexpectedly at his home Wednesday night, and funeral services were held at Friendship church Thursday afternoon, with Rev. John Knight conducting the services.

EDWIN BRAMLETT.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., June 6.—Edwin Bramlett, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Bramlett, of the neighboring town of Monticello, Fla., died Thursday morning in the hospital of Dr. Sanches in Barwick, in this county, following a brief illness. Funeral services were held Friday afternoon at the Old Salem Baptist church near Pavo, and interment was in the cemetery there. Deceased was a grandson of W. M. Vonier, of this county.

W. C. WESTBROOK.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., June 6.—W. C. Westbrook, 71, Hall county farmer, died Thursday night at the residence, Plain View, near Oakwood, following a week's illness. Funeral services were conducted Saturday from the home by Rev. H. C. Emory, assisted by Rev. Willingham, of Flowery Branch. Interment was in Alta Vista cemetery here, the Masons in charge.

Mr. Westbrook was born in Forsyth county. He was a member of the Methodist church. He was married to Miss Emily O. Wallace, of Forsyth county, on December 4, 1886. She survives him, together with five sons, L. J. Westbrook, of Oakwood; E. C. Westbrook, cotton and tobacco specialist of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, Athens; R. J. Westbrook, Gainesville; C. J. Westbrook, Chestnut Mountain; L. C. Westbrook, Hartwell; one daughter, Mrs. Anna Forrester, of Oakwood; three brothers, G. R., S. J. R. and M. H. BY BILL KEY.

ALEXANDER HAASE and his Budapest Gypsy orchestra will be heard in a program of Hungarian music over an NBC-WEAF network from noon to 12:30 p. m. today. A feature of the program will be Maria Samson, formerly of the Royal Hungarian Opera, of Budapest, in a repertory of folk songs.

This broadcast will occupy part of the period heretofore devoted to the Deems Taylor NBC Musical Series, which will be brought to a close Sunday, May 31, on the combined NBC networks.

Russia's five-year plan will be the subject of a symposium of international broadcasts scheduled for successive Sundays over the Columbia network, beginning today. Capitalism and communism will be represented by the Duchess of Atholl and Dimitri Bogomoloff, respectively, speaking from London, and the series will be rounded out by an impartrial summing up to be presented by Hubert R. Knickerbocker from Berlin.

The Duchess of Atholl, who will speak for the Anglo-American system of individual effort in industry, is the most prominent woman in the British conservative party. Wife of the only nobleman in Great Britain who is permitted to maintain a private army, she spent many years in social work in the district surroundng her Perthshire estate. During the war she was particularly active in organizing civilian services to aid the troops, and was commandant of the hospital into which Blair Castle was converted.

She became engaged in politics in 1920 and was elected member of the house of commons in 1923, becoming parliamentary secretary to the board of education when the Baldwin administration came into office a year later, and held this position until the general election in 1929.

PRESENTING the opposite of the case, Dimitri Bogomoloff will be heard June 14, also from the London studios of the British Broadcasting Corporation. As counsellor to the Russian embassy in London, he is intimately acquainted with all questions arising between the two countries in regard to the propriety of Russian labor conditions, as well as the alleged dumping of soviet goods resulting from what is generally believed to be a system of forced labor.

Recently awarded the Pulitzer prize for a brilliant series of articles on conditions in Russia, Hubert R. Knickerbocker, who will speak June 21 from Berlin, is the correspondent in the German capital of the New York Evening Post and other Curtis publications. At a time when Germany was one of the few European countries to recognize and maintain relations with the soviet republic, Berlin was the distributing point for most of the information about the communist regime which penetrated to America. Knickerbocker has supplemented his wide knowledge of Russia gained during this period by personal tours of the industrial and agricultural sections of European Russia.

Arthur Somers Roche, who tried his hand at newspaper work and practiced law for a while before he became one of America's most popular writers of fiction, will be heard as guest speaker during Collier's Radio Hour, to be broadcast over a coast-to-coast NBC-WJZ network from 6:15 to 7:15 tonight. The program is the last of Collier's current series, the new series being scheduled to start on Sunday, September 13. The subject of Roche's remarks will not be announced until he faces the microphone, but he is as entertaining a talker as he is a writer, so it is a safe prediction that radio listeners will enjoy hearing him. Mr. Roche's most recent story, "The Wrong Wife," is soon to be published in Collier's.

RAYMOND KNIGHT, radio's merriest clown, known to millions as Professor Ambrose J. Weems, whom he created and impersonates during the "Cuckoo" hour broadcast from the mythical station KUKU, will be guest artist during the Bayuk Stag Party to be broadcast over an NBC-WJZ network from 7:15 to 7:45 tonight. Knight will enliven the party with one of his burlesques of other radio programs.

The Bayuk Stag Party will also bring Nat Brusiloff and his orchestra before the microphone.

Gene Tunney will speak over a NBC network Wednesday evening in his first broadcast since he returned from Europe. It will be one of his few "mike" appearances since he retired from the ring.

The former world champion boxer will speak on the recreational and educational advantages of summer camp life. While in Europe Tunney observed the Russian camps for both children and adults and was impressed by their scope. He expressed the hope that America would step ahead in this field.

Tunney will speak under the auspices of the Camp Directors' Association, representing the Boy and Girl Scout organizations, and church, state, municipal and private outdoor camps. They invited him to give his observations on the "go-to-camp" idea.

He will be heard from 6:30 to 6:45 p. m. over an NBC-WJZ network.

STATE AND U. S. WILL HOLD CLINIC

In conjunction with the United States public health service, the Georgia state board of health will hold a special clinic during "Alumni Week" of the medical department of Emory University beginning Monday. Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, commissioner of health for the state, and Joe P. Bowdoin, director of a division of the state board, will take an active part in the clinic.

The occasion will mark the annual session of the Alumni Association of Emory. A program teeming with discussions of professional questions has been arranged, and on Thursday night the visiting doctors will be the guests of the Fulton County Medical Society. A buffet supper will be served.

AMERICAN EXPRESS ANNOUNCES TOURS

"Seeing America will be the goal of great numbers of travelers this summer," says G. M. Shirey, resident manager of the Atlanta office of the American Express Company, describing the approaching vacation season.

"Recognizing the many factors making for increased domestic travel this year," continued Mr. Shirey, "and realizing the need for a certain type of travel, the American Express Company has devised a simplified plan of tours which will appeal to the great majority of those contemplating a trip. This new plan is called 'Travamex' (travel under the care of the American Express) and offers 10 inexpensive tours to interesting places in the United States and Canuada, the durations of which vary from 5 to 34 days.

"Under this Travamex plan the traveler goes alone, or with friends of his own choice, and his trip is completely arranged and reserved in advance. The date of departure, also, is left for his convenience, because the tours can begin at any time desired. That is the most unique point about them: pre-arranged, leaving the traveler free from all details, offering him American Express service everywhere he may go—and yet he can choose his own departure date! The costs are surprisingly low, yet the hotels, transportation and sightseeing provided are excellent.

"The ten itineraries of these tours visit many fascinating places on this continent, and are varied so as to satisfy all travel tastes. They range from a 5-day trip to Virginia Beach and Washington to a 34-day tour visiting the Canadian Rockies, north Pacific coast, California, Yellowstone National Park, and Colorado Springs."

2-WEEK VACATION TOURS FEATURED

For a two-week vacation, John M. Born, steamship passenger agent, is featuring personally conducted tours to Washington, New York and Bermuda, under the sponsorship of the Southern and Pennsylvania railways, and the Furness Bermuda line.

The tours will start every Saturday for the next 11 weeks. The Sunday following the departure is spent in Washington. The next two days are spent in and around New York, sailing the morning of the third for Bermuda. The return voyage is started on the following Wednesday, arriving in New York Friday morning.

COLORED BAPTISTS WILL MEET HERE

Representing a constituency of approximately 4,000,000, the National Baptist Convention (colored) will assemble in Atlanta the week of September 9, according to an announcement Saturday. Many important problems of the colored Baptist church will be discussed, it was said.

Fifty thousand delegates and visitors attended the convention at Chicago last year, and it is expected that fully as many will convene in Atlanta. Philadelphia was this city's principal competitor in the bidding for a 1931 convention site, and through the efforts of Dr. D. D. Crawford, Dr. J. M. Nabrit and Dr. D. F. Thompson, Atlanta was selected.

Pre-convention rumors are that Dr. L. K. Williams, of Chicago, will not offer for reelection as president of the convention. It is known that a new vice-president-at-large will have to be selected to fill the vacancy created by the death of Dr. W. M. Taylor, of Baton Rouge, La. In addition, Dr. A. D. Williams, of Atlanta, died a few weeks ago and his place as corresponding secretary will have to be filled. Elections also will be held to fill the office of treasurer, Dr. S. B. Butler, of Indianapolis, and Dr. C. H. Parrish, of Louisville, national statistician, both of whom also died recently.

Chief among the topics to be discussed at the Atlanta convention will be that of mission work. The convention is carrying on a large and flourishing mission enterprise in Africa, and hospitalization and regimentation is expected to share in the general convention discussion.

CLARK THREAD MILL NEAR COMPLETION

The first unit of the Clark Thread Company's new mill near Austell probably will be in full operation within three and a half months, it was indicated Saturday when the A. K. Adams Company, contractors for the mill unit, announced that the building will be ready for installation of machinery by June 20.

Ten of the 59 mill village houses being built by the Fiske-Carter Construction Company, of Greenville, S. C., are practically complete, and 25 others are in various stages of construction, it was said.

The Adams company is laying the floor of the mill building, and painters are at work.

GROUP WILL VIEW SITES FOR PRISON

With a process of elimination scheduled to begin Monday, selection of a site for the new state prison farm, to cost within $200,000, will probably be made by next Saturday, Judge Vivian B. Stanley, chairman of the special legislative committee authorized to make the purchase, said Saturday.

This week the committee will, after assembling in Macon Tuesday, inspect sites in Twiggs, Wheeler, Tattnall, Jenkins, Washington, Baldwin, Harris, Campbell, Hall, Jefferson and Oglethorpe counties.

Seeks Review.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—James P. Jones, convicted at Richmond, Va., of embezzling funds of the Virginia conference orphanage of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, has asked the supreme court for a review. It will be impossible, however, for the court to act on his petition until it begins its next term in October.

CRACKERS WIN PAIR; DIXIE DAVIS IS SIGNED

Southern league clubs this season are just a strong as their Class B, or inexperienced, players.

The Birmingham "Bee-Brand" players are the class of the lot and the Barons by that sign are leading a dizzy chase. Abernathy, Taylor and Prerost have helped the club tremendously.

The others now stand just where their Bee-Brand players have put them. Comparison of veteran strength leaves little to choose among at least six of the clubs. The Bees spell the difference.

Failure of the Cracker Bees to help the club is partially responsible for their present low status. The combination of weak Bee men plus injuries and sickness has worked all the grief.

HOW TO WIN NIGHT GAMES.

Johnny Dobbs, from his easy seat in the grandstand these days, has discovered the formula for pitching baseball at night.

"A pitcher who is wild has a big psychological advantage after dark," says Johnny. "Batters are gun-shy under the lights and if the man is out there buzzing baseballs around their ears they will not be able to get set.

"This wild Newsome over at Little Rock is the ideal night ball pitcher. None of them dig in on him. Gosh, what a winning streak Dixie Walker and Tom Rogers would have piled up if night baseball had been going on in their day! They didn't mind throwing at batters. I think they enjoyed it. Either one would have won 35 games pitching night ball."

HOW IT WORKED.

This idea was demonstrated Friday night when Frank Pearce, one of the Volunteer Bees, was wild as a buck and had the Crackers pulling away from the plate and falling to the dirt for seven full innings.

When Pearce got warmed up and began finding the plate, the Crackers began murdering him and put on that eight-run rally to win.

PA NOT SO RECKLESS AFTER ALL.

Collyer's Eye, a sporting publication in Chicago, that forecasts racing, boxing, wrestling, the stock market or what have you, picks Battling Bozo to beat ex-Champion Pete Latzo here Tuesday night.

Perhaps after all Pa Stribling, Bozo's manager, is not as careless of his boy's future as appears at first glance.

COLUMBUS AND "IT."

Allen Woodall, who falls naturally into the position of unofficial host whenever a sports event is held at Columbus, writes that plans are made for an old-fashioned good time at the annual invitation golf tournament June 11, 12 and 13.

Gene Cook, Scott Hudson Jr., Paul Duke, Humphrey Wagar, the Minnich Brothers and others will go from here.

Those who have attended one never miss another. Columbus is that way about bringing them back.

AFRAID OF SHADOWS.

Birmingham newspapers are sounding off daily over what they believe to be a threatened split season move. The Birmingham folks are seeing things behind the door.

No move would be made to split the season because (1) one vote from Birmingham's president would kill it and (2) nobody wants one anyhow.

It is tough enough to get through one season with a ball club all in one piece without having to begin all over to play two seasons.

THE YOUNG HOPEFULS.

Southern amateur golf is swinging up to a measure of its ancient glory. When the annual tournament is held at Chattanooga, June 16-20, as fine a field of youngsters as one ever saw will be at the tape.

Emmet Spicer, of Memphis, the champion; Albert Wheeler, the Vanderbilt student; George Bush and Jesse Rainwater, of New Orleans; Wilbur Oakes and Polly Boyd, of Chattanooga; Sam Perry, of Birmingham; Julius Hughes, Charlie Yates, Scott Hudson Jr., Dave and Charlie Black, of Atlanta, are a few of the best ones.

They can play golf in the best tradition of the southland. Old-timers who attend will see plenty of rousing golf, as good as ever has been played in our section.

STRIB PUNISHES SPAR PARTNERS IN SNAPPY DRILL

Four Foes Smacked Hard; "Boy" on Way to Peak.

By Ralph McGill.
Staff Correspondent.

STRIBLING'S TRAINING CAMP, GEAUGA LAKE, Ohio, June 6.—Pa Stribling's boy, W. L., came surging into camp shortly after noon today just in time to slam four sparring partners about the ring in a very brisk caper of four rounds.

The boy was just in from Toledo, where he had gone Friday.

In Toledo they had the bed that Jack Dempsey slept in a dozen years ago the night before and the night after he knocked out Jess Willard to win the world's title. They got the bed out and Stribling slept in it.

OLD PEPPER.

The boy had a great time in Toledo and he was in the ring today with a lot of the old paprika. He was hitting harder than ever and he went the four rounds against a fresh man each round and finished strong.

He was a bit wild from the tee on some of his rights, but this far ahead of the fight he was in great shape. He was smacking those boys hard when he hit and they had to cut one round short in order to keep Glenn Miller, 194-pound heavyweight from Cleveland, from hitting the old canvas ring rug.

"I'm happy," said Pa as he came into the pressroom where your correspondent was busy writing. "I'm happy," said Pa, whereupon he smote your correspondent on the back with such force that the typewriter and the old nose met.

NEVER AGAIN.

"Never again will I let the boy lay off as long as he did," said Pa. "He was idle from December 12, when he fought Tuffy Griffiths, until he started training here. And that's too long.

"I was worried last Saturday when the boy looked slow. I should have known better. He was just at the point where he was coming back. He's over the ridge now and from now on he'll be moving forward. He looked 100 per cent better today than last Saturday. Things are all right now."

Pa brought four lads out today, two of them colored, and they were good boys, going fast. Nat Hogan, colored heavyweight from Los Angeles, weighing 182, was the first one. W. L. gave him a boxing lesson, landed one right cross, four jabs, a straight right and had the big boy back-pedaling.

GLENN FALTERS.

Glenn Miller, from Cleveland, was the lad they had to give a break on the time. He was about out, blood flowing from his mouth and his knees about ready to imitate the old sign.

Gene Stanton, Johnny Risko's stablemate, was next, and Sam Ward, a fast, smart-boxing colored light-heavyweight, ended the boxing.

The sparring partners make W. L. work. Any one of them would have found Tony Marillo or Pedro Lopez, who worked with Max Schmeling Friday when this reporter watched the German go, easy.

Johnny Risko, looking better than ever, and no doubt he is, was at the ringside again today.

STILL SURE.

"Well, he's got the snap today," said Johnny. "The boy is good in there. I'd rather he be a bit wild at this time than be accurate. I still stick to my statement that he will win from Schmeling."

The weather today was terrible. Ohio weather has been that was since the Striblings arrived, it was cold and raw and raining all morning. In the afternoon it faired up, as the boys say, and the sun came out hot, but soon went away.

Bobby Hooks, who arrived Friday night, will work one round with W. L. Sunday afternoon in the public workout scheduled for 3 o'clock.

The day will be the last one in which W. L. will take part in any intensive celebration. At least that is the theory now.

OFF TO AKRON.

Sunday morning he goes to the Goodyear plant at Akron to see the big dirigible (the one which makes the Los Angeles look like a toy) in the process of construction. He will have lunch there with Goodyear officials.

Watts Gunn Loses, McIntire Is Winner

WILMINGTON, Del., June 6.—(AP) William McIntire, of Rolling Green, today won the Wilmington Country Club invitation championship from F. B. Graven, of Port Washington, 2 and 1, in the finals.

McIntire advanced to the finals by beating Watts Gunn, Oakmont Country Club, Pittsburgh, 3 and 2, while Graven went into the finals by defeating C. W. Baker Jr., of the Wilmington club.

State Affiliation Sought By Cleveland Ringmen

STRIBLING'S TRAINING CAMP, GEAUGA LAKE, Ohio, June 6.—Cleveland's Boxing Association, until recently an independent association, today made application to the Ohio Association of Boxing Commissions for membership.

This association is affiliated with the National Boxing Association, which has recognized Stribling as the leading American heavyweight and the fight on July 3 as being for the title.

The application has a special significance in that it takes the question of the referee out of local politics.

Mule Slides Home in Dust Cloud

"Mule" Shirley, giant Cracker first sacker, came home on the gallop as Autry doubled in the seventh inning of Saturday afternoon's game with the Vols and hit the dirt right in front of George Cornett's camera, as shown above. Shirley's counter was one of seven the Crackers used to take the second game from the Nashville outfit.

TROJANS TAKE TRACK HONORS

Coast Stars Gallop to Title in Collegiates at Chicago.

By Charles Dunkley,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

STAGG FIELD, CHICAGO, June 6.—(AP)—Athletes of the University of Southern California swept into the National Collegiate Athletic Association track and field championship today with a record-smashing total of 77 1-7 points.

The Trojans, victorious in all their track and field battles this season, won overwhelmingly. Their nearest rival was Ohio State, which scored 31 1-7 points, with Illinois third with 28.

The Californians, winners of the championship a year ago, hung up a new high point record today, eclipsing the previous record of 72 points established by Leland Stanford in 1929. The Trojans scored in 11 of the 15 events, winning four championships and tying for another.

The meet resulted in two record-breaking performances despite track conditions. The cinder path was heavy due to an all-night rain and the field was soggy and slippery. All afternoon a mist and fog hung over Stagg field.

The Southern Californians won championships in the 100-yard dash and the 440-yard dash, on the track; the shot-put and discus in the field, and tied for the pole vault in the air.

Frank Wykoff, the Trojan sprinter, who twice has unofficially run the 100-yard dash in :09.4, conquered his negro rival, Eddie Tolan, of Michigan, world's 100-yard dash champion, in a thrilling finish, beating him to the tape in :09.6. Wykoff's chest hit the tape only a few inches ahead of Tolan.

Vic Williams, intercollegiate quarter-mile champion, who last week tied Ted Meredith's world record of :47.4, ran a clever race to win the event for Southern California. He stayed back until the stretch, then with a burst of speed caught and passed James Gordon, of Miami University, to win by four yards in :48.3. Bob Hall was a double winner for the Trojans, with victories in the shot-put and discus. William Graber, who cleared 14 feet 1-2 inch to win the pole vault in the I. C. A. A. A. A. meet last week, gained Southern California's share of

'Coon Rescuers Gave Geauga Lake Its Name

Skeptic Old Lady Hears Interesting History From Hog-Calling Champion.

By Ralph McGill,
Constitution Staff Correspondent.

STRIBLING'S TRAINING CAMP, Geauga Lake, June 6—"Well, well well," said an old lady with a feminine monocle, who had been persuaded to come out and watch a fighter in training. "Well, well, well, I suppose this lake is named after some beautiful Indian chief's daughter who used to live here."

Ralph McGill.

"No, mam, begging your pardon, mam," said Hughey Henry, who has been going around getting up some of the history on the place, "No, mam, this place was named after a coon."

"Sir," said the old lady indignantly, "are you referring to a member of another race in a slangy fashion? If you are from the south you should—"

"Oh, no, mam," interrupted Hughey Henry, who is the comic relief around the camp, providing entertainment for the spectators between rounds. "Oh, no, mam," said Henry. "I do not know for what coon this lake was named. He must be nameless. But for a fact, madam, it is called 'Coon Lake' in the language of the gallant Iriquois who fought, bled and died here in the pursuit of life, liberty and squaws. Geauga is the word for 'coon' in the language of the gallant Iriquois. And even now, on cool evenings when the amusement park crowds are gone, the coons come down to the lake. Would you like to hear a story I just heard, madam?"

"I'M NOT so sure," said the lady, "but you might begin. I am disappointed that the lake should be named after so lowly a creature, but begin."

"Well, madam, the story I heard over at the local ale house last night," said Hughey Henry, "was that years ago, in the year of 1812, John Paul Jones was training his young sailors here to go out on Lake Erie and battle the British.

"The Iriquois were hand in glove with the British and were helping run ale over the border. They used to sit on the bank of the lake and boo the Americans.

FISH STEALERS.

"Every night the Americans had to post a watch over their fish. They caught fish to eat because the funds which John Paul Jones had were very low indeed and he could not purchase many edibles for his sailors. The 'coons would come down, locate the line where the fish were tied up, pull it in and eat up the fish. At that time the lake was nameless, but the 'coons were here just the same.

"Well, madam, the story goes that one night John Paul Jones' sailors went off to Cleveland for the night and left only a small guard on one of the ships. There was an Iriquois who had been selling ale that day and the guard, I am sorry to say, madam, became very fried, indeed.

"As soon as the boys got to a ing 'Sweet Adeline' the Iriquois in their canoes and paddled out. They captured the Americans and tied them up with some heavy fishing lines.

COONS TO THE RESCUE.

"The Indians debated for awhile what to do. They finally decided that it would be a great joke if they would tie the men on the fish lines and let their pals find them when they returned. This they did, throwing the men in the lake.

"No sooner had they disap-

Bob Comes Home From Coast Today

Bobby Jones will be back from the Battle of Hollywood today. The emperor of golf who abdicated his throne and went west to make a series of educational motion pictures on golf, has completed his toil before the camera.

The first of the series of 12 pictures entitled, "The Putter," was given its first showing at the Fox theater yesterday. It was acclaimed by golfers and non-golfers as a most entertaining and instructive exposition of the use of the putter.

Before he left Hollywood, Bobby told the press that he was definitely through with motion pictures and that he was coming home to resume his law practice. If he attends national golf championships this summer it will be as a spectator or a reporter, not a competitor.

Miss Orcutt Shoots 82 in British Meet

PORTMARNOCK, Ireland, June 6. (UP)—Maureen Orcutt, one of America's finest women players and that country's outstanding entrant in the British women's golf championship, scored an 82 in the first qualifying round of the tournament today. She played her round in a drenching thundershower.

The best score of the qualifying was turned in by Enid Wilson, England, who, despite the miserable weather, scored a sparkling 75. Molly Gourlay and Dorothy Pearson, both of England, scored 83 and 90, respectively.

GRANT ABANDONS DIXIE NET CROWN

Atlanta Star Says Other Tourney Dates Prevent His Entry.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 6.—(AP)—Bryant Grant, of Atlanta, southern tennis champion, announced here today that he will not compete in the 1931 Southern Tournament. Grant is in Memphis for exhibition matches this afternoon and tomorrow with Cliff Sutter.

Grant said conflict in dates with other tournaments which he had entered would prevent him defending his Southern Lawn Tennis Association title.

Tournaments in which he will play this year include the National Intercollegiate, National Clay Court, Delaware State and Rye, N. Y., Newport and Southampton tourneys.

Bryan Grant Beats Cliff Sutter.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 6.—(AP)—Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, defeated Clifford Sutter, Tulane star of New Orleans, 6-3, 7-9, 6-4, 2-6 and 8-6 in an exhibition tennis match here this afternoon.

Leo Lermond Sets New Mile Run Mark

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—A smashing 4:15 mile by Leo Lermond, former Boston A. A. middle distance ace, furnished the one outstanding event on the New York A. C. track and field meet program at Travers Island today. Scratches by several stars, including most of the Stanford athletes, robbed the meet of many of its expected thrills.

Lermond, running unattached, cracked a 36-year-old record when he crossed the finish line in the mile in 4 minutes 15 seconds flat to beat Gene Venzke, of New York, by seven yards. The Travers Island record was set at 4:15 3-5 by Tommy Connors, Irish ace, in 1895. Lermond and Venzke both ran from scratch. Joseph Mangan, of Cornell, given 10 yards, was third.

Robert Jones, of Stanford, won the discus throw with a toss of 146 feet 11 1-4 inches while Norwood G. Wright, former Cornell ace, competing for the New York A. C., tossed the hammer 170 feet 8 1-2 inches to beat Allan Converse, of Yale, and the veteran Pat McDonald, of the N. Y. A. C.

Fred Sturdy, of the Los Angeles A. C., cleared 13 feet 6 inches in the pole vault and won easily while George Spitz, New York University freshman, captured the high jump at 6 feet 6 inches.

Ray Conger, Illinois A. C. flyer, withdrew from the half mile and the other scratch star, Phil Edwards, had to be content with second place. Edwards could not overcome a 16-yard handicap he conceded Fred Lord, unattached, and Lord won in 1:54 4-5.

NEW ADDITION WINS IN DEBUT; CLUB HITS HARD

Atlanta Takes First Game, 7-2, and Nightcap, 8-2.

By Ed Danforth.

Out of the Chattanooga discards yesterday the Atlanta Day and Night Baseball Octopus, Inc., picked up an old battered luck piece.

It was Frank (Dixie) Davis, the Human Rabbit's Foot, who waved his leathery arm in rhythmic areas to win the final night game from the tottering Nashvilles, 8 to 2. The victory gave the Crackers a clean sweep of three-game series and put them into the .500 class again. This morning they are half a game out of first division and just one thin game behind Chattanooga, the third-place tenants. If the Crackers win their opening game with the Lookouts up the road today they will be up there in the first flight again.

"OLD" DIXIE.

Dixie Davis is 40 years old, according to the vital statistics in the book. Bert Niehoff and Joe Engle cut him off the Lookout roster a few days ago. He came into town a free agent and made a deal for himself with R. J. Spiller. The papers were signed just in time for Old Dixie to work the night game.

While the Vols just now are not tearing down any fences with their base hits, they are not exactly helpless at the plate. Yet Davis fired his jerky curve ball along in the artificial light and held them to six almost useless hits.

Meanwhile, from the awakened Cracker bats continued the stream of safe blows that began Friday night in the eighth inning of that spectacular game. They took a lead in the fourth inning Saturday and never were in danger.

MORE STATISTICS.

Only 2,200 saw the Saturday night game. Apparently that old-fashioned custom that from time immemorial has set Saturday night apart for serious ablutions still prevails in our town. The two games played on Saturday nights here have drawn comparatively slim crowds.

Yet the 2,200 count at the night turnstile was twice the number that was registered in the afternoon. The matinee was a sparkling affair, too, and a pity it was that it was played in semi-privacy.

Climax Blethen, his leg taped from thigh to knee and giving him much pain, pitched as gallant a game as a man ever pitched. It hurt him to pivot, yet he kept whipping the ball in there and kept all but two Vols away from the plate. Climax won, 7 to 2, and yielded 11 hits.

PERFECT LAD.

Climax pitches that way. He whips the boys without hurting their batting averages, which is the mark of a perfect gentleman. The Crackers reeled off four double plays to help their pitching hero along.

The Crackers, from top to bottom of the list, snapped out of their batting slump in the Nashville set. Last night nearly every man drove in a run. Mule Shirley hit three for five in the night game and had one in the afternoon. Roy Carlyle also had three blows, two of which were doubles. He had two hits in the afternoon. The box score of the night game shows how the young men in the lower end

Dixie Golf Stars Will Seek Place in 'Open' Field Monday

FINAL PRACTICE ROUNDS SLATED FOR ACES TODAY

Strong Field Seeks Single Available Place at East Lake.

By Roy White.

Atlanta's two entries for the national open championship tournament, Howard Beckett, Capital City Country Club professional, and Errie Ball, assistant professional at East Lake Country Club, will head a parade of 14 southern golfers today in the practice rounds on the No. 1 East Lake course for the qualifying Monday morning.

Errie and Frank Bell, the East Lake pros, have a foursome scheduled with Charlie Hall, Birmingham pro, and Sam Perry, former southern amateur and intercollegiate champion, this afternoon at East Lake. Beckett also is scheduled to play an 18-hole match today.

Qualifying round for the fifth district sectional eliminations for play in the national open will be played Monday over the 36-hole route on the No. 1 course. There will be 18 holes in the morning and another 18 in the afternoon.

Fourteen entries were recorded from this district, with one to be selected for the open fields.

Charlie Hall, southern P. G. A. president, and Eddie Miller, southeastern P. G. A. champion, were the representatives last year, but Miller has not entered this year.

Of the 14 entries, three are amateurs and will make the going tough for some of the professionals. They include Sam Perry, of Birmingham; James Tupper, of Nashville, Tenn., and Corporal Clyde De Pishon, of Parris Island, S. C.

The 11 professionals include Errie Ball and Howard Beckett, Atlanta; Doyle Smith, Birmingham; Eugene McCarthy, Columbia, S. C.; Frank Steveson, Americus, Ga.; Charles Gray, Augusta, Ga.; Dan Goss, Birmingham, Ala.; Charles Hall, Birmingham, Ala.; Bob Spence, Marion, S. C.; Andrew Gray, Wilmington, N. C., and E. W. Gamm, Chattanooga.

In today's foursome two veterans of many years of campaigning, Frank Ball and Charlie Hall, will give their final instructions to their "bosses," Errie Ball and Sam Perry. The pros are particularly anxious for the youngsters to make the grade. It was a source of regret to Hall that Perry lost out last year after leading the field by four strokes as the afternoon round started. Perry found plenty of trouble in a sand trap and bunker guarding the fourteenth green, where a nine sent him out of the running.

North Georgia League Opens Today.

Coosa Country Club at Rome, Ingleside and Marietta Country Clubs will be hosts this afternoon in the 1931 opening of the North Georgia Golf league. West End, defending champions, will play at Rome, Ansley Park, runners-up last year, will meet Ingleside, and Forrest Hills will journey to Marietta for the initial matches.

Three matches are planned to be played every other Sunday afternoon. The schedule will run through October 18, with an annual banquet to follow the close of the season.

Each team will consist of 12 players with a limit of 16, with the exception of Ingleside and Marietta. Those two teams will have only eight players, as prescribed at the organization meeting of the league some time ago.

West End and Rome have agreed to play 16 golfers on their teams this afternoon and it will be left to the participating teams whether or not 12 or 16 players will be used.

Morgan McNeel, of Marietta, is president of the league. Other officers include Dr. Dan Sage Sr., of Ansley Park, vice president, and W. B. Griffin, of Forrest Hills, secretary-treasurer.

Ingleside Tourney Slated Next Sunday.

Ingleside Country Club golfers will qualify Saturday for play Sunday in the annual club championship tournament. The tournament will be held earlier than ever before to allow every player in the club to participate. Later in the summer some of the members will be on vacation and unable to compete.

It is the major tourney of the year at the club and the course is in much better condition now than at any time during the past season. The summer greens have been opened for play and the putting surface is not badly worn as it will be later in the summer.

The 16 low scores will make up the championship flight and other players will be grouped in flights of eight each. Handicaps will not apply.

Each round, except the championship, will be over the 18-hole route First round matches will be played Sunday, June 14; quarter-final matches will be completed before June 19, with the semi-finals June 20 and the finals Sunday, June 21.

Baltimore Woman Wins Maryland Title

BALTIMORE, June 6.—(AP)—Miss Virginia Holzderber, Baltimore, won the Maryland woman's golf title for the third time today by defeating Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, 3 and 2. Mrs. Morrow was defending the title, which she won last year for the fifth time.

THE SPORTLIGHT

By Grantland Rice

Steaming Up the Heavies.

THERE will soon be a sound of revelry at night. Possibly the sound of heavy bodies landing with a resonant thud. At any rate, they are now steaming up the heavyweights. The mammoths and the mastodons are back again.

Five hundred and fifty pounds of human flesh will be hoisted into one ring at Ebbetts Field next week when Carnera and Redmond start swinging, or pushing, as the case may be. Jack Dempsey writes from Reno that his new stands are nearly ready and that Max Baer and Paulino are all set for their 20-round tussle, and both can take it in copious quantities. Stribling and Schmeling are now entering the more important stages of their training periods for the Cleveland party.

In fact, most of them are busy except Jack Sharkey, whose only consolation is that his man, Ernie Schaaf, stopped Maloney in one minute and 10 seconds, when Carnera could make no headway in 60 minutes against him. Sharkey will have to be tossed into the picture before long, for while there is no glorious history connected with his ring achievements, the same can be said of all the others. And there are too many who still believe Sharkey is the best of the lot. This part of the debate must still be proved.

At any rate, this summer should see a lot of the debris cleaned away and piled over in one corner. It is about time. Not that civilization hangs breathlessly on any such outcome, but it is a tangle that might as well be unraveled for the benefit of the puzzle workers.

Another Challenger.

These are hectic days for Babe Ruth. He is beginning to know and feel the sufferings of the kings. Last fall it was Hack Wilson who suddenly jumped in and removed his home run crown. This season it is the amazing Chuck Klein who is setting a terrific pace, which may never be stopped.

The powerful Chuck has been a home run hitter for two seasons. But when he opened the 1931 show with two homers he issued his warning to the Babe, Hack and all the others. In his first western game he fired another double broadside at the Cincinnati Reds, lifting his total at that point to 13.

Chuck is not only after the season's leadership, but also Babe Ruth's record of 60 in a season. Hornsby calls him the most improved ball player he has seen for a long time. And this means in fielding as well as in hitting.

The historic Babe is doing pretty well on his own account, but he is finding it a tough job to face some new challenger every year.

The New Mother Goose.

There was an old woman who lived in a shoe—
That's nothing to make a bloke stare;
If the shoe had belonged to Carnera then she would have had extra bedrooms to spare.

Class Counts.

Twenty Grand, the favorite, won the Kentucky Derby, and Cameronian, the big favorite, won the London Derby.

There will always be a big reversal in the way of horse flesh in the minor stakes, but the big ones run fairly true to class.

This is what puzzles the pickers in the coming meeting between Twenty Grand and Jamestown next week in the Belmont Stakes. For they both have class, almost to an equal degree. Twenty Grand has the edge in stamina. Jamestown has the edge in speed. And the margin isn't wide enough to show any great difference in the early checking up.

Armour's Great Victory.

The victory of Tommy Armour in the British open golf championship is another triumph for rare form and cool courage against physical weaknesses and limitations. With a left arm and a left leg ravaged by hostile shrapnel in the World War, Armour found himself with a distinct handicap in rebuilding his game after the fighting was over in France.

How well he has succeeded is attested by his record in the past few years. Furthermore, he has developed one of the most pleasing and at the same time effective swings ever known to golf. That fine old master, J. H. Taylor, watched Armour and marveled at the fine accuracy of his iron play at Carnoustie.

Another victory by a visiting entry runs up the string of reverses which British golf has suffered in its annual golf championship battles to eight successive years with but a break in a stand of 11 years. Young Henry Cotton, a leading hope for the home defense, played brilliantly through the first half of the struggle, but a lapse on the third round practically shut off all hopes for him.

The challenge of Jose Jurado was a thrilling one and fell just short of coming through successfully. This mighty little Argentine played superb golf, but, as B Jones has frequently pointed out, there is a terrific strain on the man setting the pace in that final round. Armour, starting early, struck one of his most brilliant scoring moods and, when his mark was posted, it was no help to Jurado, just starting that difficult incoming nine at Carnoustie.

Mac Smith had a bad break to come on his game a shade too early when he made a show of the field in the qualifying rounds. Only once, in the third round, was he able to get going after the real test began. Both Gene Sarazen and Johnny Farrell played sterling golf, but neither was quite equal to the big test.

COLUMBUS READY FOR GOLF MEET

Plans Completed for Invitation; Atlantans To Compete.

COLUMBUS, Ga., June 6.—Extensive preparations have been completed by officials of the Columbus Country Club for the eighth annual Columbus invitation golf tournament, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

Invitations have been extended to every golf club in Georgia, Florida and Alabama and preparations have been made to care for more than 100 entries. In addition to the three days of golf, there will be numerous entertainment features for the visitors.

There will be 18 holes of qualifying Thursday, after which players will be divided into groups of 16 each. There will be two rounds of 18 holes Friday and another pair of 18-hole rounds, Saturday. Prizes await the medalist, and winners and runners up in each flight. No player will be left out and as many flights as necessary will be formed.

Frank Garrard, Columbus amateur, is defending champion, having won the title for the past two years. He defeated Charley Brumby, a Cedartown youth, in the finals last year.

A large group of Atlanta players are expected to compete in the tourney. Among them are Dick Voorhis, Scott Hudson Jr., Berrien Moore Jr., and Charlie Yates Jr., of East Lake; Julius Hughes and Fred Pace, of Druid Hills; Dan Sage Jr. and Humphrey Wager, of Ansley Park, and Fred and Bill Minnich, of Capital City. A number of other Atlantans are expected to enter before Thursday.

Venetian Sport Club To Open Saturday

Formal openng of the Venetian Athletic Club will take place at 2 o'clock next Saturday afternoon, at the Ponce de Leon avenue grounds.

DR. BALLENGER LEADS GOLFERS AT DRUID HILLS

Wins Medal Honors in President's Tourney With Gross of 78.

Dr. E. G. Ballenger, with a gross of 78 minus 14 strokes handicap, was medalist in the qualifying rounds for play in the Druid Hills President's cup tournament. Dr. Ballenger's 64 net, scored on Thursday afternoon, remained low through the three days of qualifying. B. E. Shields and Dr. W. E. Barber, with nets of 66 each, were tied for second low honors.

Match play will start this afternoon, and Wednesday afternoon will be the last day for playing off first-round matches. The second rounds will be completed during the latter part of the week with the quarter and semi-finals slated for next week.

It will be a handicap tournament and three-fourths handicap will apply in each flight throughout the tournament.

Harry Stephens, club professional, and Dr. E. G. Ballenger, chairman of the tournament committee, will be in charge of the matches.

The pairings follow:

FIRST FLIGHT.

Grover Middlebrooks vs. Joe Shaw.
Fred Teague vs. Jack Bothamley.
Dr. E. G. Ballenger vs. Dr. Claude Hughes.
W. F. Methvin vs. B. E. Shields.
V. B. Warren vs. J. R. Pattillo.
Graham Williams vs. Wilmer Davis.
Dr. W. E. Barber vs. Joe Horacek Sr.
Russell Bridges vs. A. C. Bromberg.

SECOND FLIGHT.

W. A. Keenan vs. George Argo.
L. L. Tanney vs. J. R. Wilson.
Hodge Mentzer vs. Joe Horacek Jr.
J. H. Ewing vs. W. A. Gilreath.
H. S. Collinsworth vs. W. C. Spiker.
H. B. Argo vs. Dr. M. D. Huff.
E. A. Bancker vs. Alfred Newell.
R. Pringle vs. R. P. Black.

Moore and Hudson Meet for Title.

Berrien Moore Jr., and Scott Hudson Jr., will meet Tuesday or Wednesday afternoon on the No. 2 East Lake course in the finals of the golf committee trophy tournament.

Moore advanced to the finals several days ago with a semi-final victory over H. G. Graves, while Hudson entered the finals Saturday afternoon with a 7-6 victory over Big Bob Jones.

In his spectacular round Saturday, Hudson shot a 70, one under par, to defeat the veteran. It was one of Hudson's best rounds in recent weeks and ranks him one of the dependables in Atlanta's hope for a southern amateur and Georgia state crown during the next two months. It was not Jones' bad play, but Hudson's subpar round that placed the youngsters together in the final round.

In the second flight, Mike Benton won from O. J. Coe by default. C. E. Peppitt won from Dr. W. C. Warren by default and then lost, 2-1, to Arch Martin in the semi-finals.

W. D. Harwell and W. D. Taulman won their way to the finals of the third flight. Harwell defeated Keith Conway, 1 up, and won a default over G. D. Adair. Taulman defeated H. R. Roberts, 2-1.

In the fourth flight, E. B. Zachary defeated Fred Nesbitt, 2-1, and R. A. Clarke defeated J. H. Starr, 5-4, in the semi-finals.

All final matches will be played during the coming week, with a majority of the matches slated for Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons.

Gene Cook Low At Week-End.

Gene Cook, twice former Georgia amateur champion, with a 68, was medalist Saturday in a ball sweepstakes tournament on the West End course. Johnny Adamson was second with a 72 and Alva (Goat) Cochran and J. W. Simmons were third with a pair of 73s.

Cook, Cochran and Max Pittard, a former president of the West End Club, shared honors for first prize in Class A with net scores of 66.

J. A. Henderson and W. M. Stafford, with nets of 65, shared high honors in Class B with R. G. Lyons second with a 66.

Class C was won by N. E. Love with a net of 63, with Pat O'Brien second and P. D. Johnson third. It was the first tournament of the year and drew an unusually large entry.

Johnny Adamson, chairman of the tourney committee, announced Saturday that a ringer tournament to continue through the month of June and July will start next Saturday afternoon.

It was also announced that a club handicap championship tourney will start Saturday afternoon. Qualifying rounds will be played Saturday and Sunday, with match play slated to start Monday, June 15.

Capital City Meet In Quarter-Finals.

Dick Garlington, the medalist, defeated F. P. O'Neill, 5-4, and advanced to the quarter-final round of the President's trophy tournament on the Capital City Club course during the week-end.

Other second-round matches in the championship flight resulted in a 3-2 victory for W. T. Healey over D. C. Black; a default for Jim Ison over R. H. White Jr., and C. B. Nunnally defeated W. C. Caye, 1 up. In the second flight, Tom Pitts won from Ed Upton Jr., by default.

In the third flight, H. C. Jones won by default over K. H. Morton; Jack Lawless won from R. H. Martin by default; Roy Petty defeated H. C. Jones, 4-3; J. L. Respess defeated S. B. Ives, 2-1, and Jack London defeated John Jarrell, 6-4.

G. B. Ashe defeated Russell Bellman, 8-6; R. F. Maddox Jr., defeated Joe Mangum, 5-3, and A. Goddschaldt defeated R. L. Rhorer, 2-1, in the fourth flight.

Scores Are High At Ansley Park.

Summer greens, summer rules and driving from the back tees proved a stumbling block and hazard to Ansley Park golfers Saturday and qualifying scores for play in the president's trophy tournament soared several strokes above normal.

O. C. Blackmon, with a 76, set the pace in the early rounds. Johnny Welch, Charlie Strong and H. C. Nowell shared second low honor with 77s, and Dr. Dan Sage was next with a 78.

The remaining players will have their opportunity this afternoon to qualify and enter play Monday afternoon. One week will be given to each round of play in order that every member of the club may have the chance to participate.

Jim Ison Joins Hole-in-One Club.

Jim Ison, a veteran Atlanta golfer, was made a member of the hole-in-one club Saturday afternoon on the Capital City Country Club course when his tee shot on No. 12 rolled into the cup. It is a par 3 140-yard hole.

Ison had won a defaulted match in the president's trophy tourney and was playing in a foursome with Dick Garlington, John Westmoreland and Dr. W. C. Warren Jr.

Ingleside Golfers To Complete Tourney.

Ingleside Country Club golfers will complete the remainder of a blind par handicap tournament this afternoon. The tourney was held over for this afternoon in order that a large number of the members may participate.

M'KINLEY BATS, PITCHES MATES TO 8-0 TRIUMPH

Pattillo Blanks East End Methodist in Fast Game.

Pattillo Memorial hit the offerings of Kennemore and Evans hard while McKinley pitched brilliant ball and batted himself to shut out the East End Methodists, 8 to 0.

Gardner, with two hits, one of them a four-bagger, and McKinley, with two singles, led the stick work for the winners.

McKinley let the losers down with only four hits.

BUTCHER WINS.

The superb twirling of Butcher, who held Woodlawn Presbyterian to four scattered hits, enabled Mt. Carmel Christian to chalk up a 10-to-1 victory.

Woodlawn took the lead by scoring their one and only run in the first inning, but Mt. Carmel came back in the second to tally three times and put the game on ice.

MILLER FANS 12.

The brilliant pitching of Miller, who gave up only eight hits and struck out 12 batters, enabled the Inman Park Baptists to chalk up their eighth straight victory at the expense of Oakhurst Presbyterians, 13 to 5.

Edge, Inman Park right fielder, pulled the fielding sensation of the day when he made a beautiful catch of a hit that was labeled a home run with the bases loaded.

Fred Ward Winner In 20-Mile Marathon

HOUSTON, Texas, June 6.—(AP)—Fred Ward, of Dover, N. J., attached to the Millrose A. C., won the second annual 20-mile marathon of the national A. A. U. here today in two hours 10 minutes 56.2 seconds. Last year he set a record of two hours and 12 seconds.

Good Spring Campaign Is Closed by Jackets

Dunlap, Jones and Maree Close Tech Careers After Season of Varied Success.

Their September start made from a quagmire of memoried failures, Georgia Tech's athletes leave the Flats Monday—some to return and others already through with college sports—with a bright record of triumphs and brilliant hopes for the future.

The fall campaign football was, if not highly successful, at least eminently satisfactory. The winter grind—basketball and swimming—was better. The spring wars, baseball, track, golf, tennis, lacrosse and football practice, were fine. These Jackets, who rose to the peaks on New Year's Day of 1929 and who have not been in the thick of the fighting since, are taking the road back. The 1931-32 school year promises to be full with victories.

Tech loses three of her brightest stars when the diplomas are passed around Monday morning. Earl Dunlap, Vance Maree and Tom Jones will all be in the line filing by the president's dais. They are the last of the Rose Bowl eleven; each participated in the other sports and won campus honors in addition to his football work.

Earl played baseball, threw the javelin and boxed in the sports world; Vance played basketball and boxed; Tom played baseball and basketball. All were active along other lines, prominent in campus life. All were members of Tech's highest stamp of approval for the all-round man.

Three of the best, those. They carried Tech to the top in football and fought to keep the White and Gold up there. They worked for the school in every way possible. They'll work just as hard in this other battle—life, and they'll do just as well. The best wishes of a multitude are with them. And the memory of them will serve to spur future Tech teams on. They've joined the ranks of Tech's immortals.

The memory of this spring campaign will be another spur for the years to come.

When Tech's slates were wiped clean at the annual football banquet the Jackets stepped off the mark on the road to athletic laurels.

The basketball team, starting slowly, picked up as the season progressed and was a favored dark horse in the tourney, only to lose out as injuries set in to hurt them.

The baseball team, finishing fifth in the Dixie College league, broke even with Georgia after being down to the Bulldogs in each of the two series, and placed two of its aces, Duck McKee and Ike Farmer, on the all-star team. Kid Clay's nine, erratic, enjoyed a season which must be termed successful.

The track team, under Coach Ed Hamm, placed well in its larger meets and put the gold star to its campaign by trimming Georgia in a dual meet at the Flats.

The swimming team repeated for its Southern conference title and swept through its schedule easily. Ish Williams, young free-style star, added to the Jackets' fame by turning in a great performance at the intercollegiates at Chicago.

With Scott Hudson Jr. and Wilbur Oakes setting a great pace, the Tech golf squad also enjoyed a successful season.

The tennis team also won its way to a good record. Lacrosse success was less, yet Dr. Crenshaw's squad did nicely.

Freshman teams, especially in baseball and track, accounted for great records and promise to strengthen the 1932 varsity appreciably.

Boxing, baby of Tech's sports, had a good year under Mike Chambers, climaxed by the showing of Max Morris Jr. in the National A. A. U. tourney at New York.

Football practice, completing the spring program at the Flats, brought Jack Cannon and Bobby Dodd to Tech as assistant coaches and a host of sophomores to the varsity squad. The youngsters will round out a capable squad for the campaign, which isn't so far around the corner, and the new coaches fitted in well and did much good during the spring drills.

These Jackets may have started slowly last September, but they picked up speed as the school year wore to its close. And they look like front runners for the 1931-32 classic.

Dog Races Planned For St. Petersburg

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., June 6.—(AP)—Officials of the St. Petersburg Kennel Club plan to make application for permit to operate a 90-day dog racing season here as soon as the racing commission is named by Governor Carlton.

Once permission is given, the matter will be referred to the voters of Pinellas county, it was announced by John Brooks, director of the club.

Battling Bozo Faces Hard Test in Bout With Latzo Tuesday Night

'PA' WILL FLY HERE FOR BOUT AT AUDITORIUM

Ted Goodrich Meets Spike Webb in Prelim Bout on Card.

Up at Geauga Lake, Ohio, where Young Stribling is getting ready for the battle of his life, Pa Stribling is preparing to fly south in a hurry. Pa has a side interest now in Battling Bozo, the Birmingham Buffoon, who fights Pete Latzo, ex-welterweight champion of the world, here at the auditorium Tuesday night.

Pa not only is the manager of Bozo but the promoter of the show. He is keeping the fistic field in Atlanta cultivated while chaperoning his son in his quest for the world's heavyweight crown now worn by Max Schmeling. The show here will gross 38 rounds, more or less, of fisticuffing and is the first of a series of important matches the elder Stribling hopes to stage.

Bozo made a hit with fans here recently when he kept them laughing at his antics for four rounds, then knocked out Murray Gitlitz, of New York, in the fifth round. Behind the clowning of the eccentric character is a lot of boxing knowledge and solid punching ability. Bozo does no end of cutting up, but there is a method in his antics. All his opponents thus far—even the now ex-champion Maxie Rosenbloom—have been confused by his weaving and ducking.

Both Bozo and Latzo now are light-heavyweights. Bozo is just coming into prominence. Latzo, since he lost the welterweight crown to Joe Dundee in 1927, has taken on weight and is fighting his way along in the light-heavyweight class. It will be a contest between an up-and-coming youngster and a veteran who is trying to keep a precarious foothold in the business.

In addition to the headliner, "Pa" has built an entertaining card of preliminaries. The semi-windup will be an eight-round scrap between Ted Goodrich and Spike Webb, both local favorites. In the last fight here between them, the referee gave a draw; fans were divided in their opinion on the outcome, however, each contestant being favored in the vocal protests.

Pa will remain here only long enough to check up the house. Then he will fly back to Geauga Lake to resume direction of W. L.

HOW THE LAKE GOT ITS NAME

peared than the 'coons, who had been lurking in the woods, dashed out and pulled in the lines. The men, who were almost drowned, managed to release themselves, the 'coons having chewed the lines up a bit.

"They got together right then and there and said, 'Boys, we will name this lake 'Coon lake, but in order to make the Iroquois remember it we use their word, which is Geauga.'"

WHY, IT'S NOT!

"Sir," said the old lady, "I think that is a terrible lie."

"Madam, if you doubt my word, step to the shore and I will show you the sunken boat from the fleet of 1812."

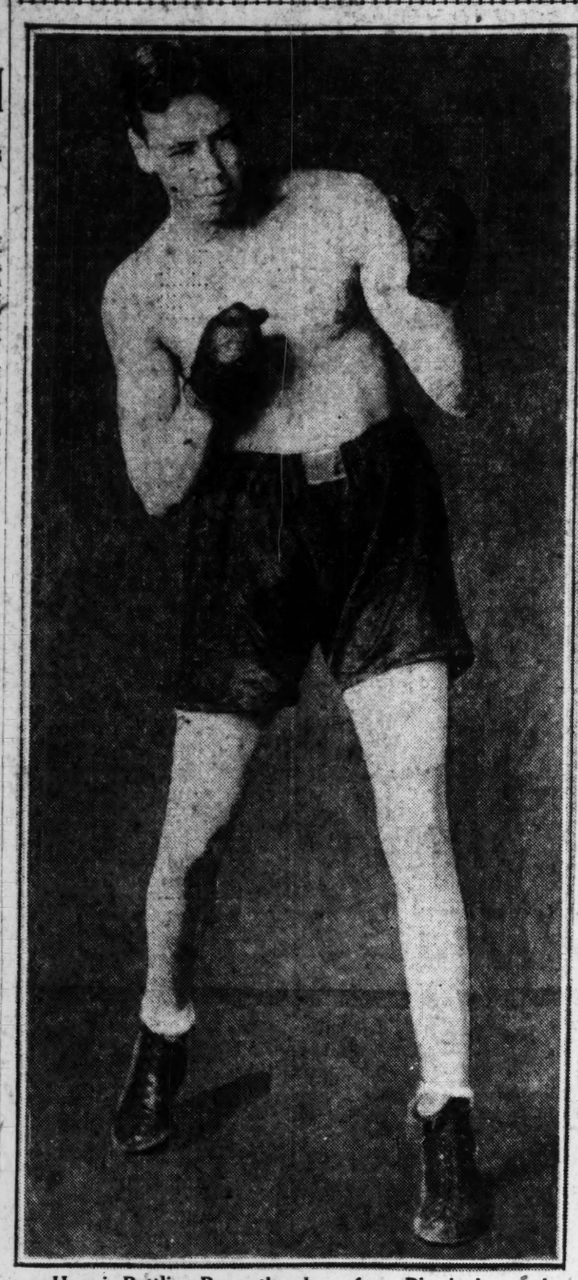

"It looks like an old fishing boat to me," said the old lady doubtfully.

"Madam," said Hughey Henry, "if you will pull those planks out of those eight feet of water I will show you the date carved on them."

"Idiot," said the old lady, and stalked off.

Anyhow, that's how the lake got it's name.

Faces Hard Test

Here is Battling Bozo, the clown from Birmingham, who meets Pete Latzo, one of the big-time boys, in the main event of a boxing card at the ball park Tuesday night. In this match Bozo faces one of the hardest tests of his career. Latzo also will have his hands full, as Bozo is fast making his way to the front in the fight game.

Dorwood Stables Get Sprinting Morstone

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—Benjamin Block's Morstone, the three-year-old colt that interested the turf world by the easy manner in which he won two sprint races prior to the Kentucky derby, has been sold to Victor Emanuel's Dorwood stable for a reported price of $30,000.

Herb Jolly Resigns From British Team

LONDON, June 6.—(AP)—Herbert Jolly, Fox Grove professional, withdrew from the British Ryder cup squad today because of the poor form he has shown recently. His resignation was accepted at a special meeting of the Professional Golf Association. Arthur Havers, former British open champion who played well in the open, won by Tommy Armour yesterday, will replace Jolly on the team.

Jolly's decision came immediately upon his return from Carnoustie. Jolly said he considered the winning of the Ryder cup by the British team should be placed above personal feeling.

"I would dearly love to make the trip to America," he said, "and it is still possible that I will—to play in the American open and the Canadian championships, but I am disappointed with my present form and feel that inclusion on the Ryder cup squad is not justified."

The team will sail for New York June 10, and is now composed of Charles and Ernest Whitcombe, Archie Comson, Sid Easterbrook, Arthur Havers, George Duncan, W. H. Davies, Bert Hodson, Abe Mitchell and Fred Robson.

Mokatam Winner Of Belmont Feature

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—The turf prides of the east and west went down to defeat today as Harry F. Sinclair's Mokatam, 6-to-1 third choice, won the forty-fifth running of the Suburban handicap at Belmont Park.

Only a head away, in second place, trailed James Butler's Questionnaire, the 3-to-5 favorite and generally rated as the eastern handicap titleholder. Far to the rear, in last place, followed the Audley Farm's Gallant Knight, western champion, which was practically left at the post. In between ran Ral Parr's Her Grace, in third place, and W. R. Coe's Polydorus in fourth.

In winning the classic mile-and-a-quarter journey and the $11,200 purse Mokatam reversed the easy victory registered over him by Questionnaire in the Metropolitan. Jockey "Slim" Robertson, up on Mokatam, rode a perfect race to defeat his stablemate rider, Sonny Workman, who had the mount on the favorite.

Babe, Triple Play No Help to Yanks

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—Babe Ruth's eleventh home run of the year and the second triple play of the major league season was not enough to win for the Yankees today, Cleveland taking the series opener, 7 to 5.

The Babe's homer came with the bases empty in the third inning. The triple play came in the ninth. Singles put Morgan and Vosmik on first and second. Kamm lined into Gehrig's hands and Lou stepped on first base to double Vosmik. He then threw to Lary at second and retired Morgan before he could get back to the bag, completing the triple play.

LEAVITT GIVEN ANOTHER CHANCE AT DAVISCOURT

Man Mountain To Meet Rough One at Spiller's June 15.

Those wrestling addicts who were so disappointed at Dick Daviscourt's failure to show up for his scheduled match with Stone Mountain Leavitt at the ball park Tuesday night that they raided the box office after the semi-windup and got their money back will have a chance to reinvest in the same proposition, but with better protection, Monday night, June 15, Promoter Weber announced Saturday.

The same pair, Daviscourt and Leavitt, have been matched in the main bout and, to insure the Californian's presence, Weber has taken the precaution to require and receive a certified check for $250 from the California veteran. In the event of his failure to show up and face the man-mountain, the money will be forfeited to the promoter, who will turn it over to some worthy charity. Money is not so plentiful these days that even such a well-do businessman as R. Daviscourt would run the risk of losing $250, to say nothing of the substantial sum he has been promised for the bout here.

MUST ARRIVE EARLY.

As a further protection to the fans, the commission and himself, Weber states that Dick has been notified that he must be in Atlanta on the day before the match and the Californian has agreed to do so. Inasmuch as no wrestling matches are held on Saturday or Sunday, there will be no difficulty about that.

After talking with Daviscourt in Knoxville Friday, Weber declares that he is thoroughly convinced that Dick's failure to appear here Tuesday was simply unavoidable in the circumstances. The big fellow expressed deep regret over the occurrence, and said—a statement in which Weber backs him up—that this was the first time in 15 years of wrestling that he had disappointed a crowd without being physically unable to perform and giving due notice to that effect.

Leavitt, of course, will be on hand right along. Even more than anybody else, the mountainous soldier was keenly aggrieved at his losing the main bout chance against a grappler of Daviscourt's caliber last week, and he is more determined than ever to make good before local fans with a smashing victory over the man who, he claims, ran out of the Tuesday match deliberately. If confidence means anything, and it usually does, Rough Richard will be in for a stormy evening when the two get together Monday.

LONDOS SOUGHT.

Every effort will be made to sign Jimmy Londos for an early appearance in Atlanta, it was further stated by Weber Saturday. The genial matchmaker plans to motor today to Memphis, where the champion is to show Monday night, and to confer with him and Ed Whit, his manager, with a view to securing their agreement to a match against a suitable opponent here within the next few weeks.

Charley Lehman, the Texan who has shown well here on several occasions, is being brought in for the one-hour semi-windup Monday, facing Tony Catalino, the Irascible Italian, who believes in giving the fans as good as they send in the booing line. In fact, he concentrated so intently on this nasal repartee two weeks ago that he allowed himself to be tossed by Louis LaChene. He is a tough customer, however, and will afford plenty of opposition for the popular cowboy.

Tickets will be placed on sale immediately at the Candler building soda fountain and the Piedmont Hatters, with ladies being admitted, as usual, to any seat at Spiller's on payment of $1.

Leaders Are Tied For Shoot Honors

L. H. Metcalf, tied by both R. W. McCulloch and T. M. Cassels with 49 out of 50 targets in the regular singles, won the shoot-off from his two rivals to win a handsome trophy and take one leg on the 1931 club championship trophy at the Capital Gun Club Saturday afternoon.

Charles W. Tway, shooting from the 21-yard line, broke 24x25 for honors in the handicap shoot.

Much interest is being manifest in the coming southern championship shoot, to be held on July 3 and 4. This shoot will attract many of Dixie's best.

A number of the local members plan to make the southern swing, including the Tennessee championships this week, the South Carolina championships next week and the Alabama championships the following week, returning here with many of their rivals from the other three state events before going to the Grand National at Vandalia, Ohio.

a championship in this event. He tied with Tommy Warne, of Northwestern, and Verne McDermont, of Illinois, in clearing the bar at 13 feet 10 5-16 inches, to eclipse Warne's old N. C. A. A. record of 13 feet 9 7-8 inches, hung up last year.

Individual honors were divided between Jack Keller, Ohio State's hurdler, and Bob Hall, Trojan weightman, each of whom won two championships. Keller won the 120-yard high hurdles in 14.6 seconds, and scored a lucky triumph in the 220-yard low hurdles when Ernie Payne, Trojan star, stumbled over the last barrier. Keller beat Bill Carls, another Trojan, in 23.8 seconds.

Hall captured two titles for Southern California with victories in the shot-put and discus throw. He tossed the shot 49 feet 9 inches. In the discus he won with a heave of 152 feet 7 1-2 inches.

Dale Letts, University of Chicago Big Ten half-mile champion, smashed the N. C. A. A. record for the event. His time, 1:33.5, clipped six-tenths of a second off the record set by Orval Martin, of Purdue, a year ago. Letts ran his first quarter in 54 seconds.

'Pa' To Be Here For Go Tuesday

STRIBLING'S TRAINING CAMP, GEAUGA LAKE, Ohio, June 6.—Pa Stribling is getting ready to leave camp here for Atlanta to aid Max Abelson in putting on the Bozo-Latzo show Tuesday night at the Atlanta auditorium.

Pa will leave here Monday night and arrive at Cincinnati Tuesday morning. He will take a plane from there and arrive at Atlanta 11:30 Tuesday morning.

Pa will have Bozo at the camp here about June 12. He will appear on the supporting card July 3.

and will kick off the ball to start the soccer game in the afternoon.

And then Pa and W. L. will ride back to camp at Geauga in one of the baby blimps, with W. L. himself at the controls. The contract bars airplanes, but forgets blimps. They can't keep these Striblings out of the air.

Friday, at Toledo, W. L. was given a few things like the keys to the city. The Inverness Club, where W. L. shot a 49-50, gave him a traveling bag, a wristwatch and a new club for getting out of traps. And the hotel moved in the famous Dempsey bed for W. L. to sleep in.

Sound movies busied the Striblings today after the workout, and W. L. was entertained tonight by the Rainbow division of Ohio at a banquet uptown. He made a radio talk as part of the program.

"I guess all this entertainment is about over," said Pa. "Next week we will get down to training. We may go out a little; W. L. enjoys it, and it keeps him from getting stale."

CRACKERS VICTORS IN TWO GAMES

of the batting order snapped into form again.

COUNTRY STARTS.

Wilbur (Country) Davis started the night's scoring with a mighty home run over the green fence in right center. It was a 375-foot blow. The Crackers came back in their half and turned two doubles and two Vol errors into three runs. The Vols batted one man around in their sixth and the Crackers showed another one across in their half.

Then in the seventh and eighth the home nine dumped a barrage of hits into the night air and sent four more over the dish.

The feature play of the game was contributed by Jack Sheehan in the second. He trapped Autry's peg to second in the dirt with his gloved hand and tagged Wilbur Davis out as he slid into the bag. It was a play in a million.

In winning that ball game Dixie Davis fanned eight and walked five. His curve ball was doing acrobatic tricks. If the old boy can keep hold of it he will help the Crackers plenty more.

Crackers Defeat Vols, 7-2, in Afternoon.

BY WALTER WILKES.

Zum-Zum Zumbro, the old bass viol himself, was badly out of tune Saturday afternoon, and Cracker bats drummed the old horsehide sonata before some 2,000 of the faithful at Spiller field, downing the Vols in the second of their three-game series, 7 to 2.

Climax Blethen, taking his first grip upon the slab in some time following a recent illness, pitched a very creditable ball game, working easily and coolly at all times after a shaky start in the first inning and letting down a bit only after the game was safely in the "W" column. He lacked a little of his usual speed, but had his curve breaking nicely and interpolated a slow ball that had the visitors guessing, all except Pitcher Droll, who parked one over the right field fence in the eighth.

Autry and Taitt proved the big guns in the Cracker offensive of the afternoon which, after sporadic shelling in the third and fifth frames, finally drove Zumbro to the shower with a three-run barrage in the eighth. Autry drove in three runs and Taitt two, the former with two doubles and a single, the latter with a triple and single. Bennett, with three clean safeties, led the Vols on such feeble attack as they were able to muster.

Some shifty fielding, principally contributed by the visitors, served to enliven the proceedings. Bennett made a beautiful running catch of Blethen's drive to deep left center in the sixth, and Rodda a one-handed stop of Barnes' seemingly certain safety in the same inning. "Country" Davis was so amazed at the latter play that he muffed Rodda's toss to first, giving the fleet-footed Barnes a life, but nothing came of it.

Five fast double plays marked the Cracker defense, while Sheehan and Carlyle turned in the neatest individual plays, Jack coming in fast to retire Bennett and, incidentally, the side, on a slow roller in the fifth and Roy taking Clabaugh's vicious smash against the right field fence in the third. Sheehan's contribution was especially timely, suppressing a budding rally by the Vols who were trailing by only one run at the time and had two men in scoring position.

Singles by Bennett and Clabaugh brought the denizens of the Dell a run in the first inning, their only counter of the afternoon except for Droll's clout, but the Crackers more than evened matters when Ryan's single and Taitt's triple, interspersed with a base on balls and a sacrifice, resulted in two tallies. Autry's double in the fifth brought across Taitt and Carlyle, who had singled, and gave Blethen a real working edge.

The eighth inning assault, in which singles by Carlyle and Shirley, a double by Autry and an erstwhile sacrifice fly from Ryan's bat, rolled up three runs more, was interesting but superfluous.

Jonesboro Defeats Union City Nine, 8-1

JONESBORO, Ga., June 6.—Behind the steady pitching of Waldrop, the Jonesboro baseball team won from Union City here today, 8 to 1.

Waldrop held the visitors to only six scattered hits, and struck out 17 batters. Union City's lone tally came as a result of a Jonesboro error.

CADET ELEVEN TO PLAY FOUR NIGHT GAMES

G. M. A. Announces 8-Game Football Schedule for 1931 Season.

Georgia Military Academy will play four night games on its 1931 football card, it was announced Saturday, following the close of the 1930-31 school term. The eight-game card introduces three teams new to the Cadet schedule.

Three of the night games will be played at Spiller field, and a fourth will be played at Chattanooga, Tenn., against the McCallie eleven.

Griffin High will open the schedule Friday night, September 25. Columbus Industrial High will follow in another night affair October 2, and Boys' High will close the night program for the Cadets, October 16. The McCallie game will be played October 10.

Griffin, Columbus and Lanier High, of Macon, are the new teams for G. M. A., while McCallie, Boys' High, the Navy Plebes, Spartanburg, and Tech High are the old teams.

G. M. A. will make its second trip to Annapolis, Md., to play the Navy Plebes, Friday afternoon, October 30. The Cadets lost a 6-to-0 game last year to the Plebes on a muddy field against a heavier team.

Lanier will be played in Macon, Wednesday afternoon, November 11, in an Armistice Day celebration for the Central City.

Tech High, an old enemy which the Cadets fought to a scoreless tie in the opening game of the 1930 card, will close the season at Spiller field, Wednesday afternoon, November 24.

M. C. Paget has again been retained as head football coach at G. M. A. It will mark his third year in Atlanta's prep athletic circles. Others on the Cadet coaching staff include Sam Burbage, C. M. McQuarrie, Hudson and Bishop. D. C. Woodward is chairman of the athletic committee.

It will be the first time in the history of athletics at G. M. A. that a night football game has been scheduled. The games will be played early in the season, to avoid the extremely cold weather.

The schedule follows.

September 25—Griffin at Spiller's (night).
October 2—Columbus Industrial at Spiller's (night).
October 10—McCallie at Chattanooga (night).
October 16—Boys' High at Spiller's (night).
October 30—Navy Plebes at Annapolis.
November 6—Spartanburg at Spartanburg, S. C.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, June 6.—(UP)—Tommy Armour, of Detroit, winner of the British open golf championship, sailed for New York aboard the Aquitania at noon today.

He was accompanied by Johnny Farrell, Joe Turnesa, Tony Manero, Gene Sarazen and Joe Kirkwood, all of whom participated in the tournament at Carnoustie.

GEORGIA ENTERS 11 IN PREP MEET

State Trackmen Will Leave Tuesday for National Track Tourney.

Georgia will send 11 high school track stars to the national interscholastic track and field meet to be held at Chicago, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

G. M. A. will head the list with five entries; Tech High is second with four. Other institutions to be represented include Monroe High, and Madison Aggies.

M. C. Paget, coach of G. M. A., left the city Saturday night and will meet the Atlanta delegation in Chicago Wednesday night.

Frank Kopf, coach of the Tech High track team, will accompany the Georgia entries Tuesday night to Chicago and together with Paget will have charge of the Georgia entries during the events.

Those who will make the trip are: Pinky Moore, dashes; Toby Elatau, relays; Walter Oakes, relays, and Winfield Morrison, relays, all from Tech High; Burch Wilcox, broad jump, Monroe; Luther Williams, shot put; Madison Aggies, and Bill Proctor, 440 and 880 dashes; Perrin Walker, jumps; Ed Hornsby, 880 and mile; Sam Williams, relays, and Joe Pendleton, relays, all from G. M. A.

450 Stars Enter Prep Track Meet.

CHICAGO, June 6.—(UP)—The 27th annual National Interscholastic Track and Field meet will be held at Stagg field next Friday and Saturday, with more than 450 athletes from 120 high schools in 21 states competing.

EMORY NAMES SPORTS HEADS FOR NEXT YEAR

McCord To Direct Intra-Mural Program; Stovall Will Assist.

Jeff McCord, of Atlanta, has been selected as director of athletics at Emory University and will take up his duties September 1, it was announced Saturday afternoon. An assistant to McCord has not been named but negotiations are under way and announcement will be made within a few days.

McCord, who graduated from Emory in 1916, was a letter man in football, baseball and track. He will study this summer at the University of Michigan under Fielding Yost, who is recognized as the most competent intramural athletic director in the country, in preparation for his position at Emory.

With the election of the director and the pushing of the building program, Emory will have the most complete intramural athletic system in the south. At present Emory is one of the three higher institutions in the country that does not have intercollegiate athletics.

The athletic staff at Emory next year will also include six coaching fellows and seven student assistants from the junior and senior classes, as well as 12 or more members of the university faculty who also coach teams. Four of the graduate coaches and six of the student assistants have already been announced. The others are:

J. M. Graybeal, of Emory and Henry College, graduate coach in tennis.

Hoyt M. Dobbs, of Birmingham-Southern College, graduate coach in swimming.

Russell Rogers, of Moultrie, Ga., a junior in College of Liberal Arts at Emory, student assistant in fencing.

The Emory athletic program was given added emphasis Friday when the board of trustees, at its annual meeting, approved tentative plans for a $200,000 athletic building, the first unit of a $1,000,000 building program, and instructed the executive committee to proceed with construction just as soon as financial conditions permit.

The new building will contain a swimming pool, basketball courts and room for all indoor sports, as well as lockers and showers. Plans are being made to construct rooms for alumni and friends of the school.

Carlyle, Taitt Slump; Ward Takes Southern League Batting Crown

PEL ACE LEADS CLUB TO RETAIN TEAM LAURELS

Connatser Second, 'Poco' Third, Roy Fourth in Shakeup.

The hitting show—team and individual—has shifted to New Orleans. The Pelicans have been leading team batting all along, but now they furnish not only the leading hitter, but the second best as well.

J. Ward, a strong contender for the batting lead for two weeks or more, finally took over the Southern lead with an average of .390, including games of Thursday. Connatser, New Orleans first sacker, is second in the race with a mark of .385.

The team of Roy Carlyle and Poco Taitt, of Atlanta, holders of the batting honors up until last week, slipped down, Taitt swinging on to third place, .381, while Carlyle dropped to fourth, .380.

Carlyle and Taitt are tied for the most hits, 77 each. Carlyle leads in home runs, 11, and runs-batted-in, 53. French, of Little Rock, is the base-stealing champ, 15. Weis, of Birmingham, has scored the most runs, 51. Bigelow, of Chattanooga, has hit the most doubles, 16. Abernathy, of Birmingham, has hit the most triples, seven.

New Orleans is setting the batting pace with the fine mark of .322 Birmingham replaced Atlanta in second place with a .297, the Crackers dropping to third place, .293, one point above the climbing Lookouts.

The Barons have collected the most hits, 569, and have the most total bases, 757.

Granger, Memphis' rookie pitching star, has won 3 games and lost 0. Four Birmingham pitchers are ranked near the top. Edwards' record is 5 won and 1 lost. Walkup and Caldwell have won 7 and lost 2 each. Hasty has won 8 and lost 3.

TRAVELERS 9; PELS 8.

NEW ORLEANS, June 6.—Little Rock took the opening game of the series from the New Orleans Pelicans this afternoon, 9 to 8. After Nugent held the local team to two hits and without a score for six innings, the Pels started a rally in the seventh, pounding both Nugent and Ward from the mound, scoring 4 runs. They stayed a rally at Moon's expense in the ninth, scoring three runs, falling shy of a run of tying the count. Whitney starred at bat for Little Rock, getting three hits and driving in four runs.

City of EAST POINT

Mecca of Progress and Prosperity Formally Opens

NEW CITY HALL AND CITY AUDITORIUM

Wm. J. J. Chase, Architect

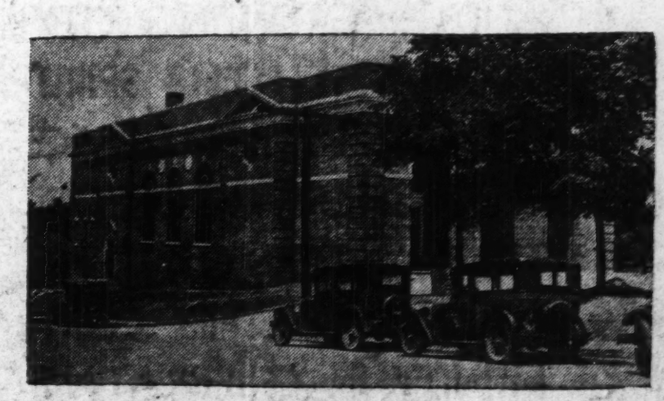

J. A. RAGSDALE,
Mayor, East Point,
Ga.

IN ONE of the most prosperous and fertile sections of Georgia, East Point, by its far-sighted, enthusiastic spirit of development has marked steady progress and afforded magnetic appeal to more and more people each year who have sought the environment of its delightful surroundings.

East Point, aside from being a wonderful city of homes, is an outstanding industrial center in the south. Its plants employ many, and their products are known far and wide.

From the standpoint of city government, East Point is operated as an advancing metropolis of many times its size, with facilities, services and municipal advantages on every hand. More powerful, more progressive, and more financially sound than most of the great metropolitan cities, East Point is again evidencing its importance by the formal opening of two beautiful new civic buildings—THE CITY HALL and CITY AUDITORIUM.

These modern, up-to-date buildings, which include offices for the city executives, space for the conduct of all city affairs and a gathering place for its public, will be thrown open for inspection tomorrow. His honor "The Mayor," the City Clerk, the Aldermen and the entire staff of city officials extend a hearty welcome to each and every citizen of East Point and an especial invitation to all out-of-town visitors.

EAST POINT'S NEW CITY HALL MARKS ADVANCE OF COMMUNITY

Municipal Building Project Completed at Cost of $75,000

Chamber of Commerce and Woman's Club Play Important Part in Borough's Activities.

Dedication of the new city hall and memorial auditorium at East Point Thursday night marked another step in the progress of one of the thriving boroughs of Greater Atlanta.

The new buildings are a distinct improvement to the town. Erected at a cost of approximately $75,000, the city hall is of Georgian architecture and presents a handsome and impressive appearance.

Designed by William J. J. Chase, the building includes the general municipal offices, police department, council chamber and community room. The memorial auditorium, which is a separate building, has a seating capacity of 1,300 and is of fireproof construction. It is heated and ventilated by a dual fan system and is possessed with unusual acoustical qualities.

As the eastern terminus of the Atlanta and West Point railroad, from which the town got its name, East Point's growth has been closely allied with the progress of the railroads and now two trunk lines come withia its borders.

Located one-fourth of a mile south of the city limits of Atlanta, East Point covers an area of 16 square miles. It has a population of 2,500, three traffic boulevards, 40 miles of paved streets, sewerage, gas, excellent police and fire departments equipped with motor trucks.

East Point is one of the thriving industrial centers of the state. It affords many ideal locations for industries, which can be reached easily by sidings. The industrial pay roll of the city is said to exceed $160,000 weekly.

The chamber of commerce is one of the livest organizations of its kind in the country. It has been responsible for bringing many new industries to the city and was largely instrumental in the erection of the city hall and memorial auditorium. The organization retains a paid secretary and its membership represents some of the largest firms in the south.

One of the finest points in the community's favor is its water supply. It is served by nine artesian wells, which were drilled through several hundred feet of granite, and the water is said to be chemically pure.

The city is governed by a mayor and council. The municipality is divided into wards and has a tax rate of 95 cents on the $100. There are many parks, tennis courts, baseball grounds and swimming pools. Other amusements include a moving picture theater, which has recently been equipped with sound apparatus.

East Point has 12 churches, several built of brick and granite. It has three grammar schools and one high school. The high school is on the southern accredited list, which allows the pupils from this school to enter preparatory schools and colleges without an examination. All of the schools are located on paved streets and sidewalks.

Located in the city is a new $50,000 dial exchange of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, serving the Calhoun subscribers. The exchange is directly connected with the Atlanta system.

East Point's fraternal organizations comprise an important factor in the life of the city. Both the Masonic order and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows have temples that are a credit to the city.

The general appearance of the residential district is most attractive and the city possesses many fine homes, the residential section being protected by a zoning law.

One of the most active organizations in the city is the Woman's Club. Its membership is composed of progressive women who are constantly striving for the betterment of the city along all lines. Plans are now under way to erect a new clubhouse on a lot the organization owns in the heart of the residential district.

Another building project that is expected to be started soon is the new postoffice, for which congress appropriated $60,000 recently.

New City Hall Dedicated at East Point

Handsome new city hall at East Point, which was dedicated at ceremonies held in the building Thursday night. The building houses the general municipal offices, police department and council chamber. It was erected at a cost of $75,000, and was designed by William J. J. Chase, being Georgian in type. A master clock operates a system of secondary clocks in the tower, various offices and the auditorium.

Chamber of Commerce Officials

Julian Furstenburg (left) and W. P. Middlebrooks, president and secretary, respectively, of the East Point Chamber of Commerce. The organization was instrumental in promoting the erection of the new city hall at East Point, and these two officers gave a great deal of their time and efforts to put over the project.

POLICE STILL SEEKING CASSADY DEATH GUN

Police still are seeking the weapon with which J. E. Cassady, 48, of 231 Madison avenue, who was found shot to death in Piedmont park Thursday morning with two notes indicating a suicide, was killed. Although the police are inclined toward the theory that the death was a suicide, they are puzzled over the fact that the .32 pistol that was used could not be found, believing it possible that someone stole it after the fatal shooting. If that is the case, however, it would seem that some person discovered the body and failed to report it to police. Funeral service: were conducted Saturday morning at the chapel of Harry G. Poole. Interment was in East View.

Scientists Say New Glass Rod May Save Industry Millions

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE.
Associated Press Science Editor.

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—Two Rockefeller Institute scientists tonight made public developments of a peculiar new glass rod expected to save industry millions of dollars, and of growing living cells artificially.

The rod is a "PH" thermometer, about the size of a pencil. The cells are both cancer and normal.

Both men talked to a meeting of the New York section of the American Chemical Society at the Museums of the Peaceful Arts. The thermometer was described by Dr. Duncan A. Macinness, in charge of research in physical chemistry at the institute.

When placed in a liquid this instrument reads the balance between acidity and alkalinity. The scientific term for this balance is "PH" and it is one of the most important single aspects of life. When the "PH" balance in man gets a fraction of a per cent out of line, he is soon either ill or dead. It is a narrow, critical zone where much of life exists.

In many of the great chemical products of industry, "PH" is equally important. For 20 years scientific research laboratories have had instruments for reading "PH," but they have not been suitable for industry.

Adaption of Old Instrument.

The new thermometer is simply an adaption of the old scientific instrument. It works on the principle of an electrode and was made suitable for industrial use by employing glass of comparatively low resistance. It reacts only to hydrogen in activity; that is, to the number of atoms of hydrogen which lose electrons and so develop electrical charges.

"In its new form," said Dr. Macinness, "it should prove of great and increasing value to the many industries where the accurate control of acid and alkali content affects the very life of the product.

"The paper industry has begun to realize the importance of this laboratory invention. Some companies are using it to determine the correct sizing of paper. It is invaluable to the soap industry because it makes possible the avoidance of free alkali. Another highly important industry which it can serve is cleaning and dyeing. The fluids used must have the proper ratio of alkali so that the materials to be cleaned or dyed will not be destroyed or the color spotted."

ALLIED ENGINEERS FIGHTS LICENSE LAW

Enforcement of the city license ordinance against Allied Engineers, Inc., Saturday was enjoined by Judge John D. Humphries, of Fulton superior court, pending a hearing next Saturday on a petition of the Georgia Power Company seeking to prevent the city from interferring with work of Allied Engineers for the plaintiff.

This was the power company's second court suit filed within two days against the city, the company having filed on Friday in federal court a petition seeking to restrain enforcement of a one-man car ban.

The petition filed Saturday seeks to show that Allied Engineers, Inc., and the power company are both owned and controlled by a common parent or holding company, Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, and that the engineering firm does not do a general contract business but works solely for the power company. The plaintiff contends that the engineering company does not have to obtain a city license.

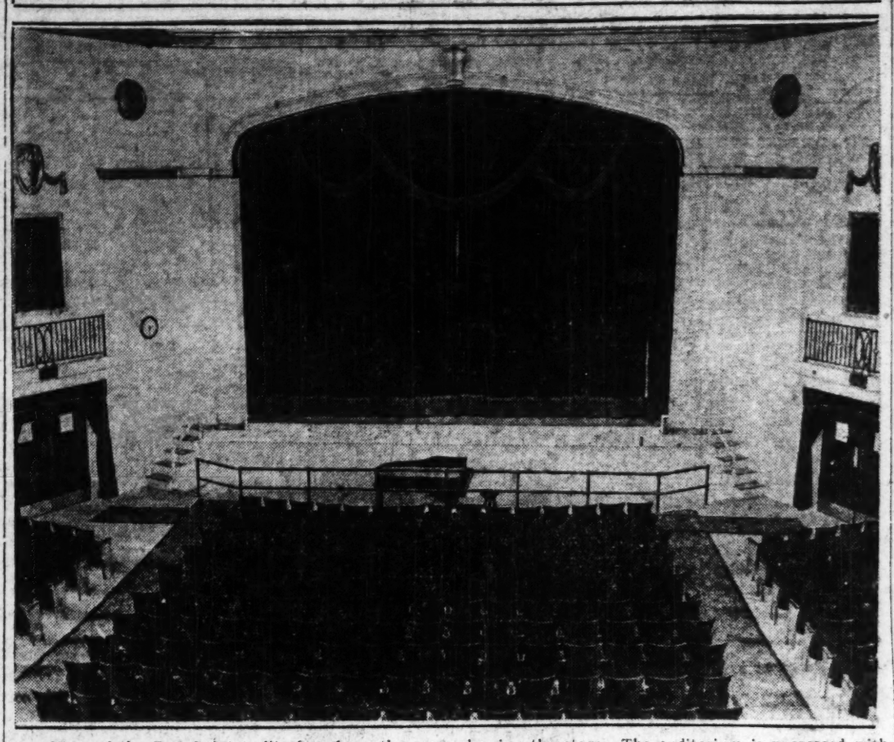

ATLANTA ABANDONS FIGHT ON CENSUS

Atlanta's fight to have the census bureau carry the population of the metropolitan district, instead of dividing the total by boroughs, has been dropped and no further effort will be made to force the issue under present plans, City Attorney James L. Mayson announced Saturday.

The borough carried the battle to Washington and lost two decisions in the courts there in an effort to force Dr. William Steuart, director of the census, to publish the total figures of the whole area included in the new Atlanta in the 1930 enumerations.

History Exhibit Holds Open House Today for Last Time Until Fall

For the last time this summer, the state department of archives and history will keep open house today from 3 to 5 o'clock at the Rhodes Memorial home, at which time officers of the Daughters of 1812 will receive with the state historian and display records and relics relating to that period.

Among recent gifts to the department, to be on exhibit today, are:

An Indian idol presented by Tom Roberts, of Lithia Springs.

Manuscript collection including 14 volumes of the diary of the late James E. Steele, of Cherokee county, a connection of the Joseph E. Brown family.

An old-fashioned skillet which Alexander Stephens gave to Captain Evan P. Howell, symbol of the famous slogan:

"I am toting my own skillet."

Lost Girls Found.

COUSHATTA, La., June 6.—(AP)—The mysterious disappearance of Miss Exie Elliott, 19, and Miss Cleo Brown, 15, from their home in Salt Springs community, near here, Thursday was solved today when the girls were found alive and well at the home of Miss Brown's sister, Mrs. Lee Marler, in Ringgold, not far away.

CARMICHAEL OBSERVES BUSINESS ANNIVERSARY

Howard L. Carmichael, one of the civic and business leaders of East Point, recently observed the third anniversary of the establishment of his funeral home at 500 East Point avenue.

Mr. Carmichael has resided in East Point for the past eight years, removing there from McDonough where he had been in the undertaking business with his father for a number of years.

The new home, erected a little more than three years ago, was designed to meet the most exacting requirements of the business, and improvements have been added from time to time since its opening.

Recently the entire building has been refinished and redecorated, and new draperies added, making it more attractive and pleasing than ever. Services of the establishment are in demand in a number of towns surrounding East Point.

Mr. Carmichael, since removing to East Point, has taken an active part in the business and civic life of the city. He is a member of the city council and was one of the leaders in sponsoring the new city hall project.

WORKERS FOR BLIND TO GATHER MONDAY

"Atlanta's educational week for the blind proved of educational value to the sighted because it brought to the attention of the public the fact that the blind can be self-supporting," J. A. McCrary, chairman of the fifth district chapter of the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind, said Saturday.

Mr. McCrary simultaneously announced that the 1931 convention of the association will be held at the Henry Grady hotel here Monday and that the organization was seeking additional members to provide funds to help the blind realize their desire to earn their own living.

"We have only a small membership fee in the organization," Mr. McCrary said. "The money realized all goes to help the blind help themselves. We hope that anyone desiring to join our organization will let it be known by calling or writing to our offices in the Palmer building."

Coroner Paul Donehoo will preside over the convention of the association here Monday.

Brothers Reunited.

Through a newspaper story, two brothers have located each other after being separated for 40 years. They are Robert A. Eolin, Tiverton, (R. I.) blacksmith, and William A. Haley, of East Barrington, N. H. Their family name was Haberkorn but both had changed their names.

HEMPERLEY & SONS QUARTERS ENLARGED

A. C. Hemperley & Sons, funeral directors in East Point, have recently enlarged the chapel of the establishment, added a pipe organ, and increased the size of the display rooms, materially improving the place.

Organized in 1904 by A. C. Hemperley, the business has expanded from year to year. It was first located at the corner of Whiteway and Main streets, having removed to the residential funeral home now occupied at 223 South Main street in 1911.

The business has utilized automobile equipment since 1914. In 1923 the concern was incorporated, with A. C. Hemperley, president; Carlos M. Hemperley as vice president, and Ernest R. Hemperley as secretary.

In 1923, operators of the business found it necessary to increase the capacity of the building, at which time it was completely renovated, entailing considerable expense. The establishment exerts every effort to render the best service.

TENTS AND AWNINGS MADE IN EAST POINT

The Atlanta Tent & Awning Company, one of the largest enterprises of its kind in the entire south, is located in East Point.

This firm has been making canvas goods here for more than 40 years, and their trade brands, Lankford horse collars and backbands, and Style-Built tents and awnings, are familiar trade names throughout this section.

This firm is considered a leader in bringing out new styles and designs in awnings. Many of the beautiful and attractive awnings they make for Florida and south Georgia homes in the winter are popular in the north and west during the summer.

The Atlanta Tent & Awning Company has always been an important factor in the industrial and commercial life of East Point and vicinity, as their large, steady pay roll, year after year, has been a big factor in the growth and progress of East Point.

The company is equipped with high-powered machines in all departments. The majority of the employes have been with them many years, and take great pride in the reputation and growth their manufacturing plant has attained.

Best Buys in High-Class Used Cars

1930 Model FRANKLIN 5-pass. DeLuxe Sedan, which includes six wire wheels and trunk rack equipment, that has only been driven 8,600 miles. You can't tell this car from a new one $1,800

1930 Model FRANKLIN Sport Sedan equipped with six wire wheels and trunk rack, painted a beautiful shade of gray with light green wire wheels. This car was sold new last November and is as good as ever in both appearance and mechanical condition.. $1,850

1929 FRANKLIN Convertible Sport Coupe. This car was bought new late last fall by an official of the Franklin Company and has only been driven 3,500 miles. It has about $150 of extra equipment and is one of the smartest looking cars in town. A bargain for some one at $1,500

1928 FRANKLIN 7-Pass. Sedan. This car has been completely rebuilt and re-upholstered in Du-Pont's leatherette. We do not believe the value offered in this car can be equalled $900

1931 STUDEBAKER Commander Coupe, free wheeling. This car was bought new February 4 and is now like new in every respect. The original cost, $1,824; our price $1,350

1930 FORD 4-Door Sedan. This car has only been driven 10,000 miles and is in exceptionally good condition both in appearance and mechanically $425

1927 BUICK Sedan that has recently been rebuilt completely and is equipped with new heavy duty Silvertown Cord Tires. The cost of rebuilding and tires is equal to the price we ask $350

1927 DODGE Sedan in A-1 condition throughout and equipped with practically new tires. Price..... $175

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—Stocks went back to the firing line today for a test against selling. Profit-taking and offerings by sceptical shorts chipped away at the list during the two hours of quiet trading, leaving final prices 1 to 3 points under the Friday close. The turnover was 300,000 shares, well below the recent rate of activity.

Doubtless the pessimistic statements from abroad on the turn in Germany's affairs caused some apprehension in speculative circles, and developments over the week-end, notably at the Chequeres meeting, will be followed with intense interest. The mark was off to a new low for the year, not far above the theoretical gold point, but German government bonds were firm.

United States Steel encountered considerable pressure following an estimate that next Wednesday's unfilled tonnage statement, showing the backlog as of May 31, would report the large decline of 250,000 to 300,000 tons. A loss is usually suffered in May, which is a month of seasonal slackening.

Operations this year fell off steadily and so did the placement of orders, reflecting in part the slide of prices. Steel common dropped 3 points.

In American Can, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, General Electric, General Motors, American Telephone, North American, Consolidated Gas, Westinghouse, National Biscuit, Loew's and Bethlehem Steel the loss ran from 1 to 2. Rails were reactionary, but in some cases the market was thin.

One of the encouraging developments as the markets closed for the week was news that steel operations in the Youngstown area would be up 1 point to 42 per cent. It was the first increase in about three months.

Commodities eased. Wheat lost from a fraction to about a cent under realizing. Corn was off nominally on heavy rains in Kansas and a better cash demand, cotton followed stocks, yielding $1.20 to $1.30 a bale.

Except for sterling and the mark, foreign exchanges were firm. The peseta and the Brazilian milreis were up.

TRADE TRENDS
BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Hides—Deliveries of sole leather by tanners for the first four months this year were slightly above those for the same period last year, amounting to the equivalent of 2,349,000 hides, compared with 2,334,000 last year, the New York Hide Exchange reports. Tanners' finished stocks of cut and uncut sole leather continued to decline and at the end of April were 5.9 per cent lower than December 31, when they were at the highest point in recent years.

Petroleum—The average price for crude petroleum in 10 representative producing fields was lower last week at 72.2 cents a barrel, compared with 83.9 cents the preceding week and an average of $1.46 1-2 a barrel for the corresponding period last year, according to Oil, Paint & Drug Reporter. Gasoline at the refineries was also lower last week at 3.937 cents a gallon in tank cars at four principal refining centers, compared with 4.125 cents a week ago, and 7.45 cents last year.

Silk—Twenty-two ships with cargoes of raw silk will dock at west coast ports during July, the traffic bureau of the Silk Association of America reports. Eight of the ships are scheduled to arrive at San Francisco, seven at Seattle, three at Los Angeles and three at Vancouver.

Silver—Bar silver improved at the close of the week, advancing an eighth of a cent in New York to 26 1-2 cents an ounce, and a sixteenth of a penny in London to 12 5-16 pence.

Steel—Operations of steel plants in the Youngstown district next week will be at 42 per cent of fated capacity, an increase of 1 per cent over the current week and the first increase in 13 weeks, Dow, Jones & Co., reports. The increase in operations is due to a moderate improvement in the market for pipe.

Zinc—Stocks of zinc at the end of May totaled 143,049 short tons, compared with 143,212 tons at the end of April and 106,080 at the end of May last year, the American Zinc Institute reports. Production in May showed a decline to 25,688 tons, compared with 29,137 tons in April and 44,556 tons in May, 1930. May shipments amounted to 25,851 tons, against 27,418 tons for April and 38,681 for May last year. Unfilled orders at the end of May were 31,146 tons, compared with 36,150 at the end of April, and 30,515 at the end of May last year.

BY ALEXANDER HENDERSON.

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—Quiet trading and irregular price changes marked the bond market today.

Net changes among foreign obligations were divided about evenly between gains and declines. Notwithstanding the limited activity a number of foreign issues made wide changes. Argentine, Cuban and Colombian obligations advanced from 1 to 7 points. Chinese Hukuang Railway 5s jumped 9 1-4 points following the news that certain interest coupons would be paid. German issues reported that the government had issued a proclamation announcing that the German nation had reached its limit of privation and that new taxes would be imposed.

Liberty and treasury loans were irregularly higher, but with the exception of the Liberty Fourth 4 1-4s and the treasury 4s the trading in them was limited.

Domestic corporate bonds made mixed changes but the averages indicated that the movement was narrowly, if irregularly, lower.

The public utilities average alone showed a slight gain. The most indicative fact about the market was the limited turnover in most corporate issues. No transactions of any sort occurred in a large number of them and the total turnover of many of them were limited to a few small, or even single, sales.

Public interest in the bond market as a whole continued to be very moderate. Sales aggregated $4,986,000, which was a small total even for a short session. High-grade bonds appeared at times not to be so popular as recently. American Telephone debenture 5s, Cleveland Union Terminal 4 1-2s and 5s, Consolidated Gas of New York 4 1-2s, Illinois Bell Telephone 5s and Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania series C 5s reached lower levels.

SHOOTING AT WOMAN LAID TO M. R. SUTTON

M. R. Sutton, 37, of 500 Hill street, S. E., was held by police Saturday on charges of shooting at another. Bond was fixed at $1,000.

According to detectives, Sutton fired several shots when Mrs. Frances Huey, 30, of 1364 Iverson street, Inman Park, alighted from a taxicab late Friday night. Officers said Sutton admitted the shooting, but contended he had fired only to "scare" Mrs. Huey.

Sutton's story to the police was that he had lain in ambush as the taxicab bearing Mrs. Huey drove up. He said he had known Mrs. Huey only a short time and that she had told him she was separated from her husband. He ran from the scene of the shooting to the home of his brother-in-law, 575 East avenue, where he was arrested.

FIDELITY OFFICIAL HERE FOR VISIT

Ernest Feinhals, superintendent of the engineering and inspection department, Fidelity & Casualty Company, of New York, is in Atlanta on a tour of the south for engineering facilities inspection, it was announced Saturday by Bowlin Duncan, for 28 years an employe of The Atlanta Constitution.

Mr. Duncan, who, in 1906, went to work for the Fidelity & Casualty Company, says that Mr. Feinhals is encouraged with the business outlook and predicts renewed confidence in the general economic situation in this section of the country.

PANTHERSVILLE BOY, KNIFED, SUCCUMBS

Stabbed Saturday a week ago, in a fight with three negroes, A. J. Rogers Jr., an 18-year-old Panthersville boy, died early Saturday morning as the result of a steel knife blade imbedded in his brain, Grady hospital doctors reported.

DeKalb officers were holding a negro named George Thompson, charged with murder in connection with the Rogers boy's death. According to Sheriff Jake Hall, of Decatur, the Rogers youth, with two other young men, met the negroes on May 23 and engaged in a fight. Rogers was wounded and went to Grady hospital three days later, telling doctors he suffered with a terrific headache. Examination revealed a knife blade was buried in his skull, penetrating the brain. It was removed, but meningitis developed and the youth died early Saturday morning.

Sheriff Hall said his officers Saturday night were searching for two other negroes reported to have been engaged in the fight.

DOAK TO ADDRESS TENNESSEE CLASS

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—Secretary Doak was en route today to Cumberland Gap, Tenn., where he will deliver a commencement address at Lincoln Memorial University.

The university will confer on the secretary the degree of doctor of humanities, in recognition of "his preeminence in the humanities as expressed in his industrial leadership, his devotion to social welfare, his patriotic citizenship, his patronage of liberal education and his devotion to the ideals of Abraham Lincoln."

Pinchot Holding Interest Of Republican Leaders

Pennsylvanian's Decision on Reapportionment Bill May Settle Question of His Candidacy.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Whether Governor Gifford Pinchot will or will not contest against President Hoover for the republican presidential nomination constitutes all there is of republican prenomination politics. The facts about Governor Pinchot's running are wholly inside his own mind. He has not stated to any person that he will run. This by no means indicates that he will not run. It is evident the governor is deliberately refraining from committing himself.

The belief that he will run is very general in circles close to the governor and to Pennsylvania politics. The conviction is shared at once by many of Pinchot's friends and by nearly all his political enemies. Both groups agree in giving a program of expected steps by him.

The program begins with his coming action on a reapportionment of congressional districts just enacted by the recently adjourned Pennsylvania legislature. Governor Pinchot has roughly 30 days to sign the bill or let it die. If he signs the reapportionment, the Pennsylvania delegates to the next republican national convention will be elected separately by districts. If Pinchot does not sign, the delegates will be elected, subject to some qualification, as a group on a statewide basis. Pinchot's opponents assert that he will take whichever action facilitates his getting the largest number of Pennsylvania's delegates for himself as a candidate for the presidential nomination. Pinchot's friends vary this by saying he will take whichever step facilitates his getting control of the state merely for the purpose of furthering his fight within the state against the public utilities.

Next Steps.

The next step in the program outlined by both friends and opponents of Pinchot is that he will, during the fall, make a tour of the western states. The purpose or effect of such a tour would be partly to sound and partly to build up western progressive republican sentiment. In this, as in all the steps of the outlined program, two versions of purpose are given. In one alternative, Pinchot would tour the west as an actual candidate for the republican nomination. It is the clearest of facts that several western progressive republican senators want Pinchot to run for the presidential nomination and are clamoring at him to do so. In the other version, Pinchot's western tour will be merely for the purpose of organizing nationwide sentiment against the power interests.

The next step in the program is that Governor Pinchot will call a special session of the Pennsylvania legislature in February next and at that session will make a spectacular fight for measures furthering his crusade against public utilities. Here once more, two versions of purpose appear. To have the Pennsylvania legislature in session and battling over public utility legislation on the very eve of the primary elections for delegates to the republican national convention would obviously focus attention on Governor Pinchot as the symbol of the anti-power fight. It would help Pinchot get delegates for himself if he wants them. It is equally true that having the Pennsylvania legislature in session at that time would promote and be consistent with a mere purpose of passing a strong anti-utility law.

All the Facts.

These compose the whole of the facts and the worth while surmises on the question whether Governor Pinchot will contest against Mr. Hoover for the republican nomination.

If Pinchot does not run there will be no opposition to Mr. Hoover except that, possibly a few scattered delegates here and there may be for unimportant candidates. If Pinchot does run it might be possible for him as things stand today, to have at the extreme outside perhaps as many as 100 out of the roughly 1,100 delegates. The senior La Follette, in five attempts for the republican nomination, in much the same role as Pinchot's present one, never got more than 41 delegates, of whom roughly 24 were from his own Wisconsin.

Pinchot's running, however, if he should run, would be attended by some interesting collateral developments. It would not, of course, defeat nor seriously embarrass Mr. Hoover's renomination. That Mr. Hoover will be the republican nominee is as certain as that Monday follows Sunday. Nevertheless, Governor Pinchot's running would stir up and solidify whatever anti-Hoover sentiment there is in the northwest. This sentiment, crystallized by Pinchot's running in the primary, would tend to hang over into the election and perhaps injure Mr. Hoover somewhat as against the democratic nominee.

TEACHER CONFESSES PENNING DEATH WIRE

Woman Tells of Trying To End Life in Hotel in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, June 6.—(UP) Miss Rosa B. Parrott, 51, a teacher in the Florence (Ala.) State Teachers' College, admitted to police here tonight she had telegraphed her brother in Oregon from here Thursday announcing her own death.

"I did it," she said, "because I was going to commit suicide. I was lonely and I wanted them to know where to find my body. I tried to kill myself with gas at the Pontchartrain hotel just after I got here last Tuesday, but I could not do it."

After changing her mind about suicide, Miss Parrott wired her brother under her own name, asking $200 to complete her vacation trip to see him at his home in Roseburg, Oregon. He wired a friend here, Harry Tandy, asking him to check the Monteleone hotel address of that telegram. Tandy took police with him. They found Miss Parrott at the hotel.

Police had been seeking Miss Parrott all day after receiving a wire from the brother telling of a telegram he received, signed "Sister Salvina," saying Miss Parrott had died here Tuesday of pneumonia and would be buried Friday. Police could find no "Sister Salvina," nor record of the woman's death and acknowledged they were in a quandary.

EXERCISES HELD AT I. C. SCHOOL

Graduation exercises, marked by simplicity and beautiful music were held Friday by the Immaculate Conception parochial school of that church. Miss Margaret Mary Weymouth and Miss Barbara Van Mansfield served as diploma bearers and led the procession. The little Misses Elizabeth Baumgartner, Frances Smith, Elizabeth Simon, Josephine Maloaf, Ann McLaughlin and Emma Bea Owens were flower girls.

Following a mass junior high diplomas were awarded to the following graduates:

Richard Nelson, who also won the general excellence prize, donated by Miss Kate Donohue; Selime Najjar, winner of the Latin prize, donated by T. C. Hamilton; Miss Eloise Clark, who won the scholarship offered by the Sacred Heart alumnae; Miss Helen Ederlein, winner of the mathematics prize, donated by P. T. McDermott; Miss Rosa Johann, winner of the prize for Christian doctrine, donated by Mrs. R. Reynolds; Miss Ella Mae Andrews, winner of the polite deportment medal, given each year by Mrs. Arthur Brown, of New York; Miss Mary Monsour, Francis Nicholson, Maydwell Millard, Miss Lucille Simonetti, William Burchaell, Miss Edna Roache and Miss Elizabeth Collins. The U. D. C. medal, donated by Mrs. Mollie Moran, and previously awarded to Miss Lucille Simonetti was also one of the coveted school honors.

HOME NURSING AWARDS ARE GIVEN TO CLASSES

Classes in home nursing, taught in the Atlanta schools by Miss Willie Mae Brooks, have received state vocational certificates. Fifteen pupils received honor certificates and certificates of excellence awarded by Gerald B. Wadsworth, president of the Educational Service Association of New York.

Honor certificates were awarded to: Highest unit average, Mrs. J. F. Daniel, Davis Street school, and Mrs. W. A. Daws, Home Park school; for perfect attendance, Mrs. Bobbie Gibson, Jefferson Street class; Mrs. D. W. Robinson, Annie E. West school; Mrs. L. L. Dodson, John B. Gordon school, and Mrs. Gaston Haskins, I. N. Ragsdale school; for best illustrated notebook, Miss Vera Plunkett, John B. Gordon school; Mrs. W. Paul Stephens, Annie E. West school; Miss Mildred L. David Emanuel Chapter, D. A. R., Is Organized at Swainesboro, Ga.

BY MRS. STEWART COLLEY,
State Editor, of Grantville, Ga.

Governor David Emanuel chapter, of Swainsboro, was organized Tuesday, May 26, at the home of Mrs. Frank Mitchell, on East Pine street, with 20 members present for the formal ceremonies. Mrs. Bun Wylie, state regent, of Georgia, and Mrs. H. M. Franklin, the state organizing chairman, were present. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Franklin, who presided at the initial service and welcomed them into the great body of Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. W. E. Vann read a Scripture lesson at the opening of the program, making an impressive talk. This was followed by a prayer, closing with the Lord's Prayer, in unison. The salute to the flag was given by the chapter, led by Mrs. H. C. Edenfield, vice recent. "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "America" were songs used. Mrs. Robert H. Humphrey, official pianist, played the stirring strains which brought the members to attention, while Mrs. Dell Hollomon led in singing. Mrs. G. L. Smith, the recording secretary, led in reciting the Creed. Mrs. Franklin introduced the state regent, Mrs. Wylie, and turned the exercises over to her. Mrs. Wylie responded to the introduction, after which she outlined the activities and achievements of the daughters, welcoming the new group with cordiality and telling of her pride in its unusual membership. Introducing to the chapter the regent, Mrs. W. H. Flanders, she administered the oath of office and pronounced the chapter duly organized. All officers were charged with their duties and given the oath of allegiance. The officers are: Mrs. W. H. Flanders, regent; Mrs. H. C. Edenfield, vice regent; Mrs. G. L. Smith, recording secretary; Mrs. D. D. Smith, corresponding secretary; Mrs. T. H. Swinson, registrar; Mrs. Harry Hilliard Thompson, historian; Mrs. W. E. Vann, chaplain; Mrs. R. C. Franklin, treasurer, and Mrs. W. W. Curl, auditor. To the other members of the chapter Mrs. Wylie gave an admonition to serve on whatever committees upon which they were appointed. As each member's name was called she responded with the name and service of her Revolutionary ancestor. The meeting was adjourned to convene next at the home of Mrs. W. H. Flanders, the regent, Thursday, June 11, at 4:30 o'clock.

After adjournment a luncheon was tendered as a compliment to the distinguished guests of the chapter, Mrs. Wylie, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Franklin, of Tennille. Seated with them were the regent of the new Governor David Emanuel chapter, Mrs. W. H. Flanders; the vice regent, Mrs. H. C. Edenfield; Mrs. Wilmot Outz, of Tennille, and Mrs. Conrad Roitsch, of Allen, Texas. Mrs. Roitsch is the daughter of Mrs. Franklin, the organizing chairman, and is the guest of her mother in Tennille. Mrs. Franklin is a past regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution of Georgia. At the beginning of the luncheon the chaplain, Mrs. W. E. Vann, asked a blessing, after which Mrs. Flanders, chapter regent, presented to Mrs. Wylie and Mrs. Franklin corsages of sweetheart rosebuds and lilies. The luncheon guests included Mrs. Wylie, Mrs. Franklin, Mrs. Roitsch, Mrs. Outz, Mrs. Flanders, Mrs. Edenfield, Mrs. Frank Mitchell, Mrs. A. D. Coleman, Mrs. Dell Holloman, Mrs. W. W. Curl, Miss Lottie Moring Curl, Miss Emogene Curl, Miss Bessie Moore, Mrs. T. H. Swinson, Mrs. John Henry, Mrs. D. D. Smith, Mrs. G. L. Smith, Mrs. S. S. Elliott, Mrs. Harry Hilliard Thompson, Mrs. W. E. Vann, Mrs. R. C. Franklin, Mrs. John R. Powell Jr., Mrs. J. H. Chandler, Mrs. H. S. Durden Mrs. Ralph Smith, Mrs. H. H. Fillingham, Mrs. William Karrh, of Dallas, Texas; Miss Leila Wilder, of Orlando, Fla.; Mrs. R. H. Vann, Mrs. Robert Humphrey and Mrs. Anna Brown.

It was fitting that the organization of the Daughters of the American Revolution in their new Governor David Emanuel chapter, should have been in the home of Judge and Mrs. Frank Mitchell. Judge Mitchell has the distinction of being the only member of the Sons of the American Revolution in Swainsboro. Mrs. Mitchell has been a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution longer than any other woman in Swainsboro, her membership having been for many years in Trenton, S. C. It is her daughter, Mrs. Henry Flanders, who is regent of the new chapter.

Mrs. Wylie was honor guest at a tea Monday afternoon at the home of Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Smith, on North Main street, by the members of the chapter. Over a hundred guests were present. In the receiving line were Mrs. G. L. Smith, Mrs. W. H. Flanders, the chapter regent; Mrs. Bun Wylie, the state regent, and Mrs. H. C. Edenfield, the vice regent. Mrs. Smith was assisted in entertaining her guests by Mrs. Robert Humphrey, Mrs. D. D. Smith, Mrs. S. S. Elliott, Mrs. J. H. Chandler, Mrs. W. E. Vann, Mrs. J. R. Powell, Mrs. Dell Holloman, Mrs. H. S. Durden, Miss Leila Wilder, of Orlando, Fla.; Miss Margaret Thompson, Miss Jane Holloman, Miss Madge Durden and Miss Ernestine Sherouse served punch.

Oglethorpe chapter, of Columbus, met at the home of Mrs. J. W. Schuessler and was entertained by Mrs. Jean Peacock, Mrs. A. C. Nix, and Mrs. Schuessler. Following the opening exercises, plans were discussed for the reception to be given by the three local chapters in honor of Mrs. Gaffney, newly elected vice president general. Mrs. H. B. Harper gave a talk on "America's Recompense to the Indian." The silk flag recently purchased by the chapter was displayed and the regent announced it would be accepted at the June meeting with a program appropriate to flag day, which is June 14. Mrs. O. C. Bullock gave a short account of the Continental Congress held in Washington, telling of the interesting things done and of the election of Mrs. Gaffney. She spoke of the high esteem in which Mrs. Gaffney is held by both national and state officers. Mrs. Gaffney was nominated by Mrs. Julius Talmadge, of Athens, and seconded by Mrs. Edward Moulton, state regent of Rhode Island, for the office of vice president general and led the seven who were elected. This means she will preside in the absence of the president general, a signal honor. Mrs. Gaffney graciously thanked the chapter for its support during her election. New officers elected were Mrs. Owen Edge, regent; Mrs. Jones Perryman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. B. Huff, chaplain; Mrs. H. B. Harper, historian. A rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Murray, retiring regent. Oglethorpe unanimously indorsed Mrs. Russell William Magna for president general, to be elected in 1932.

Fort Valley Chapter, D. A. R., of Fort Valley, met May 13, 1931, and elected the following officers to serve for the year 1931-32:

Regent, Mrs. H. J. Avera; first vice regent, Mrs. W. B. Norton; second vice regent, Mrs. Lawton Culpepper; recording secretary, Mrs. Cornelius Hall; treasurer, Mrs. J. W. Woolfolk; registrar, Mrs. C. B. Almon; historian, Mrs. E. L. Lester; chaplain, Mrs. S. B. Wilson; parliamentarian, Mrs. W. J. Lilpfert; corresponding secretary, Miss Bessie Anderson.

Officers elected for the year 1931-32 by the Baron DeKalb chapter of Decatur, are as follows: Regent, Mrs. Henry Earthman; first vice regent, Mrs. Edward Jones; second vice regent, Mrs. J. A. Montgomery; recording secretary, Mrs. Searcy Slack; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. F. Myers; treasurer, Mrs. A. L. Wade; registrar, Mrs. W. P. Smith; historian, Mrs. W. I. Brooks; chaplain, Mrs. J. B. Green; parliamentarian, Mrs. Carl T. Hudgins; auditor, Mrs. Walter Estes; genealogist, Mrs. V. A. S. Moore.

Fort Early chapter, of Cordele, elected the following corps of officers to serve for 1931-32: Regent, Mrs. Butler Roy; first vice regent, Mrs. Bailey Heard; second vice regent, Mrs. C. C. Greer; recording secretary, Mrs. J. H. Jordan; corresponding secretary, Mrs. D. H. Standard; treasurer, Mrs. D. Holmes; historian, Mrs. J. M. Hunt; registrar, Mrs. E. F. Strozier; genealogist, Mrs. O. T. Gower; parliamentarian, Mrs. J. M. Diffie; auditor, Mrs. J. S. Pate; reporter, Mrs. Bonner Brown; librarian, Mrs. L. L. Pond; chaplain, Mrs. T. E. Fletcher.

John Clarke chapter, of Social Circle, celebrated their fourteenth anniversary in a most unique way at the home of the regent, Mrs. E. C. McDowell. The occasion was entirely social and almost the entire membership was present. This chapter was organized 14 years ago with 19 members. Since that time they have enrolled 75 members. The work of this chapter has been outstanding and this year the $10 in gold which was offered by the state treasurer to the chapter first reaching all honor roll requirements was won by them. Mrs. Mell Knox, state first vice regent, and chairman of patriotic education, is a member of this chapter.

Elizabeth Marlowe chapter, of Monticello, met at the home of Mrs. T. B. Persons with Mesdames Ray Persons, E. N. Smithe, and Algie Chaffin as associate hostesses. Mrs. O. E. Lancaster, the regent, presided and the following program was presented: "Surrender of Cornwallis," by Mrs. Ray Persons; "The Siege of Yorktown," by Miss Eula Hardy; "Mothers of Men," by Mrs. E. N. Smith; "Faith of Our Mothers," was sung by the entire chapter.

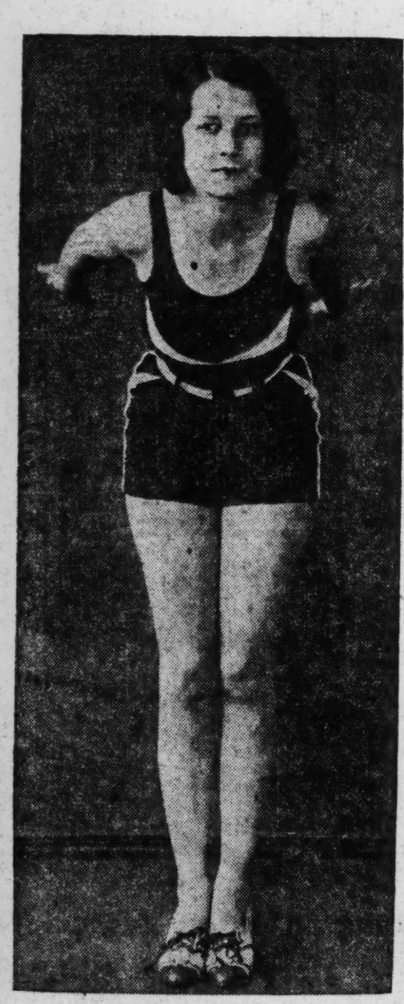

Sergeant Jasper, of Monticello, recently unveiled a monument in honor of Ben Hill. This monument is located at Hillsboro. Mrs. Bun Wylie, state regent; Mrs. J. H. Nicholson, state auditor, and Mrs. J. L. Beeson, state historian, were among the distinguished guests. In honor of these prominent guests a luncheon was given at the home of the regent of the Sergeant Jasper chapter, Mrs. T. E. Hutchinson. After the luncheon talks were given by Mrs. Bun Wylie, Mrs. Nicholson, and Mrs. Beeson and Miss Maud Penn gave a toast, "Our Honor Guests." The following program was given at Hillsboro, where the monument was unveiled: Song, "America," pupils of the Ben Hill High school; invocation by Rev. J. O. Brand; welcome address, introduction of distinguished guests and presentation of marker by Mrs. T. A. Hutchinson; unveiling by Mesdames J. R. McConnell, F. H. Cooper and Charles Green; acceptance by Professor Milledge Leach, principal of Ben Hill school; address by Mrs. Bun Wylie; tribute to Ben Hill, by Mrs. J. L. Beeson; reminiscences, by J. L. G. Woods; benediction by Rev. J. O. Brand.

Nancy Hart chapter, of Milledgeville, was entertained by Mrs. David Ferguson and Miss Ferguson at their home. At the conclusion of the customary opening and chapter business an interesting program was enjoyed. Miss Ferguson talked on "Yorktown as a National Ornament," followed by a musical number. Mrs. M. H. Bland gave a study on the American flag, specifying Georgia as the fourth star, placed there in 1788. Mrs. W. T. Garrard gave highlights from the national congress in Washington and Mrs. W. L. Retchie read the constitution and by-laws of the Nancy Hart chapter. A letter was read by Mrs. J. L. Beeson from the presbytery of Augusta district expressing sincere appreciation to her personally and to the Nancy Hart chapter for marking the site of old Oglethorpe University in such a beautiful way. The regent, Mrs. Y. H. Yarbrough, announced that Georgia was awarded a medal for conservation and thrift at the congress. She also told the chapter of inquiry from a northern city about the two real daughters, there being only six living today throughout the entire country. The Nancy Hart chapter will exhibit her own beautiful flag on Flag Day. Following the election of officers of the coming year a rising vote of thanks was extended the retiring regent, Mrs. Y. H. Yarbrough, for her most efficient work the past three years.

The editor wishes to thank the John Houston, Jeffersonia Hawkins and the D. A. R. of Roberta for the invitation to be present at the unveiling of a monument to Colonel Benjamin Hawkins June 6. The United States government is erecting this monument but it is through the untiring efforts of these chapters that the monument was secured.

Mrs. Dykes Indorsed For Vice President.

Mrs. W. F. Dykes was indorsed by the Joseph Habersham chapter, Daughters of American Revolution, for the office of first state vice regent at the meeting of the chapter held recently. Mrs. Dykes is numbered among the leaders in this organization, in which she has served in various offices and as chairman of important committees. She now holds the office of state corresponding secretary, which she has filled most efficiently.

Mrs. H. F. Gaffney Issues Message to Georgia D. A. R.

The accompanying photograph is a charming likeness of Mrs. Herbert Fay Gaffney, of Columbus, upon whom was conferred the honor of being elected vice president general of the national society of Daughters of the American Revolution at the conference held in Washington, D. C., in April. She is an important leader in social as well as patriotic circles in Georgia. Her official message is published on today's D. A. R. page, and carries service, unity of purpose, oneness of thought and friendship as the guiding motives.

Mrs. Herbert Fay Gaffney, of Columbus, recently elected vice president general of the National Society of Daughters of the American Revolution, greets Georgia division, D. A. R., through an official message on today's page in The Constitution. She says:

PINEHAVEN, GREEN ISLAND HILLS, COLUMBUS, Ga., May 20.—My dear Georgia Daughters of the American Revolution:

Now that the tide of everyday life is again flowing along its natural channel and we are preparing to look upon the brilliant continental congress as an event of the past, I am asking you to linger a little while that I may reassure you of my deepest abiding appreciation for all the lovely courtesies showered upon me during the days we spent together in Washington.

The nicest moment of all came when we reached home again, and shared with those who could not attend this congress, the joy of the victory, the very great honor that Georgia again claims the ranking vice president general, N. S. D. A. R.

In as much as our state proudly boasts of such superb Daughters as her former vice presidents general and can point with pride to their unusual services of loyalty to her, we have in this a fine example, and with their continued co-operation and your additional support I shall dare to lead on.

For all your many letters assuring me of your belief in me, for all your telegrams filled with words of fine encouragement, for all your flowers laden with beauty and fragrant with joyous perfume that bore me calmly through the hours of waiting, I thank you most sincerely.

May we hold to that largeness of service, that unselfish spirit where in duty, honor ever prefers the other, so long as our national organization has its existence.

In closing I shall leave this with you and beg you to remember always that "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things. The things which ye both learned and received and heard and saw. These things do, and may the God of peace be with you."

Sincerely and with deep affection believe me to be

Your faithful co-worker,
BLANCHE MCFARLIN,
(Mrs. Herbert Fay Gaffney),
Vice President General, N. S. D. A. R.

Miss Wright, of Greenville, S. C., Will Wed Hugh P. Nunnally

Miss Mary Lee Wright, daughter of Mrs. Herbert Lee Wright, of Greenville, S. C., whose engagement is announced today to Hugh Pendleton Nunnally, of Atlanta, the date of the marriage to be announced later. Miss Wright is considered one of South Carolina's most beautiful and charming belles, and following her marriage to Mr. Nunnally, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Nunnally, she will be an interesting addition to Atlanta's fashionable young matron contingent.

GREENVILLE, S. C., June 6.—Of social importance is the announcement made today by Mrs. Herbert Lee Wright of the engagement of her daughter, Mary Lee, to Hugh Pendleton Nunnally, of Atlanta, the date of the marriage to be announced later. Miss Wright and Mr. Nunnally are members of distinguished and aristocratic southern families and are well known in the south's fashionable social realms. The charming young bride-elect's mother was formerly Miss Eunice Durham, of North Carolina, whose forbears were among the prominent pioneers of that state. The late Mr. Wright, father of the bride-to-be, was numbered among South Carolina's leading citizens and was the son of the late Captain and Mrs. Abner Benson Wright, of Greenville.

Mr. Nunnally is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Nunnally, of Atlanta, and the brother of Charles Nunnally, also of that city. His grandparents, the late Judge and Mrs. John Pendleton, were beloved pioneers of Atlanta and during their lifetime they were prominently identified with that city's social, civic and religious life. Mr. Nunnally is a graduate of the University of Georgia and is a prominent member of the Chi Phi fraternity, the Piedmont Driving Club, the Capital City Club and the Nine O'Clocks, exclusive social organization in Atlanta. Mr. Nunnally is associated with his father in business in Atlanta, where he and his wife will make their home following their marriage.

Alpharetta Garden Club Holds First Flower Show

ALPHARETTA, Ga., June 6.—Alpharetta Garden Club held its first flower show at the home of Mrs. J. P. Brooke, Friday afternoon.

The most gorgeous display was of sweet peas, snapdragons, Madonna lilies and larkspur. Many other beautiful flowers, including roses, gaillardia, lupines, canterbury bells, poppies, dianthus, petunias, foxgloves, nasturtiums, flowering shrubs and other flowers were exhibited. One of the club members had a very unique entry, lovely mounted flowers, grasses and butterflies; also the small twin vases attracted much attention. There were two variety displays, one container held on each of 67 varieties. No prizes or ribbons were given.

The program committee presented the following program: Opening song, "America;" welcome address president, Mrs. G. B. Walker; piano solo, "Valse Brilliante," by Chopin, Marian Norman; reading, "Son Air Ye Washed," by Robert Waters; piano solo, "Juba Waltzes," Catherine Waters; "Moonlight and Roses," Anne Maddox and Annie Florence Manning; "Pompadour Fan," by Cadman, Laura Mae Manning. The program was followed by a talk on dahlias by Mr. McLarry, of Norcross, Ga.

A number of out-of-town visitors were present, from Atlanta, Marietta, Lawrenceville, Cumming, Duluth and Roswell.

Mrs. Troy Rucker was hostess to the Garden Club at her home near Crabapple, Ga., and was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. Dave Rucker, and sister, Mrs. Murdock. The president, Mrs. G. B. Walker, presided.

Mrs. J. T. Upshaw was awarded the attendance prize, a three-piece flower container, given by Mrs. R. A. Waters. Mrs. Walker appointed Mesdames A. W. Smith, W. G. Jones and Glenn Nesbit to assist Mrs. I. O. Teasley and Mrs. R. D. Manning in making plans for the beautification of the vacant lot in town on the highway. Mrs. J. T. Upshaw read rules and regulations in regard to the flower show.

Mrs. C. A. Upshaw and Mrs. G. B. Walker gave interesting reports of the flower show they visited at the Brookhaven Country Club, in Atlanta.

The following program was presented by Mrs. W. G. Jones, leader: Piano duet, "Grace Waltz," by Carl Bohm, Misses Sara Wills and Helen Rucker; poem, "A Step of a Fountain," Mrs. J. T. Upshaw; poem, "In the Garden," Miss Ann Maddox; poem, "Why I Plant a Garden," Mrs. George O. Hook. Mrs. Rucker was assisted by her daughter, Miss Helen Rucker, and by Miss Sara Wills. A visit to the rock garden of the hostess was enjoyed.

Wealthy Jail Guest.

There's a new rule at police headquarters in New Britain, Conn.—search everyone asking for a night's lodging. William Parker, of Baltimore, after spending a night as "guest" of the city, thanked the sergeant for his hospitality and departed. A few hours later he was arrested for selling pencils without a license and found to have $137 in his pocket. His second night in jail was not gratis.

Mrs. Sanford's Greetings Interest Clubwomen at Biennial Council

Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, president of Georgia Federation, who although unable to attend the state convention held in May at Waycross, prepared her report and her greetings to the delegates attending the fourth biennial council, which is herewith published:

"Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs has a record of fine achievements during the past year. Together we have built a stronger and more influential organization—one recognized and appreciated by men and women throughout the state. The officers and chairmen have done work of which you may be proud. The district officers and club officers have been zealous in good work for the federation and a friendly and helpful spirit has been manifest among all the clubwomen at all times.

Twelve Districts.

"If one should visit the 12 districts in Georgia and see the personnel of the clubwomen active in the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs one would quickly come to the conclusion that those who tell you Georgia is disheartened and discouraged are badly mistaken. Everywhere among the clubwomen is to be seen the spirit of courage, determination and genuine optimism. Your president has been greatly encouraged by the kindness, the hospitality, the friendship and the co-operation of the women who have been a great help to her. The clubs are in a splendid condition and are doing excellent work. Because of the unanimous response of the clubs of the state to the call for service in the unemployment situation, your president received a personal letter from President Hoover thanking our organization for its magnificent work. Our women are making a real effort to find a solution for the present economic situation.

"Community spirit has placed the federation where it is today, an organization with unlimited power and prospects for a great future. Rapid strides have been made in the last few years, but ever upward and onward we must keep going. What we have accomplished is an incentive to greater work, and your part, clubwomen, can be done only by you. Our theme is service in whatever line of achievement we undertake. And may we ever remember that every activity of our federation is based upon the teachings and instructions which have been handed down to us through the pages of the Holy Scriptures. It is here we get our incentive for public welfare—the home, a knowledge of the sciences and the arts, and it is from this same book we get our truest and best information as to what constitutes good citizenship. We may well look upon the past with pardonable pride. Our present is commanding. Our future holds forth prospects for greater service and usefulness.

Unity and Harmony.

"That unity and harmony prevail throughout the federation; that the clubwomen are moving forward in the accomplishment of their great objectives; that they are serving the community instead of self; that they are fired with an idealism that does, instead of an idealism that dreams; that they are building each year a greater and better Tallulah Falls Industrial school, thereby proving that they believe education is not a charity but a part of our national defense; that they are giving their talent and time to the forces that make better and happier homes; and that they are developing international understanding that will mean peace among the nations of the world.

"My experience at the district meetings has given me great encouragement. I can see a real spirit of federation at work. The clubwomen are working with enthusiasm, with joy, with purpose, with vision, with hope. A new spirit seems to be in the air. Through work in our clubs scattered all over Georgia and through the splendid district organization, we are undertaking Van Dyke's command: 'Be glad of life for it gives you the chance to love to work and to play and to look up at the stars.' My gratitude goes out to all the chairmen who have done so much to make my administration a success, to all you dear clubwomen who have been so patient of our mistakes and responsive to our efforts. The letters of appreciation have made many a day brighter and I thank you all. To my officers no words can express my thanks and appreciation; ever ready and willing, a strong back line for defense and support."

"Because you helped me, I have much achieved;
Had you not stood by, then I must have failed;
But knowing that you trusted and believed,
I dared not disappoint, and so prevailed."

Tallulah Falls Industrial School Closes Twenty-Second Year Of Record-Making Achievement as 'Light in the Mountains'

BY MRS. HARVIE JORDAN.

It was a happy privilege to be the guest of Tallulah Falls High school and enjoy Senior Night, which concluded the commencement program. A delightful spirit of simplicity and informality characterized the graduating exercises over which Miss Anne Carrington Davis, the principal, and Mrs. John K. Ottley, president of the board of trustees, presided in the Isma Dooly auditorium.

Both Rabun and Habersham counties claim Tallulah and each county school superintendent, when introduced, stated eloquently that Tallulah school was a blessing and a benediction to his community. They said that among their best teachers were graduates from this school.

The chairman of Tallulah Falls district trustees, George F. Smith, said, "If you come within touch of this school you can but be benefited." He paid a glowing tribute to Mrs. Ottley as the divinely-appointed guardian of these true Anglo-Saxon American children.

Purpose of Institution.

In his baccalaureate address, Colonel Thaddeus L. Bynum, of Clayton, said, "The purpose of this institution cannot be surpassed in the minds of humanity. Upon the principal and faculty devolves the sacred obligation of keeping ever before these mountain children the lofty ideals for which the south has always stood and instilling in them that duty to their country demands service from their hands."

Miss Edna Brackett, of Tugalo Junction, delivered the salutatory, having won the second honor. The valedictorian was Miss Edna Hancock, of Macon. Following the addresses, diplomas were awarded to 17 members of the class of '31.

Certificates in vocational training and handcrafts were delivered for the first time, and in presenting these to six students Miss Davis said this was the greatest victory yet won by Tallulah Falls school. Which means that the school's ambition to be recognized by the state vocational board has been realized and by patience and perseverance these girls have won the distinction of being prepared to go out and teach the diversified handcrafts in which they are so efficient.

Songs by the student body were well rendered. "Tallulah" being sung with hearty enthusiasm. Rich entertainment was provided by Miss Davis, the versatile principal, when, at the close, she recited the delightfully humorous selection, "Jemimy," which provoked great applause.

The functions of the school are exceptional and it maintains a faculty that has had much to do with the upbuilding of enlarged activities to an ever-growing group.

Golden Opportunities.

We came out into the glorious moonlight filled with a spiritual exaltation impossible to translate into words. More than ever before we felt that the contribution of Tallulah to human welfare cannot be overestimated. Surely, true happiness lies in making the path of others less rough and less hard to travel and, through Tallulah, Georgia clubwomen, under the able direction of the board of trustees, are giving golden opportunities to hundreds of boys and girls who were starving mentally, spiritually and in some instances physically. This "Light in the Mountains" has come to those whose need for it is great and in whom there are splendid inherent possibilities.

It is thrilling to be a member of a federation that is unique in that it owns and operates so fine an exemplification of patriotic education which was "visioned through necessity and built by loyalty."

Tallulah's progress depends on the active interest of the entire membership and each development will bring added credit to the work of our organization.

Visit Is Inspiration.

When we adjourned to the attractive "guest house" with its atmosphere of comfort, quiet and repose, I thought as I looked across the beautiful surroundings to the distant mountains of an old Persian proverb, "I was common clay till the roses were planted in me. When the narcissus and jonquil climb up to daylight; when the bluebird heralds the advent of Eden days—then new homes spring mushroomlike from the earth and so the erstwhile barren hillside is beautiful and domesticated, and in the common clay roses thrive and bloom and fling their intoxicating fragrance to the passerby." So was the seed of education planted in that undeveloped spot 21 years ago and there have blossomed some young Americans that are the fruit of love and service.

I shall carry the inspiration and the memory of my visit to Tallulah into my connections with federation work with the hope that I may be able to help open a little wider this door of opportunity.

Red Cross Sends Appreciation Of Clubs' Aid to War Veterans

Mrs. S. V. Sanford, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, has received the following expression of appreciation and thanks from Mrs. D. M. Robinson, director of Red Cross service at the United State Veterans' hospital, Atlanta:

"No group of people in Georgia can send to you and the federation more genuine and hearty congratulations on your splendid achievements in the past year than we at United States Veterans' Hospital No. 48, Atlanta. No people in the entire state have more cause to express thanks to the federation than the patients and the administration at this hospital, and all would like to join me in deepest appreciation of your aid through your state chairman, Mrs. H. M. Nicholes, and through her, the various district presidents.

"We feel so indebted to Mrs. Nicholes for her unprecedented efforts for the disabled in warfare that we would like to see her name emblazoned wherever the cause of those men is espoused. She has been absolutely selfless in her work and has been the greatest friend and most successful worker the disabled have ever known in Georgia. Her every accomplishment is not known to all as she is most modest and never seems to think of the praise that she is due, but in the hearts of us all at Hospital No. 48 she will always be enshrined.

"May I ask that the clubs of Georgia continue to make donations for cigarets, chewing gum, party treats, comforts of all kinds, and anything the doctors and nurses may need, through the state chairman ex-soldier relief, and I sincerely hope that such chairman will be our beloved Mrs. Nicholes. The recreation aide in the veterans' hospitals of Georgia can interpret to the state chairman the needs as they arise in order that duplications may not be present, and that all needs may be met. The aide can secure permission to purchase necessary articles through the state chairman, and all bills can be met by the chairman, or in any way that such chairman and the aide may work out together.

"I know that Mrs. Nicholes will submit a detailed report of the superb activities of the federation at Hospital No. 48 since July, 1930, which will show how very much you have done, but many of the things already provided will have to be a continuous donation throughout all the years to come, and I trust that you all will see fit to organize plans and frame policies that will make provision for the patients in the future.

"The plans of clubs deciding upon some definite comfort or treat that they wish to provide each year has worked out admirably. Will you not ask the incoming state president to request the district presidents to take up with her districts and ascertain which clubs desire to aid in ex-soldier relief, and ask them to kindly make such decision known to the state chairman, ex-soldier relief, so she in turn may map out a full program with the recreation aides in the hospitals as early as possible after the new officers are installed?

"We are looking forward to another banner year in the Federation of Women's Clubs, and to our close association with all of you. We are not unmindful of your expansive program for good throughout our wonderful state and want to commend you for all you have accomplished and thank you for all that we know is in store for all Georgians on account of your combined efforts for the betterment of mankind."

Mrs. Fortson Gives Winder Club Report.

Mrs. George Fortson, retiring president of Winder Woman's Club, reports many achievements of that organization under her regime. She says:

As retiring president of the Winder Woman's Club, it is my privilege and pleasure to bring to you a report of work accomplished by the club during the last nine months. At each meeting the club song, "Georgia Land," has been sung and the club creed or collect read; and frequently the flag salute has been given. Without exception each chairman has shown enthusiasm in her work and has arranged an interesting program in her turn. Mrs. R. H. Kimball, first vice president, with her finance committee, has rendered valuable aid in financial affairs, having added to the treasury $170.60. Mrs. Carter Daniel, second vice president, is in a large measure responsible for the fine programs presented, having arranged for each department chairman to present one program during the year. Mrs. W. L. DeLaPerriere has been an efficient and faithful secretary, and Mrs. H. H. Colvard, assistant secretary, has been untiring in her duties, one of which was the securing of hostesses for each meeting, thus adding much to our pleasure. Mrs. W. L. DeLaPerriere has been a capable treasurer. Together with her assistant, Mrs. Lucy Ethridge, she has kept up with the club funds and the collecting of dues. Mrs. Charles Perry, corresponding secretary, has been faithful to her duties in every way.

Education Chairman.

Mrs. H. A. Carithers, chairman of education, has done an outstanding work, some points of which are adding about 75 new books to the library, making a total now in the library of 850; giving 20 magazines to the school library; giving many magazines to county schools; assisting the P.-T. A. with a book shower, adding 287 books to the school library; brought a speaker from the state department to talk on conservation of forests; provided what was necessary to keep two children in school for this school term; remembered six children in the mill section at Christmas; assisted the garden club in observing its first anniversary party, and in sponsoring two flower shows in October and April.

Mrs. G. C. Moseley, chairman of fine arts, has also done fine service. She has assisted Miss Ferguson in organizing a dancing class; observed Children's Book Week; distributed pamphlets to county schools during Book Week; through the Choral Club, has assisted at programs, and rendered a public program at Christmas; observed National Music Week with a Russian musical before the Kiwanis Club. Mrs. J. F. Broome, chairman of American homes, contributed $11 toward the clubhouse; urged serving Georgia products in the homes, boarding houses and hotels; offered a prize for the greatest improvement in a yard; requested girls in the graduating classes in high school and junior high to wear cotton dresses, and assisted in making the cooking school a success. Mrs. T. R. Strange, chairman of citizenship, secured an authority to address the club on taxation; kept the city parks in good condition, and added many new plants to them; requested flags to be displayed on patriotic days; urged members to register to vote, and assisted in the observance of patriotic days.

Tallulah Falls.

Mrs. H. H. Colvard, chairman of Tallulah Falls schools, contributed $30 toward this cause. Mrs. C. S. Williams, chairman of international relations, presented a fine program with Miss Roberta Hodgson, of the chair of international relations of the Teachers' College, as speaker. Mrs. A. D. McCurry, chairman of legislation, as a co-worker with the international relations chairman, presented Mrs. Herman DeLaPerriere, state chairman of legislation, as speaker on an outstanding program. Mrs. J. P. Eberhardt, chairman of health, secured Dr. Johnson, state health commissioner of Clarke county, to address the club; assisted the auxiliary to the Medical Society in contributing clothing valued at $115 and 500 flower bulbs to Alto sanitarium; urged need of servant health certificates.

Mrs. M. R. Lay, floral chairman, sent offerings for deceased members, and members of their immediate families. Mrs. Reese Couch, scrapbook chairman, kept careful record of activities of the club. Mrs. John H. Wood, publicity chairman, reported the meetings and activities of the club for the local and Atlanta papers. During the year we added six new members; G. W. Woodruff was elected to membership on the advisory board; the club was represented at the district and state conventions, and the district convention was invited to be our guests in October; plans have been selected for our new clubhouse, and it is hoped to build sometime during the summer. Throughout the year the spirit of co-operation and fine harmony has made the excellent work in all departments possible, and the retiring president urges a continuation of this spirit of loyalty to her successor.

Mrs. Charles Haden Issues Notice.

Mrs. Charles J. Haden, chairman Student Aid Foundation, issues the following notice: According to the custom of the Student Aid Foundation, the committee will take no action on applications from June 15 until August 15 and during these two months, the books will be closed except for the receipt of payments.

Now Remove Nasty Yellow

Whiten Teeth

3 Shades in 3 Days

NOBODY likes to look at teeth that are dull, dingy, yellow, discolored or eaten away by decay. And there's now no reason why you should have such teeth. They're unnatural. And the new scientific Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique proves they're unnatural—by removing stain and yellow, and making teeth gleaming white.

Try this technique for a few days . . . A half-inch of Kolynos on a dry brush, morning and night. You'll note an improvement after the first brushing. Your mouth will feel cleaner than ever. And in just 3 days teeth will look whiter—fully 3 shades whiter. Gums will feel firmer and look healthier. All because Kolynos does what no ordinary toothpaste can do—it kills the millions of germs that cause most tooth and gum troubles. And cleans teeth as they should be cleaned—RIGHT DOWN TO THE BEAUTIFUL NAKED WHITE ENAMEL WITHOUT INJURY.

Kolynos is unique—unlike anything you've ever used. The very moment it enters the mouth it FOAMS, thus permitting the use of a dry brush which makes Kolynos 10 times more effective.

This penetrating FOAM gets into and cleans out every tiny pit, fissure and crevice. It erases tartar and yellow—washes away the unsightly mucoid coating. It kills the millions of germs that swarm into the mouth with every breath and attack teeth and gums—kills 190 million in the first 15 seconds.

Easily and quickly this remarkable Kolynos FOAM cleans teeth gleaming white and keeps them sound. It stimulates gums and keeps the breath sweet and fresh.

If you really want sound, dazzling white teeth and firm, coral pink gums, try this way. You'll be glad that you did. Buy a tube of Kolynos from any druggist today.

Morgan County Federation Meets

Apalachee Woman's Club was hostess recently to the Morgan County Federation of Women's Clubs, the meeting having been held at the Methodist church. Mrs. H. A. Davis, president of the hostess club, was in the chair for the opening exercises and called upon Mrs. L. B. Ponder to lead the assembly in the salute to the flag. This was followed by singing "Georgia Land," which preceded the repeating of the clubwomen's creed.

Mrs. James Biddix had charge of the devotional services. Mrs. Davis spoke a few words of welcome and Mrs. Wallace, the county president, responded. The distinguished guests were Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, eighth district president, and Mrs. C. M. Snellings, wife of the chancellor of the university.

Under the direction of Miss Rena Prior, several children sang "The Band in the Park." With a president's questionnaire as a guide, Mrs. Wallace held her conference. Mrs. Ritchie gave an address, her subject being "Citizenship."

After the appointing of the courtesy committee and announcements, Miss Rena Prior played a piano solo, after which the meeting adjourned for lunch.

The singing of "America the Beautiful" opened the afternoon session. Mrs. C. M. Snellings gave publicity to the club institute to be held in Athens in July.

Reports from the committee on the Braswell memorial work started at very interesting discussion on different phases of the benefits of the Braswell fund. The body voted to petition the grand jury to arrange to make loans to such fatherless young people as desired funds for college education after they have finished high school.

Pages appointed for the meeting were Misses Elizabeth Cochran, Dorothy Lomax, Elizabeth Shockley and Martha Shockley. A dainty hand-painted booklet for registering names of guests and others was kept by them and they also helped the hostesses to serve the lunch in the basement of the church. The next meeting will be with the Buckhead P.-T. A.

Student Aid Chairman Deplores Resignation of Mrs. Woodward

In presenting the student aid foundation at the recent federation council in Waycross, the resignation of Mrs. David Woodward as chairman was announced and the following telegram was sent to Mr. and Mrs. Woodward:

"Officers and members of the Georgia federation in council send greetings. Deeply regret Mrs. Woodward's resignation because of her great interest in girls and wisdom at all times in her administration. Sincere appreciation expressed for great generosity and co-operation of you both."

The message from the recently appointed chairman, Mrs. Charles J. Haden, follows:

"You are familiar with the work of the student aid foundation during the long years of its service. The time allotted on the program would not permit a review, were it desirable beyond the facts which Mrs. Large will later give.

Work of Foundation.

"I wish it were possible that every woman of Georgia could attend one of the meetings of the student aid committee, to hear and see for herself what transpires. The small group of earnest women meet at regular intervals in the home of the chairman, read the accumulated correspondence and examine the books and papers. The report of the finance committee and any recommendations that may come from the board of trustees is considered. Then applications for loans are examined. These calls for help from ambitious and, in a majority of instances, most deserving girls, exceed the funds available, forcing the committee to the difficult and delicate duty of deciding where the dollar to be sent out may do the greatest good, with the reasonable certainty that it will be repaid. The two-fold responsibility of rendering aid to the girls who apply and of conserving the funds which generous friends have entrusted to our handling is not an easy burden to carry. The committee must act, and after patient inquiry as to each applicant, does act. The high average of collections almost persuades us that a greater power has co-operated with our finance chairman. It will be seen from Mrs. Large's report that every section of the state has been served. From this brief statement of the working of the student aid foundation you can appreciate the valuable and unselfish service of the two beloved chairmen, Mrs. Wey and Mrs. Woodward, running through a period of more than 20 years.

"On the board of trustees are some of the foremost businessmen of the state, the chairman being David Woodward. His generous contributions of money and time have been the bulwark of strength to the organization. His gifts and Mrs. Woodward's, from time to time, amount to approximately $10,000.

Valuable Service.

"Money value cannot be placed on the wise counsel and patient oversight that has been given the student aid work by Mr. and Mrs. Woodward. It is with extreme regret that, for the sake of her health, we must relieve Mrs. Woodward for a time of the cares of the work. By the action of the board of trustees she remains the chairman emeritus.

"Miss Marian Woodward, also a most valuable member of student aid, was made vice chairman. You may feel confident that you still retain Mrs. Woodward's wise oversight and kindly interest in all affairs of the student aid.

"I accepted the active chairmanship until she may resume its duties. May I ask your sympathetic support and co-operation during this interval? Let me assure you of our gratitude for your past interest." The detailed report of the year's work was read by the secretary, Mrs. E. K. Large, and will appear in full in the year book.

Mrs. Walker Thanks Atlanta Federation

To the Members of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs.

My Very Dear Friends:

Please let me thank you for the honor you have paid me in electing me president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs. I want to assure you that it will be my pleasure to serve you to the best of my ability. Wishing each and every one of you a pleasant and profitable summer, I am

Very cordially,
EMILY RAVENEL WALKER.
(Mrs. R. Murdock Walker.)

Apalachee Club.

Apalachee Woman's Club met with Mrs. W. G. Middlebrooks and Mrs. H. A. Davis at the lovely home of the former, on Tuesday afternoon, June 2, at 4 o'clock.

It was decided that the usual July spend-the-day-party would be held on Long Branch the first Tuesday in July. The Apalachee Woman's Club has an enrollment of 24, but a majority of these are patrons of the school only, and help with activities for the schools. They are not club-minded, the most of them not paying dues. Consequently the club cannot count them club members in good standing but retains their names in order that it may receive their help in activities for the school and in order that they may not be debarred from the only civic organization in the community. The club recently entertained the Morgan County Federation of Women's Clubs.

During the past school term the club divided its members into groups, one for each schoolroom, and put on a contest of work with and for the children and their respective rooms. Points were given for various activities. An unusual interest was shown by the children of the intermediate grades and many books were read by mothers who find time usually for little reading. Points were given also in this contest for blue ribbons in a nature contest sponsored by the chairman of this division of work in the district and a splendid exhibit was held as a result of this contest—the school groups receiving points which were included in their reports.

Due to financial distress the club raised and disbursed very little money last term. The club and school started a memorial plot for Benjamin Braswell, who left many years ago several thousand dollars for the education of fatherless children of the county. This fund has grown until not even the interest is needed each year for the needs of such children. The county federation is sponsoring this Braswell memorial plot contest and will give a prize to the school having the best plot in the fall.

Mrs. Burrus Reports On The Club Women.

Mrs. George Burrus, of Columbus, state chairman for the Club Woman, the official organ of General Federation of Women's Clubs, gives her report as follows:

"A small drop of ink, falling like dew upon a thought, produces that which makes thousands and probably millions think. Small drops of ink falling upon thoughts concerning our federation, crystallize into marvelous aspirations and achievements. Our official organ, The Club Woman, is more wonderful and helpful than the most modern invention. It even surpasses the old-time watch chain knife with its concealed cigar cutter and corkscrew, and alyso the proverbial hair pin (woman's most efficient tool) which is again coming into its own after almost being obliterated by the Castle clip.

"Our magazine is a clairvoyant: it reveals the past and present and foretells the future; it is a mirror, reflecting the happenings of its members truthfully, clearly, and forcibly; it is a 'talkie' in which all members of the federation are 'stars;' it is a safety deposit box wherein are kept the official records and deeds of our organization and it is a treasure chest, wherein the most precious memories are tenderly laid away in lavender and old lace.

"Georgia receives 290 complimentary copies with only about 75 paid subscriptions, but friends, we are growing! Since the appeal was made to the district presidents and state president and director, the paid list has almost doubled. Nebraska changed its by-laws in order to meet every complimentary issue with a paid one, but Georgia prefers her subscriptions to be voluntary.

"Mrs. Thomas J. Winter gave 200 paid subscriptions for libraries in her adopted state, California, and her home state, Minnesota. Georgia women individually are not asked to give so large a sum, but every club president is asked to send a message to every club in their district, to pay for their president's magazine or give a paid subscription to their library. In this manner the magazine will receive through its entire complimentary subscription over $10,000. You need your magazine, and your magazine needs you. Let every club subscribe thereby gaining an enrichment of life through a better adjustment of human relations."

Mrs. Paine Heads Elberton Club.

Mrs. W. H. Paine was unanimously elected president of the Elberton Woman's Club at the meeting held Friday afternoon at the club rooms. Other officers elected were: Mrs. Byron Minter, first vice president; Mrs. Mozelle Teasley, second vice president; Mrs. Vail Deadwyler, recording secretary; Mrs. Hal R. Bynum, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. G. Phillips, treasurer; Mrs. T. O. Tabor Jr., parliamentarian; Mrs. Charles Garrett, press chairman.

The meeting was featured by the presence of two distinguished guests, Miss Roberta Hodgson, professor of international relations at G. S. T. C., Athens, and Miss Jeannette Rankin, of Bogart, associate secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War.

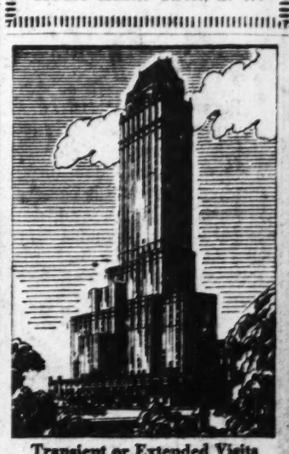

Mrs. T. O. Tabor Jr., who has served with distinction and ability as the president for the past year, presided. The opening number was a piano selection rendered by Norman Thompson. Mrs. Ernest Korten gave a musical number, a vocal solo, "The Old Refrain," by Fritz Kreisler, with Mrs. W. T. Thornton accompanist. The president presented Misses Rankin and Hodgson, who made enthusiastic talks. Their subject was "Peace, or World Disarmament," which they handled with skill and in a logical and comprehensive manner. They suggested sending delegates to the League of Nations conference who were interested in peace.

In the absence of the secretary Mrs. Vail Deadwyler, Mrs. Harlan P. Farr was appointed secretary pro tem.

The report of the nominating committee was read by Mrs. George Gaines, chairman. The annual report read by Mrs. T. O. Tabor Jr. was splendid and the whole regime will find everything in order and ready for business to be resumed according to the former standards of the club.

Tea was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Clyde Teasley, chairman.

SPEAKING of PROGRESS, let's do some PROGRESSING!

You that are old enough to remember, do you recall the time that $25 per week was a salary not to be spoken of lightly; when the fervent wish of the South was 10-cent cotton; when, if we had a year in college we were well educated; when a 10-cent cigar was luxury? Of course you do. We have gone a long way since then.

There are more of us who know about luxury than ever before. We have traveled more, read more, thought more, gone to school more. All of us have shared in these things. Some of us did not get into the easy and big money, but for ten years all of us have had shorter hours, steadier incomes, more schooling, more luxuries.

In the field of business, we have learned mass production, and mass production means lower prices. It is a sign of real progress when enough articles of value, enough of the better things of life, can be made to fit the pocketbooks of the whole people. It is a sign of real progress when the wheels of industry are kept moving, and people are kept employed.

Taking all this into consideration, High's has prepared a sale that makes for REAL PROGRESS . . . giving plain good people like you and ourselves the really better things, giving the factories business to keep going, and the people work. And LOOK WHAT IT HAS DONE TO THE PRICES OF THE HUNDREDS OF THINGS YOU NEED RIGHT NOW!

IN ALL ATLANTA AND GEORGIA THERE IS NO EVENT THAT COMPARES WITH HIGH'S ANNUAL JUNE PROGRESS SALE!

HERE are the last 3 pages of our 8-page circular distributed throughout Atlanta and vicinity concerning this amazing one-day sale! A sale that is a masterly demonstration of High's supremacy in value-giving . . . conceived with the idea of having the greatest number of people in Atlanta and Georgia share in this great outpouring of sound and timely values!

We have prepared for 50,000 new customers tomorrow, and the profits which we give up will be more than made up by the enhanced good will of our regular patrons and the hosts of new ones we expect to gain in this extraordinary one-day event.

Anticipate your needs for all summer . . . go over all departments in these pages and CHECK YOUR ITEMS to facilitate your shopping when you get to High's tomorrow.

High's will be open as usual at 9 o'clock tomorrow, and will close promptly at 5:30 P. M. Lay all engagements aside and plan to be on hand . . . and to make sure that nothing will keep you away, be here when our doors open.

Our sales force has been doubled for this day, so you'll be waited on promptly and efficiently, no matter how great the crowds.

If you LIVE OUT OF TOWN, no matter how distant, you will save more than enough to pay for your trip.

Because our all-absorbing idea is to get you in the store, we will be unable to fill mail, telephone or C. O. D. orders.

COME TOMORROW . . . DON'T MISS THIS GREAT ONCE-A-YEAR ONE-DAY PROGRESS SALE!

ADVERTISING PAYS!

The Kellogg Company of Battle Creek, Michigan, Has Long Been One of the Largest and Most Consistent Newspaper Advertisers. Every Year for the Last Twenty Years, Their Sales Have Increased With Amazing Regularity. 1930 Was No Exception.

AND EVERY YEAR THEIR NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING EXPENDITURES HAVE ALSO INCREASED---INCLUDING 1931.

In the Letter to The Atlanta Constitution, Reproduced Herewith, W. K. Kellogg, Chairman of the Board of the Kellogg Company, One of the World's Largest Manufacturers of Ready-to-Eat Cereals, Showed His Company's Faith in Newspapers and Business By Announcing Increased Expenditures for 1931.

Kellogg Knows Newspapers as Few Advertisers Do. Every Schedule Is Placed On a Basis of Proved Sales Results. And When They Select The Atlanta Constitution to Carry All-Bran and Rice Krispies, They Show Their Confidence in the Most Productive Advertising Medium in Atlanta.

The Constitution,
Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen:

Our company has followed the flow of merchandising very closely during 1930. This study convinces us that underlying conditions are sound -- and that increased newspaper advertising will pay us.

We have used the columns of your newspaper steadily for several years and are confident that The Constitution has been an important factor in the Kellogg success in the Atlanta market. So far this year it has been our pleasure to send you schedules for Kellogg's All-Bran and Rice Krispies, in addition to a test campaign on the latest Kellogg product - Whole Wheat Biscuit.

You probably know that the Kellogg Company is spending more money on their advertising for 1931 than ever before. We have made this move in spite of the depression with the firm belief that advertising is one thing that will give the Kellogg Company an increase in sales during the current year.

Yours very truly,
W. K. Kellogg

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

THE THEATER IN NEW YORK

BY PERCY HAMMOND

NEW YORK, June 6.—Miss Texas Guinan writes from her bleak garret in Le Havre, bidding us to bear with equanimity the affronts offered to her and her belles by the churlish French government. That they were blackballed and for a time prohibited from entering the exclusive precincts of Paris is, says she, not a reason for calling out the militia. She requests that no avenging swords be unsheathed and that we allow her to adjust, in her own way and without recourse to arms, the international difficulties precipitated by the crisis. This, no doubt, we shall do, since it is recommended by La Guinan, whose feats in diplomacy have made her several New York night clubs heavens of tranquil dissipation, while other institutions of the kind were centers of disturbance.

Miss Guinan's message desires to rectify the impression that the polite republic's incivilities were due to the visit in France of an odious embassy of ill-bred, tactless and quarrelsome American burgesses. "They," she says, "have nothing to do with my martyrdom, since their conduct has been exciting, amusing and exactly what their hosts expected. If they had behaved themselves otherwise the French would have been disappointed. They shut the door on me," she continues, "for economic reasons, fearing that I would extract a franc or two from the traveling suckers and spendthrifts, and return to America with my purse full of sous." Mr. Congreve, whose "The Way of the World" was excavated last week by the Players' in their annual benefit to themselves and the classics, was less complacent about the habits of touring mayors. "I wonder," says Walter Hampden as Mirabell, "that there is not an act of parliament to save the credit of the nation and prohibit the exportation of fools."

The drama, though suffering less than other more important industries in this period of poverty, is sick from want of nutritious patronage. Its bankers and producers have done all within their pigmy powers to restore it to its proper place as an investment and a recreation. They have reduced tariffs, cut wages and throttled the ticket speculators in a manner of speaking. They are doing everything, it seems, to promote the business of the stage—except to present plays that are entitled to prosper. They employ good actors, good directors, good press agents and good scenery; but they are unable to find enough good dramatists to meet what once was known as the demand. The little group of gratifying American playwrights—Miss Rachel Crothers, George Kaufman, Sidney Howard, Phillip Barry, Marc Connelly, Arthur Richman, Robert E. Sherwood and the placidly spectacular, over-wrought and over-estimated Eugene O'Neill cannot manufacture real entertainment in quantities sufficient to fill the numerous Broadway stages and auditoriums.

In the remote event that an Erlanger, a John Golden, a Gilbert Miller, a George C. Tyler, or a Shubert should ask me what to do in the present predicament my embarrassment would be complete. However, I might tell them that many of their theaters are inhospitable, ill-ventilated and uncomfortable huts, few improvements having been made in their accommodations since the days of Thespis and his Pullman barouche. That counsel, being unavailing, I would add that in the prevalent famine of dramatists it might be a good plan to go back to the authors who wrought successfully in the near past. To take the vivid works of Augustus Thomas, Bronson Howard, Clyde Fitch, Oscar Wilde, Pinero, Henry Arthur Jones, Alfred Sutro and Bernard Shaw—to shatter them to bits and reassemble them in modern plays closer to our heart's desire.

If I were either of the Messrs. Shubert, for instance, I should submit the manuscripts of Augustus Thomas' "Arizona" or "In Mizzouri" to Rachel Crothers, George Abbott, John Golden, Austin Strong, Winchel Smith and Chester Erskine, and order them to make a new play of it. "Here," I should proceed, "are Clyde Fitch's 'The Truth' and 'The Girl with the Green Eyes,' Bronson Howard's 'The Henrietta' and 'Aristocracy,' Washington Irving's 'Rip Van Winkle,' Ibsen's 'Ghosts' and 'In a Balcony,' written by one of the roles in 'The Barretts of Wimpole Street.'" What up-to-date changes would Mr. Abbott or Miss Crothers make in any of these hits of another generation? Give them the characters and the plots of "The Virginian," "The Girl of the Golden West," or "Lady Windermere's Fan," and they might, by altering the dialogue and adding pep and pastogeography to the action, decant old wines from new bottles. I recommend the experiment to Crosby Gaige, Dwight Deere Wiman, Al Woods, William A. Brady and other producers whose heart is in the welfare of the drama.

Hilarious Farce, Sweet Romance, Stark Drama on Screens

Talking pictures to suit every type of audience are to be found on Atlanta's screens this week. They range from craziest farce, through tender sentiment to gripping drama. Upper left shows those two notorious nuts, Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey, with Dorothy Lee, as they appear in "Cracked Nuts," at the Capitol. Upper right gives you a glimpse of Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter in that lovely romance, "Daddy Longlegs," which is the screen farce at the Fox. The lady who has been interrupted by a male hand on her shoulder, at the center left, is Bebe Daniels, who is in "Maltese Falcon," story of dark intrigue and breath taking action, at the Georgia. Center right shows Louis Wolheim and Mary Astor who are in "The Sin Ship" at the Rialto. Lower left is from "Gun Smoke," at the Cameo Monday and Tuesday with Richard Arlen and Mary Brian. And lower right is from the first run "The Spy," with Neil Hamilton and Kay Johnson, which will be shown at the Grand the latter half of the week.

Nancy Carroll Next On Bill At DeKalb

Nancy Carroll will open the week's program at the DeKalb theater Monday in her latest screen offering, "Stolen Heaven." Supported by Philip Holmes, Nancy offers what is termed a real hit.

Wednesday will bring Charles Bickford and Kay Francis in "The Passion Flower."

Thursday and Friday a double feature program will be offered, presenting Conrad Nagel and Genevieve Tobin in "Free Love," and Warner Baxter in "Renegades."

Saturday "The Utah Kid," a real western, will be shown.

S. R. O.

by Ralph T. Jones

Date for the presentation of Atlanta's annual Kiddie Revue, at the Fox theater, is drawing near. Director Senia Solomonoff and his cast—some four hundred or more—are working with inspiration and perspiration. It is a safe bet that the result, when seen on the Fox stage the week of June 20, will prove worth all the effort they are giving.

These annual Kiddie Revues, put on through the co-operation of the Atlanta Masonic Club and Loew's, Inc., have come to mean a lot to Atlanta and Atlantans. All parties concerned make a lot of sacrifices, but it's worth it. For it is a benefit for the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children. The sum realized each year goes a long way toward providing all the milk the little patients at the hospital can drink. And crippled, weak or undernourished little bodies, everybody knows, can use lots of milk to the best advantage in the world.

It's a cause that means a lot, both to the individual and to the future citizenship of our beloved state and city. It's a cause that everyone of us is proud and thankful for opportunity to contribute to and to serve.

Turning from thoughts of crippled children to a very different classification of humanity, the most beautiful girls of Atlanta have entered the beauty contest, being conducted by the Capitol theater and this newspaper. The winner, as you doubtless know, will enter the international beauty contest at Galveston. And, judging by the glimpses this column has enjoyed of the local entrants, 'most any of 'em may be picked. It all depends upon the personal tastes of the judges in pulchritude.

Just as a favor, don't forget that the lovely girls will parade in all their beauty on the stage of the Capitol theater this week. How many days it will require to finish the judging isn't yet known. So, to be safe, you'd better pay your visit to the Capitol early in the week.

Because they tore all the hoardings down in front of the Paramont don't jump to conclusions. The most authentic reports available are that there is little chance of an early reopening of this theater. The billboards that decorated the front for two or three weeks were, it seems, objected to by someone or other and it was discovered that they violated some overlooved ordinance among the city statutes. That's all. Rumors about reopenings all originated in removal of the billboards and the natural imaginative reports that arose thereby.

For two weeks I've been wanting to say something and have, someway, overlooked each opportunity. Got it this time, though.

Saw a really remarkable production of "The Play's the Thing," the Ferenc Molnar comedy that was translated by P. G. Wodehouse. By the Little Theater group of the Studio Club. At the Woman's Club auditorium.

And want to write a word of congratulation to Janet Mills Shepherd, the director of the production. You know, after all praise is given to actors, scene designers and painters, stage managers, etc., the one individual who is chiefly responsible for success or failure of any play is the director. And most frequently forgotten when the honors are given around afterward.

So here, belated but none the less sincere, is a chaplet of palms and laurel leaves for Janet Mills Shepherd. May she always find joy in the realization of her hopes and ambitions.

Sez You—"Don't you wish you had—?" something or other.
Sez Me—"Keeps me too busy being thankful for what I've got to waste time wishing for what I haven't."

To a large segment of Atlanta's population this is the most important week in the annals of picturedom. For it is the first release week for the first of Bobby Jones' golf short subjects. The picture is showing in Atlanta at the Fox, having opened its run yesterday. There is no guarantee, but Manager Carter Barron confidently expects every golfer who sees it to cut at least three strokes off his handicap after seeing the picture. It is called "The Putter."

And if you want to know the name of the finest club, organization or whatnot of the sort in Atlanta, of the group that has worked out the best set of by-laws ever properly moved, seconded and approved, ask any member of the "Two-Fifty Club." That's cryptic, but club members will understand.

'6-Cylinder Love' And 'The Spy' Show at Grand

Two First-Run Offerings Divide Week at Downtown House.

Once more Loew's Grand theater is presenting two outstanding first-run pictures at popular prices. Commencing Monday will be "Six Cylinder Love" with Edward Everett Horton, Spencer Tracy and Una Merkel. "The Spy," a dramatic play including in its cast Neil Hamilton, Kay Johnson and John Halliday will be shown the last three days of the week.

El Brendel, the Swedish comedian, also has one of the leading roles in "Six Cylinder Love." Again he proves his ability as one of the most popular actors of the talking screen. The author of the picture was Anthony McGuire, who was likewise the producer of the stage play of the same name.

"Six Cylinder Love" is a comedy of matrimony and love. It concerns the affairs of two married couples living next door to one another. One family purchases a high priced car, well beyond their means and when they finally determine they will be unable to pay for it they seek to sell it to their friends down the street.

A high-powered salesman, a deluge of sparkling lines and a clever plot add to "Six Cylinder Love" and make it one of the funnier pictures of the year. Aside from the well-known principals in the play, all of whom have appeared in leading roles during the last few months, are William Collier Sr., and Bert Roach, both highly regarded actors. The picture was directed by Thornton Freeland, who made "Three Live Ghosts," and "Whoopee," comedies of last year.

"The Spy" is a story of the great Russian revolution and of the days and episodes under the present red regime. It's author was Ernest Paschal, who is known by his former plays, "Interference," "The Dark Swan" and "The Marriage Bed."

All of the scenes of the story are laid in Russia and the producers have been careful to keep their picture within the true tone of the country, now in the throes of one of the greatest experiments in the history of civilization. Rene Fulop-Miller, one of the best informed men on prevailing conditions in soviet Russia, was employed to handle the technical end of the picture. Kay Johnson and Neil Hamilton are said to accomplish some of the best bits of acting of their careers.

Wheeler and Woolsey in Laugh Riot, 'Cracked Nuts' at Capitol

Craziest Comedians in Funniest Production. Judging of Beauty Contest Entrants on Stage Early in Week.

The craziest, funniest, most rib-busting farce ever produced on the screen is holding forth at the Capitol theater this week. It is "Cracked Nuts," with Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey and those two, already known as the most ridiculously funny men in the pictures, are even funnier, crazier and more fantastic this time than ever before. And they are ably and comically supported by a splendid cast of players headed by the adorable, lovable, cuddleable Dorothy Lee.

Added attraction is lent to the Capitol program this week by the beauty contest, staged by The Constitution and the theater management to choose a girl who will be sent to the International Beauty contest at Galveston wearing the colors of "Miss Atlanta" or "Miss Georgia" as the case may be. During the early part of the week, at least, entrants in this contest will parade across the stage daily in elimination contests until the winner is finally selected. How long this will take is uncertain, making it advisable to visit the Capitol in the early part of the week.

The story of "Cracked Nuts" is so foolish that it really doesn't matter. It is all about a rich young man, Bert Wheeler, who, in order to prove to the disapproving aunt of the girl he loves, Dorothy Lee, that he does amount to something, uses his fortune to back a revolution in the kingdom of Dorania. However, before the revolution gets under way, another traveler, played by Bob Woolsey, plays craps with the king of Dorania and not only takes his shirt, but his kingdom and his best girl, too. Result is that Wheeler is required to kill Woolsey with a bomb. They engage in battles and duels—battles and duels of unbelievably funny type—until the bomb explodes prematurely, uncovers a huge oil well, the aunt forgives and happiness looms for all concerned.

It really doesn't matter about the plot, however. It is Wheeler, Woolsey and the picture. The greatest laugh riot since laughing was invented. Gags galore and an hour and a half of fun that has rarely been approached in the annals of entertainment.

In addition to the feature picture and the beauty contest, the Capitol bill also offers a splendid list of short screen subjects, including newsreel, scenic travel feature and a short comedy.

All Kiddie Revue Cast Called This Morning

Director Senia Solomonoff has issued a call for the entire cast of the Kiddie Revue, to be presented at the Fox theater the week of June 20, to assemble at the Shrine ballroom, Fox theater, at 10 o'clock this Sunday morning. Entrance is from the main lobby of the theater.

This is the first time the entire cast has been called together at one time. Different groups of the more than 400 young performers have been drilled and rehearsed separately, but now the production has progressed to the point where the shaping of all groups into a cohesive whole must be done. For this reason it is important that every member of the cast be present this morning.

The revue is to be given under the auspices of the Atlanta Masonic Club as a benefit for the milk fund for the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

All-Around Feature Program Found at Fox Theater for Week

Janet Gaynor, Warner Baxter in "Daddy Longlegs" on Screen—Bobby Jones Golf Feature—"Topical Tunes" on Stage.

A program of marvelous fascination is playing at the Fox theater this week. Every item, feature, stage show, overture, short subjects and special attractions contain a lure that ought to make records all week at the box office.

The screen feature is that adorable romance, "Daddy Longlegs," with the beloved Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter in the principal roles. A picture with an appeal to men, women and every member of every family.

The stage show is "Topical Tunes," undoubtedly one of the best ideas the stage studios of Fanchon & Marco have ever produced. With the greatest line of Sunkist Beauties of them all and with principals who stand at the top of the vaudeville profession.

The first of the Bobby Jones golfing short subjects is to be seen as an added attraction. This is titled "The Putter," and, in addition to carrying an explanation and lesson in putting by Bobby himself, is a clever comedy with Joe Brown and other famous stars included in the cast.

The short comedy is an "Our Gang" with "Skippy" Cooper in the leading part. The overture by Enrico Leide and his Fox concert orchestra is something especially thrilling of a surprise nature, while Al Evans has new popular songs for his "chorus of 5,000" to sing to the organ accompaniment.

All in all a marvelous bill of entertainment.

The story of "Daddy Longlegs" is one of the most appealing romances ever told. It is the story of a little orphan girl who is befriended by a mysterious benefactor who sends her to a girls' college and whom she knows only as "Daddy Longlegs." How she falls in love with the uncle of one of her schoolmates and how a young undergraduate, loving her, interferes in her romance, provides the suspense. And, at the end, when she meets her "Daddy Longlegs" and discovers his real identity, there is a punch and a smile that sends every audience away tenderly laughing through the memory of tears.

Principals in the stage show include Ted and Ad Waldman, in a comedy musical act; the Alexander Sisters, rhythm tap dancers; Niles Marsh in "Feminine Fancies," Bob and Eula Burroff in ballroom dancing, Don Carroll and Dorothy Thomas, famous vaudeville team and, of course, the Sunkist Beauties in all their glory.

Cameo Presents Three Pictures Of Extra Value

In accordance with the Cameo policy of only bringing the big pictures back, starting this week they will only make three changes per week instead of four. This will enable the hundreds of people who have had to stand in line Saturdays to view the same picture either Friday or Saturday.

Monday and Tuesday, Richard Arlen and Mary Brian in "Gun Smoke" will give an idea of what happens when modern "tough guys" from the east meet the hard-riding men from the west in a duel to the finish.

The James Oliver Curwood story, "River's End," with Charles Bickford and Evalyn Knapp, will be featured Wednesday and Thursday.

Friday and Saturday is crowded with action and romance in all units of the program. Buddy Roosevelt in "The Cheyenne Kid" as the quick-thinking, fast-acting cowboy. Buzz Barton and Robert Frazer in another episode of "The Mystery Trooper" will give the audience an opportunity of again trying to guess who the "Mystery Trooper" really is.

Rialto Offers Something New, "The Sin Ship"

Talking picture precedent is shattered in Radio Picture's nautical melodrama, "The Sin Ship," coming to the Rialto theater this week.

"The first new thing since the birth of talkies," advance notices declare.

For the first time in talkie history the handsome hero fails to win the girl as custom ordains. There is no handsome hero in the picture. The result is one of the most original and powerful productions to date.

Mary Astor portrays the girl, thrown by circumstances into the grip of the captain and crew of a South Seas tramp schooner. The wide sea is between her and all human aid . . . there is nothing but her own sex and appeal as protection against . . .

Louis Wolheim, the captain, a brutish "lady killer."

Ian Keith, the crook who got her aboard.

And a motley crew whose finer emotions consist of callouses.

That this tremendously gripping story ends in a beautiful climax in spite of the grim characters involved, marks it as an artistic masterpiece of performance and direction. It is a great feather in the cap of Wolheim, for he directed as well as played one of the featured roles.

Varied Programs Show at Buckhead

The Buckhead theater offers a variety of entertainment to its patrons this week. Helen Twelvetrees in an extremely dramatic part will be seen and heard in "Millie" on Monday and Tuesday. Robert Ames, John Halliday, Lilyan Tashman and Joan Blondell furnish excellent support. As an added attraction Graham McNamee will report for Universal sound news.

The picture for Wednesday is "Men on Call," featuring Edmund Lowe and Mae Clarke. It is a story of the United States coast guard and is filled with action, thrills and romance. Selected short subjects complete the bill.

"East Lynne," one of the outstanding pictures of the year, will be shown Thursday and Friday. Ann Harding, Clive Brook and Conrad Nagel portray the leading characters and are supported by a cast of well-known players.

"The Lost Zeppelin," a gripping story of strange and thrilling adventure in the air, and of overpowering love, is the attraction for Saturday. It boasts of a distinguished cast headed by Conway Tearle, Virginia Valli and Ricardo Cortez. As added attractions there will be the eighth episode of "Finger Prints," and a big stage show featuring Rustic Waters at 3 in the afternoon and 8 at night.

Empire Theater Has Strong Program

If the Empire theater this week establishes a new record for attendance it will be because of the unusually strong program of all-talking features at the popular Georgia avenue and Crew street community theater. For Monday and Tuesday Manager Alpha Fowler will bring back that superb human drama, "East Lynne," starring Ann Harding, with a supporting cast including Clive Brook, Conrad Nagel, Cecilia Loftus and David Torrence.

The private lives of America's favorites will be exposed on Wednesday with the offering of "The Royal Family of Broadway," with Ina Claire, Fredric March, Mary Brian and others.

Thursday's double feature finds "Brothers" with Bert Lytell, Dorothy Sebastian and William Morris taking care of one portion of the program, while there's fun galore for the last half of the twin attraction in "Finn and Hattie," with Leon Erroll, Mitzi Green, Zasu Pitts, Lilyan Tashman and Regis Toomey.

Those nuts, busting loose again in the newest, dizziest riot of slam bang comedy, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, will whoop 'em up in "Hook, Line and Sinker." This is to be the attraction on Friday. "Riders of the North," Bob Custer's second all-talking western, will be seen Saturday. In this thriller an interesting story, vividly told, deals with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and their methods used in exposing the operation of a band of fur thieves.

Huge Magnet.

One of the largest surgical electromagnets in America, unique because it is silent, is now in use at a hospital in St. Louis for removing steel splinters from eyes. Dr. P. I. Chandeyssen, designer of the magnet, said its success is certain, as previously magnets of that type disconcerted patients because of the noise when the current was turned on.

Two Big Stage Attractions of the Week

The upper group are Sunkist Beauties, appearing as modern models in the Fanchon and Marco idea, "Topical Tunes," which is on the Fox stage for the week. Below is shown the company of Caesar Rivoli, whose act, "Melodies of Yesterday," headlines the R. K. O. vaudeville program at the Georgia.

Marie Dressler, Off Screen, Vital Enthusiast for Life!

BY MOLLIE MERRICK.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 6.—Marie Dressler off the screen is entirely different from the Marie of the films and the stage, the slapstick comedienne whose every move is a scream of laughter. She has a dignity, a mellow tolerance which belongs to three-score years of living. And she possesses an enthusiasm which is a part of gay and inexperienced youth.

She is 60 years old and has more real vim, vigor and vitality than any twenty-year-old.

She weighs in the neighborhood of 180 and her body is as graceful and as limber as a ballet dancer's.

She has been on the stage since she was 12 years of age and she has more genuine enthusiasm and eagerness in her work than a beginner in the game.

She has endured all the hardships of old-time trouping and of a rough-and-tumble comedienne's existence and her skin is as soft as a baby's and almost wrinkleless.

Life Worth Living!

She has suffered every sorrow and grief known to human beings and she still finds life immensely worth living.

She has known two overwhelming peaks of success, on the stage and on the screen, and she is as unspoiled as any young seeker after fame.

She has the wisdom which comes with three-score years of living and she speaks the language and thinks the thoughts of youth.

She spares neither her energy nor her time and she never tires or grows weary.

She is ageless, mentally, physically and spiritually.

Marie Dressler refuses to allow herself to think that she is growing old. She simply ignores the matter. There is no attempt at false youth. Marie is utterly free from the pathetic and tragic efforts which so many women make to keep a youngness which has left them.

"I'm wearing pajamas now around the house," she laughed one day, "you should see me. But they're so convenient and easy to get around in."

The surprising thing is that Marie wasn't one of the first to adopt the freedom of pajamas. Because when Marie moves, she moves with the speed and grace of under-twenty. She runs upstairs. She walks with the quick, light step of a dancer. She can stand on one foot and kick the other higher than her reddish-brown head. She can lean over and touch the palms of her hands to the floor without bending her knees and without the slightest muscular effort.

Great Endurance.

She can endure almost unbelievable physical exertion in her pictures. The fight scenes with Wallace Beery in "Min and Bill," the slap-stick antics with Polly Moran in "Caught Short" and "Reducing" were painfully real.

When the director suggested that Marie be careful, she merely chortled, "don't worry about me. What do you think I am, an old woman?"

When Marie was making "Reducing," she spent almost one entire day on her knees under a table while a trick dog ran up her back. In the picture it was scarcely more than a flash and a hearty laugh. But it had to be timed exactly right and was taken over and over again. That night, dressed in black chiffon and pearls, she presided as toastmistress at a dinner.

Many times she leaves the studio at 5:30 or 6 after a day's work before the cameras and dances half the night, the center of the fun of some party.

Her vitality is amazing. The moment she enters a room, you feel its strength. After five minutes' conversation with her you are carried along by a wave of some unexplainable force.

Conserves Vitality.

When Marie is working in a picture she conserves every ounce of her vitality. She arises early and eats a wholesome, substantial breakfast. She is driven to the studio in her car and is always the first one to arrive on the stage, made-up and ready for the day. Marie can drive a car but she doesn't do it. She says that it makes her nervous.

"I have two advantages over the young and beautiful stars in pictures," Marie said one day. "I don't have to worry about my figure and I don't have to worry about looking beautiful. I can put on my makeup in 10 minutes and I can eat anything I please."

Marie loves food, good food, but she is not a large eater. She never touches anything between meals but she eats nourishing and satisfying meals three times each day. She is an excellent cook herself, and likes to concoct new recipes. She enjoys her repasts with the same gusto with which she enjoys every detail of living. But she never overeats.

Before Marion Davies presented her with a portable dressing bungalow as a Christmas gift, Marie sat in her special easy chair on the stage between scenes. She rested and visited with the members of the company and sewed or knitted. Rarely is Miss Dressler idle. She can't bear the monotony of doing nothing.

Door Rarely Closed.

Now, when a scene is finished, she retires to the chaise lounge in the little bungalow. But she takes her friends with her. The door to that bungalow is never closed except for the brief periods when Marie is dressing.

She eats her luncheon in the studio commissary. Her entrance and exit are real processions. It consumes at least 10 minutes for Marie to walk from the front door the few feet to her favorite table. Everyone stops her to talk a moment or merely to say "hello."

She leaves the studio at about 5:30 and goes straight home and to bed. Unless she is having a friend or two for dinner, Marie eats her evening meal in bed. If she has guests, they depart around 9 or 9:30. Then Marie picks up a book and reads until she is ready to fall asleep.

Marie takes no regular exercise. Her daily activity is sufficient to keep her muscles in trim. However, she does depend a great deal upon massage for both physical and mental toning.

Regularly, three times each week, her masseuse spends an hour or two with her in the evenings, massaging and manipulating her entire body. Twice each week she visits her favorite beauty operator who gives her a facial and neck massage.

"There is nothing which relaxes your nerves more completely than a skillful massage," Marie explained. "I don't believe in these violent, painful treatments which bruise your flesh and tire your muscles. The massage which I take is a sort of osteopathic treatment.

"If I am working I always have the masseuse in the evenings so that I can tumble into bed and go to sleep. If I am not working, I sometimes take the treatment in the afternoons and follow it with a good nap."

Dignified, Comfortable Home.

Marie's home represents the regularity of her personality. It is just the sort of home in which you could imagine Marie Dressler living. On the outside it is a dignified, substantial red brick without any frills or furbelows. Inside it is sheer comfort and peace. The colorings of the furniture and draperies are cheerful and subdued.

Her colored Mamie and Jerry, who have lived with her for 17 years, treat her as if she were a child whom they must guard and boss. And she loves it. The people with whom she works, from the front office executives to the property men, look after her comfort and well being. And she appreciates it sincerely. Even though she chortles about not needing any special consideration.

It is utterly impossible to put Marie Dressler on paper, to describe her in words. You can catch one of her many phases. But there are so many of them. She is as versatile mentally off the screen as she is artically on the screen.

She is ageless. She is strong without being domineering. She is utterly feminine without being clinging. She is very decided in her opinions without a trace of intolerance. She gives freely of herself and yet she conserves her strength. She has lived through every human experience without losing her desire and eagerness for further living; she is dynamic and yet repressed.

Just Marie Dressler. A kid of 60.

Returns to Atlanta

Ben Y. Cammack, brother-in-law of Ned E. Depinet, vice president of R-K-O-Pathe, who has returned to Atlanta as branch manager of Universal Pictures Corporation. He was manager here for several years until 1929, when he resigned to make a pleasure tour of European countries.

Universal in the past year, with "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Dracula," "Iron Man," "Lady Surrenders," "Seed," and others, has made a record Mr. Cammack believes will be far outstripped by the 26 pictures the company will produce during the coming year. All of these pictures will be made for first-run theaters. The story material, direction, stars and production values have all been considered with this idea in view, he stated.

West End Opens With "Stolen Heaven"

Monday and Tuesday the West End theater opens with Nancy Carroll and Phillips Holmes in "Stolen Heaven." The story of a small-town girl loose in the city without money or friends, haunted by fear, with death seeming her only way out, she meets Phillips Holmes, a man gone wrong, hunted by the police, and with the proceeds of his first robbery in his pocket. Together they make a pact. They will take their final fling at life in the grand manner until their money is gone and then face death together.

Wednesday's feature is "Oh for a Man," with Jeanette MacDonald and Reginald Denny. A story of a burglar, he comes to steal and stays to love. The gayest comedy of the season. Supported by Marjorie White and Warren Hymer.

Thursday and Friday offers Helen Twelvetrees in "Millie," a story of the right girl who met the wrong man. Saturday closes the week with "Men on Call." Edmund Lowe as the lover who misunderstands and William Harrigan as the captain. Mae Clarke is the girl in the story.

Bebe Daniels in Crime Role In Georgia's 'Maltese Falcon'

Caesar Rivoli's "Melodies of Yesterday" Heads Four-Act Vaudeville Program—Quick Changes and Character Delineation Among Features.

The new show which opened yesterday at Keith's Georgia presents a nice balance in stage and screen entertainment, with Bebe Daniels in "The Maltese Falcon" on the screen and a four-act vaudeville show on the stage, headed by the celebrated protean artist, Caesar Rivoli, in "Melodies of Yesterday."

Romantic San Francisco is the locale for the mystery and thrill in "The Maltese Falcon." A film adaptation of the best-selling novel of the same name, it reveals Bebe Daniels as the mysterious and most amazing Miss Wonderly, enchanting leader of a peculiar band of criminals. It is an adventure role quite different from anything Miss Daniels has ever played before.

In the supporting cast are Ricardo Cortez, Una Merkel, Robert Elliott, Thelma Todd, Walter Long, J. Farrell McDonald and Dudley Digges.

The vaudeville end of the new show is headlined by the recognized peer of all protean artists, Caesar Rivoli. Rivoli, besides having an amazing ability to change costumes so rapidly his change feats seem impossible, is also a character delineator. During the presentation of the act he makes innumerable changes and plays many characters. He is assisted in his act by nine players.

The demainder of the vaudeville program is made up of a trio of acts, including Nelson B. Clifford and Marie Marion, long one of vaudeville's standard comedy turns; Bradford, Crisham and Van Alst, "Somebodies of Song and Danceland," and Ashley Paige in "Tunes and Taps."

Legitimate Stage Chatter

Only Fifteen Plays and Five Music Shows Now on Broadway—"David Belasco Presents" Appears For Last Time on Drama Pages.

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—When Noel Coward's sophisticated comedy, "Private Lives," is sent on tour to the larger cities this fall, it will have Billie Burke and Hugh Sinclair in the leading roles. These are the parts originated by Coward and Gertrude Lawrence, with Otto Kruger and Madge Kennedy replacing them when the Broadway run of the play was extended.

It is expected the Kruger-Kennedy team will tour in a second company of the play, being booked at towns not touched by the Burke-Sinclair duet. Kruger and Miss Kennedy also may take the play on a tour of the south and Pacific coast.

The red-haired Miss Burke appeared as comedienne last winter in "The Truth Game." Sinclair, a young English actor who once was Ina Claire's leading man, has been playing in Shaw's "Getting Married."

"David Belasco Presents" appeared in the columns of drama pages for the last time today with the closing of "Tonight or Never." With the finish of the play also came the end of the Belasco organization. Offices have been closed and the Belasco theater will be leased to other producers. No plans have been made to take "Tonight or Never" on tour next fall.

Closings of this week leave only 15 plays and five musical shows on Broadway. Twenty attractions is a low figure for this time of year. As only a few new arrivals are booked for June and July, it is feared that some time this summer Broadway may offer less than a dozen shows.

Two revues and two plays arrived this week, with the third "Little Show" being the first entrant. It attracted mild reviews from the critics. They confined themselves to unrestrained plaudits for the performance of Beatrice Little. "The Band Wagon," which begins its run with a 12 weeks' buy from the ticket brokers, is the other arrival.

"Unexpected Husband" is billed as "a comedy with 1,004 laughs," but the critics seemed to have missed several hundred of them. Glenn Hunter opened in "A Regular Guy," which is merely a revival of Patrick Kearney's play, "A Man's Man."

The Abbey Players are coming over from Dublin this fall for a Broadway engagement. The last time they visited these shores they caused riots in Boston, New York and Philadelphia by presenting "Playboy of the Western World."

John Emerson has written two new plays, which will give him three on Broadway before Christmas. One is "Cherries Are Ripe," which he wrote with Anita Loos. When it arrives here, it is said, Basil Sidney and Mary Ellis will have the parts played on tour by Rod LaRoque and Vilma Banky.

Jeanette Loff, blonde movie actress, will play opposite Jack Haley in the forthcoming musical comedy, "Free for All." Ethel Barrymore and Jane Cowl both have returned from their tours with high praise for the enthusiastic audiences they encountered in one-night stands.

Tenth Street Offers 'Little Caesar' Next

Monday and Tuesday the Tenth Street theater will open with "Little Caesar," featuring Edward T. Robinson and Doug Fairbanks Jr. This is a drama of the rise of a young gangster to a position as king of all racketeers, in which his ruthless methods, daring escapades and fearless braggadocio make him the most unusual of all screen characters.

Richard Cromwell, Noah Beery and Joan Peers, in "Tolerable David" will be the picture for Wednesday. This is a story of the life of a country boy, played against the appropriate setting of a small town buried in the backwoods.

Ina Claire and Fredric March co-star in Thursday's and Friday's attraction, "The Royal Family," a cross-section view of the intimacies of a great family of the American theater—their lives, loves, temperament, traditions and private life "off-stage."

Saturday brings Conrad Nagle and Sidney Fox in "Bad Sister." In this drama, Sidney Fox plays the role of an ungrateful girl, who refuses the advice of an older sister only to find heartaches and disaster at the end of a wild and reckless life.

FULTON TO OPEN SUMMER SCHOOLS

Fulton county summer schools will open Monday for a six weeks' session of the elementary group and an eight weeks' term in high school.

Knox Walker, elementary supervisor, said that enrollment and classification will begin at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning at North Avenue school in Hapeville, Lakewood, Central Park, Bolton, Lena H. Cox, E. Rivers, E. P. Howell and Alonzo Richardson schools.

Summer school will start Monday at Fulton High school. Nominal fees will be charged for both elementary and high school students, it was said. The county teachers met Saturday to perfect plans for the summer sessions. Between 400 and 500 students are expected to report Monday.

Snap beans is a better name than string beans, for the best up-to-date varieties break more cleanly, leaving no strings.

French Locale For Mystery Play at Alamo

"Sweethearts and Wives," the First National and Vitaphone production playing Monday at the Alamo theater No. 2 is a dramatic mystery with a French locale.

The entire play is laid in a little forsaken inn near LeTouquet in the south of France. It concerns the search and discovery of a diamond necklace that was stolen. This necklace is the final link in a divorce case. The winning and losing of the case depends upon who finds the necklace.

A French maid, played by Billie Dove, the star of the picture; an English divorce detective, played by Clive Brook, two crooks and an English nobleman are all on its trail.

ANY ESKIMO HOME DESIGNATED "IGLOO"

Many textbook writers and movie directors think that "igloo" is the Eskimo term for "snowhouse," says Vilhjalmur Stefansson, famous polar explorer. Actually when an Eskimo speaks of his igloo he may not mean a house of snow. After ten winters in the far north Stefansson defines an igloo simply as "a more or less permanent shelter for man or beast." Popular Science Monthly reports. It may be built of logs, bones, stones, sod, or snow.

GUARDIANS OF THE PEACE.

Elsewhere in this issue is published a detailed account of the brave and intelligent conduct of Sheriff Sid Howell, of Early county, as a result of which he won The Constitution's annual medal and cash award to the Georgia peace officer performing the most meritorious service in line of duty for the 12 months' period ending June 1.

The difference in the nature of the service performed by Sheriff Howell and that rendered by Chief of Police Ben T. Watkins, of Macon, for which he was given the award for the preceding year, illustrates the wide scope of the responsibilities of a peace officer.

While Sheriff Howell in rendering the service for which he was given the award did not face the personal danger which confronted Chief Watkins when he directed the capture of a gang of desperadoes who constituted a grave menace to the peace of his community, his cool and decisive steps in preventing an almost certain lynching was of no less value to the people of his community.

Notified of the perpetration of a heinous crime, the Early county sheriff quickly arrested the guilty party and spirited him away to jail in another county, carefully following a course of action calculated to frustrate any effort at mob violence. Of his own volition he then called a meeting of representatives of every class of citizens in the county, at which plans were laid to safeguard the prisoner when he was brought back for the quick justice which was later meted out to him by the courts.

Such official acts as those of Chief Watkins and Sheriff Howell are shining examples of fidelity to duty to every peace officer in Georgia. It was for the dual purpose of giving due recognition to such outstanding service, and through the resultant widespread publicity to bring to all peace officers in the state a fuller realization of the scope of their duties that The Constitution inaugurated its annual awards.

To that end, the co-operation of every citizen of the state is invited in bringing to light any act of a peace officer whereby the safety of our citizens had been assured, either through the commission of a deed of heroism or through the rendition of service requiring moral bravery and wise decisions.

The Constitution feels honored in being able to present its first two awards to such outstanding public servants as Chief Watkins and Sheriff Howell and earnestly commends their bravery in the face of danger and their conception of the wide scope of their duties and responsibilities to their fellow officers.

TO SEE ATLANTA'S SHAME.

In September the thirty-third national encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans will be held at New Orleans. The itinerary of the New England and eastern states commanderies of the "Naval and Military Order of the Spanish-American War," made up entirely of commissioned officers in that war and including many of the outstanding public and business men of today, has reached us.

Their de luxe special train, returning from the New Orleans encampment, is scheduled in part as follows:

Friday, September 11, arrive Atlanta at 7 a. m. On arrival at Atlanta touring limousines will be in readiness to take us out to Stone Mountain to view the world-renowned Confederate memorial carving. The route takes us through the lovely residential section of Atlanta and is, indeed, an enjoyable trip.

The language, "world-renowned Confederate memorial carving," shows how we have flambuoyantly advertised to the world our ambitious promise to present to it the greatest military memorial of all time.

The press of the nation, editorially and pictorially, has long since fired the imagination of the people with the grandeur of the conception and the completed carving on the granite background. Postcard pictures showing the sculpture in full of the figures of Davis, Lee, Jackson, the colorbearer, etc., have been scattered uncountably over the globe. Interested persons come daily to Atlanta and go to Stone Mountain only to come back shamefaced as what they have seen there. Indeed, many of them resent the fact that our publicity has tolled them into a costly and futile visit.

What, now, are we to show the distinguished officers who served in our Spanish-American War when they come here to get evidence of how nobly a grateful people honor those who served them on bloody fields and incarnadined seas?

It was only by earnest pleading that leading veterans at the reunion at Montgomery, just concluded, were induced to withhold a resolution condemning the mismanagement of the Stone Mountain memorial and withdrawing Confederate veteran sympathy from it. An agreement was reached to await what another year may bring to pass concerning the enterprise.

Now the case of the Stone Mountain memorial is fairly in the hands of the people of Atlanta and Georgia, and the general feeling of the public is that a quick decision should be reached—either to go forward vigorously and complete it, or frankly to abandon it and suffer the consequent shame.

THE WAY TO RICHES.

Severe rebuke for those who see America gone to the economic bowbows is contained in facts and figures presented in an article by Edward S. Martin in the current issue of Harper's Magazine.

Industry may be lagging, cotton and wheat growers suffering because of over-production and millions may be unemployed, but in this writer's opinion, our over-supply of every item needed to make us the richest nation in the world, discredits the pessimists, who cannot see the roseate future through the temporary clouds of depression.

Mr. Martin holds that the country is suffering from certain glaring defects, saying—

It has all kinds of powers—brains, riches, even character—it does not seem able just now to use them in the management of its public business. For this defect it is now taking medicine in large quantities, effective medicine—bad business, unemployment, meteorological calamities like drouth, moral calamities like homicide and robbery, mischances arising out of the wide use of new mechanism, such as the death rate from motor accidents—with all these things the country is struggling. It has tools to work with, it has money, it has extremely competent hands on relief jobs and the heart and the sympathy for such work, particularly if it is for some neighbor outside of our own boundaries.

No better example of the position taken by Mr. Martin could be found than in the present condition of the cotton planters of the south, growing out of the high cost of production, and the lack of intensive cultivation.

Had the saving in production possible through the adoption of modern methods been effected, and our agriculturalists conducted their farms on a live-at-home basis, the south would have been far more prosperous now than it is.

The broad stretches of America offer every opportunity for prosperity and happiness for our people, but unless they tap of the wealth offered by nature in a scientific way, with a minimum of waste and a maximum of efficiency, they can never expect that full fruition of prosperity which is theirs for the taking.

MR. MELLON DIDN'T SAY IT.

A few days ago we commented upon the failure of Secretary Mellon, in his address on business depressions to the international bankers in conference, to discuss the relation of the government's "enforcement" policy to the current ills and losses of the country, and to indicate a change of policy as a sure way to tax relief.

Thereupon a correspondent sent us from the circular of a leading New York bank an extract purporting to give what Mr. Mellon recently said in an address to the foreign bankers, but which was not reported in the press.

The extract was this:

"We need a modification of the Volstead Act. Such a plan would open the way to the employment of a great industrial army. Beer, alone, would not only open the breweries, requiring increased employment, but would also increase transportation for railroads, revive hotels, theaters, and other places for entertainment, and build up real estate values and rentals and public utilities. The farm would benefit because of the raising of prices of grain and malt, and thereby have need for additional help. Modern equipment and repair work would be in order to overtake the depletion of years of idleness. Cooperage work would revive and become practically a new industry; and trucking necessities and the erection of warehouses would employ many additional thousands. The courage of the people would revive. Last, but not least, the great government expense to enforce a law regulating personal habits could be diverted to the completion of the liquidation of our national debt, reducing taxes, and, perhaps, through that lead to a more liberal consideration of the foreign debts. The wheels of industries abroad in that event would then be started, and a building up of our foreign trade would soon be apparent."

It turns out that Mr. Mellon did not make those remarks, but that they were the ideas of the banking house in New York, incorporated in its comments upon the Mellon address, and erroneously putting in quotations as coming from Secretary Mellon, the bank's own views.

Whatever Mr. Mellon may think, had he made this statement he would have been put crosswise with President Hoover and perhaps other leaders of the administration in which Mr. Mellon occupies so salient a position. Doubtless, in his usual business sanity, he does harbor those identical thoughts about the deplorable fruits the country is increasingly reaping from decreasingly enforced Volsteadism. He could not, however, give them the air without first "taking the air" himself from his seat in the president's cabinet, notwithstanding that such a policy would be a sure way out of the treasury deficit, and an assurance of tax reduction.

It is another conspicuous example of how political expediency obstructs truth and makes men silent when there is a strong call for candor and courage.

But as things relating to the liquor problem grow worse and the people awaken to its accumulating ravages and perils, the muzzles will be torn off and courageous statesmen will take hold of the problem and solve it without fanaticism.

NO MORE ALIENS NEEDED.

The report comes from Washington that for the first time in 300 years more persons are emigrating from this country than are coming into it. Some alien-allied citizens are deploring that fact when every loyal American should be applauding it.

When 6,000,000 of our workers are unemployed and the prospect for their full recall to labor none too brilliant and proximate, we are certainly under no obligation to welcome the hungry labor hunters from the other depressed countries of the globe. The government has done well to advise our consuls abroad to be wary in granting immigrant visas so that as few as possible may be received here who probably, on not finding quick jobs, would become public charges. That is about the most substantial thing the administration has done to minimize unemployment.

There obtained in this country for a long time a theory that the United States must be the great eleemosynary asylum for the oppressed of the whole world. But in present conditions that notion no longer appeals and our highest duty to our own people is to refuse to make this nation a charity ward for the depressed of an economically chaotic European continent. We have economic chaos enough right here at home to occupy all of our curative skill and powers.

No matter how "good citizens" the millions in Europe who want to come hither would make, let them stay at home and show their good citizenship capacities there. Before this country again feels a scarcity of labor it may be necessary to shut off all immigration for a term of years. "Charity must begin at home."

THE TARIFF RACKETEERS.

The Hoover-Grundy tariff act has had at least one popular effect that may prove beneficial to the country. It seems to have awakened many of the leaders of "big business," so-called, to the truth that the whole economic structure of the nation should not be based upon special favors to one class of the national industries.

Recent statements made in public addresses and interviews of such business executives plainly show that the popular discontent with the tariff preferences and subsidies is justified and that release from them is a condition precedent to any general recovery of prosperity.

There is a just line of protection to American industries subject to competition with products of foreign countries where cheap labor and low standards of living give the foreign producers cost advantages over American similar producers. No loyal American of whatever party persuasion objects to a protective tariff being held to that line of justice and equalization.

The Hoover-Grundy tariff is not such a measure of justice and equalization. It is a gross act of excessive taxation upon the consumers of the nation in the profiteering interest of a class of goods producers who are reliable "fat" contributors to republican campaign chests. To that partiality and excess taxation the people are now strongly aroused and are demanding a new deal in the interest of the common man instead of the tariff-bred racketeer. That will be the big issue of 1932.

A SENATOR'S LOGIC.

It is insisted by Senator Caraway that if the farmers of the nation in the wheat, corn and cotton belts are induced to limit acreage and crop outputs the effect will be "to starve people off the farms and into the cities to live off charity."

One acquainted with the economic facts of the past decade will find it hard to follow Senator Caraway along the line of his pessimism. It is a fact that cannot be rubbed off the record that overproduction of crops to be thrown upon shrinking markets of the world had the most weighty effect in depressing the economic condition of our own people. As a consequence, thousands upon thousands of farmers were leaving the farms for years before the Wall Street crash of October, 1929. In the senator's own state of Arkansas 44 of the 75 counties lost population between 1920 and 1930—all of them rural counties.

The fact is that sane men cannot be expected to stick on farms that will not return to them a living support. It is foolish to expect them to bend their backs, break their hearts, and sink into pauper graves to support a tradition of "agricultural prosperity."

Of course they are going to leave the farms that it does not pay to cultivate and move to towns and cities where they can hope for labor and a living.

To increase acreages at super costs and grow crops that fail to pay the expense of production is no wise plan of restoring prosperity to the farmers or to the people of the nation at large. Senator Caraway must hunt some more practical plan of "farm relief."

By reading both weather and political reports President Hoover will learn that the west is hot territory that a fat man should shun.

"Sunny Jim" Watson is in retirement, rubbing alcohol on the sunburn that Pat Harrison inflicted on him down at Biloxi.

Pinchot may keep Hoover from a unanimous renomination. It is hard to see how that could please anybody but Pinchot.

Evidently the French police thought Tex Guinan and her girls couldn't show them anything different. So what was the use?

The republicans are taking up the British idea that "a public debt is a public blessing." That's a curious reversal of form, if you ask us.

Professor Piccard having survived his ten miles up and down flight, very wisely says "never again."

America wins the British open golf championship again, which fact is ceasing to be news.

What lots of folks seem to need "is a good five-cent glass of beer!"

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

Enlisting Art and Genius To Glorify Southern History and Traditions.

That was a most unusual and intriguing luncheon meeting that Frank Neely, general manager of Rich's, Inc., convened in one of the dining rooms of the famous firm on Friday postnoon. A few less than a hundred guests, including the outstanding civic leaders of the city, men and women who are at the head of the principal cultural organizations of Atlanta, were assembled at the decorated and bountifully supplied tables.

It was what an informed observer might have called an elite entente of the exemplars of that "Atlanta Spirit" which has become proverbial over the nation as the descriptive of our people's enthusiasm and enterprise.

A list of "those present" would import to any person of intelligence in Georgia that the company represented a micro-cosmos of this Gate City of the South.

* * * *

Truly Rich, and No Pun.

"Well, what was it all about?" some curious one may ask.

In the first place, all seasoned Atlantans know that the Rich brothers opened their store in this city away back yonder in 1867, and that from that pioneer planting it has continued, without an intermission, to grow until today it occupies a mammoth building in a most eligible spot in the city's heart and is known far and wide over Dixie as one of the most perfect and popular department establishments in the entire south.

The founders lived industriously and honorably, died deeply deplored by their fellow citizens, and left worthy heirs and heritages.

It was in full following of the spirit of those admirable men that Mr. Neely called the Friday assemblage and explained to them another of the altruistic and public welfare enterprises of the establishment of which he is the starred major domo.

To tell the new thing that he revealed will require another section of this article to make it fully appreciated.

* * * *

To Illustrate the Great South.

Sometime ago Rich's, Incorporated, staged a "Southern Literature" exposition for the purpose of informing thousands who eagerly attended it of the extent and riches of the contributions of southern men and women to the literature of America.

They assembled examples of those works of genius, humor, folk lore and historic value which constitute in themselves a distinct cult within the general cult of the nation. There is something peculiar, sui generis, redolent of the soil and the fragrant atmosphere of the south, that only a son or daughter "to the manor born" can import into a composition and embalm in a printed page.

All critics of impartial judgment have recognized and signalized that indigenous quality. It is the spiritus vitae of the wierd tales and hypnotic verses of Edgar Allen Poe; the humor of Judge Longstreet and Major Thompson and Thomas Nelson Page; the alluring lyrics of Gilmore Sims and Richard Henry Wilde and Paul Hayne; the stately essays of Madame Le Vert, the immortal folk lore of Joel Chandler Harris; the novels of Will Harben, John Fox and Christian Reid, to name no more.

* * * *

Not a Salesmanship Stunt.

The affair was a distinguished success and broadcast a finer knowledge and appreciation of the brilliants of southern literature.

It was not at all an advertising stunt for the book counters of the store. It had a higher and worthier purpose. It was to use the means and facilities of a long established institution to make a fine, unselfish contribution to the appetite of the people for broader and more intimate acquaintance wih southern genius.

In that same spirit of cultural service Mr. Neely announced to us amazed listeners that Rich's, Incorporated, has secured the services of the most celebrated poster-creating artist now living, Mr. Leone Bracker, and allocated $25,000 for the production of a dozen inspirational posters that will illustrate the history, romance and spirit of the Southland. The posters will be distributed free to schools, libraries and public institutions that will use them to educate thrillingly every beholder in the graces and glories of the old and new south.

* * * *

The Artist Told His Dream.

Mr. Bracker was present and when introduced to the company, told with modesty but evident emotion the spiritual dream inspired by this new commission.

He is the creator of many of the most penetrating and persuasive World War posters that stirred the emotions of the nation. He designed those strong religious posters that carried the Presbyterian campaign over the top; and those appealing pictures for the "Near East Relief" work; and a series of domestic scenic posters that were tremendously effective in teaching thrift, savings and insurance duty to millions of the people in every walk of life.

If he gets the suggestions he craves, and he will, and drinks deep of the honorable and prideful spirit of the southern exemplary character with which he will contact, there is no sort of doubt but that Mr. Bracker will produce a dozen pictures that will become the "Twelve Apostles" of a new gospel of southern culture and forward-marching civilization.

* * * *

Art as History's Handmaid.

All down the track of history art has been that muse's handmaiden. It has inspired patriotism, fired the altars of liberty, glorified the fanes of religion, sanctified domestic life, stimulated commerce and education, and dignified labor in field and factory.

It is to such purposes as these in the interest of southern history and culture that Rich's is undertaking this new enterprise in hitching art to the car of history. It is giving freely of its means in return for the fine support the people have given to its growth and business importance. It is a generous recompense and promises to give a new fame to the traditions and prgoressive life of the south.

Every southerner moved with a thought of how this venture may come near to a perfect realization is urged to tell it to Rich's for the consideration of Artist Bracker.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES.

The Religion of a Pearl.

Perhaps there was never a more beautiful description of religion than the one which Jesus gave when He likened His Kingdom "unto a merchant seeking goodly pearls." It is such an attractive picture of the Kingdom. Jesus always made His religion attractive. We do not, So often religion is described as a medicine we have to take in order to get well, or something we have to pay in order to get something we want. In such descriptions Heaven is not religion, but is the reward which we get for being religious. People are exhorted to be good and unhappy now, in order that after death they may be happy. I am quite sure that this will account for the many useless and unattractive people who bear the names of Christian churches. They are simply taking religion as a preventive medicine against the ills of the future, and, of course, with this idea they take only so much as they think will do the work.

Religion a Life.

Contrast this with the Jesus idea of religion. The Kingdom of Heaven is a kind of life you are to live now, but its quality is immortal. Therefore you will live thus after your spirit and body have separated. If one lives where he thinks, then one lives in the thought of God as Father. Yes, he thinks of God in terms of Jesus Christ. That is the kind of God He is, and so this world is our Father's world. All people are God's children, and therefore are brothers. It is a life of love—loving God and men. This kind of life finds its happiness in serving others, and it's joy in giving what one has, and what one is.

Jesus calls this "the pearl of great price," or we might say the pearl-kind of life. It is a life to be lived, not in order to get something else, but for itself. One does not live in order to go to Heaven, but in order to make Heaven on earth. Its conception of immortality is, that one lives this same kind of life after death, in another environment. The merchant bought his pearl not in order to use the pearl to purchase something else. He wanted the pearl for itself. The pearl was the end of his search. Jesus says the Kingdom of Heaven life is the most beautiful, the happiest, and the most abundant life that can be lived here and hereafter.

Yes, you must sell everything else in order to purchase this kind of pearl. You must count that every other motive, or purpose, or prize in life, is not worth so much as this pearl-way of life. That means to subordinate every other desire to the one desire to serve the welfare of others. Self-indulgence of appetites, self-seeking for prominence or power, must all go toward the purchase of this pearl-way of living.

An Abundant Life.

Before we dismiss this as an impracticable life, let us clearly understand what is meant. The parable is beautifully significant. The merchant did not throw away the capital he had, whether of lesser pearls or of money. He invested all of these in the pearl of great price. He needed what he had in order to purchase the pearl. So in this Kingdom life no natural appetite, faculty or power is to be thrown away or suppressed, but all are to be invested in this new way of living. We are to satisfy our appetites, play, go into business, search for power and knowledge, but we are to do all of these things for the sake of the welfare of others. In this kind of a life we are talking about, there is the need for recreation, influence, knowledge, power, in order that one may make his best contribution to the welfare of the world.

Take the realm of business. Nowhere is there so large an opportunity for genuine service to human life as in the splendid pursuits of commerce. Here one may find expression for all for which the Kingdom of Heaven stands. Here he comes into contact with his fellowmen in such varied relationships, and so may find the opportunity for a more complete expression of brotherhood. In the political world one may well have an ambition for the most important places, and the widest power, in order that he may use place and power to make a brighter and a better world for the children of men. With this love for human welfare as the dominant passion, one will need all that he has, and all that he is, to serve his purpose.

Can such a life as this be a happy life? There is still the lurking skepticism that one is still living such a life in order to get something else here or hereafter. I watched the face of a mother the other night when her daughter received her diploma of graduation. All that she had and was had gone into the life of this girl in the past years. I caught the radiant glory in her eyes. Ask her if she wants some reward for all her sacrifices—if she wants to be paid for this kind of life she has lived. Of course she has her reward and her joy in the life of the daughter. Suppose she, and the rest of us, could learn to multiply that joy by all the boys and girls who triumph in these commencement days. Suppose we could make them all "our boys and our girls," in the sense that we invest something in their success. Then expand the circle of our interests and sympathies to embrace the needs, the purposes, and the plans, of millions of other people, so that we could feel the thrill of a million triumphs. It is in this expanding life, including the lives of others, that we approach the ideal which Jesus describes as the Kingdom of Heaven life. It is this love life of service to others multiplied 10,000 times 10,000, which must be the heavenly life beyond the grave.

Our Ailments and How We Can Best Cure and Prevent Them

The Tragedy of Appendicitis

(This is the eighth of a series of articles, prepared under the auspices of the Fulton County Medical Society, for exclusive publication in The Sunday Constitution. They are being published by the society so that the public may have authentic medical information with special reference to health conditions in this section.)

Is appendicitis a serious disease or is it just a hobby of the surgeon? It is often very serious for the patient, unless handled promptly and efficiently by a competent surgeon.

Doctors are better informed and surgeons more efficient today than ever before, but in spite of all their efforts, appendicitis kills four times as many people, before the age of 50, as does cancer.

While some individual surgeons are reporting a low death rate, the general opinion over the whole country seems to show that the death rate is increasing. If this is true, and it can hardly be disproved, the proper question arises, who is to blame? When the disease is confined to the appendix itself, the death rate from operation is practically zero. It is the complications that kill, and the conditions leading to these complications in most cases are the delay in operating and the taking of purgatives. Gangrene of the appendix or bursting of the appendix are the two dangerous complications. The first is due to delay and the second to purgatives.

There is pressing need to remind everyone that delay in the beginning of acute appendicitis is still the deadly sin. In these favored times this appears extraordinary and may sound strange, but it is not beside the mark, even in our larger civilized centers. There are some doctors who still wait for the acute attack to pass before advising operation, even allowing the appendix to burst before their very eyes and then expect the surgeon to perform a miracle.

No Safe Medical Treatment.

Still abroad in the land is a lingering fancy that there is such a thing as medical treatment for appendicitis. The very worst feature of this idea is the giving of purgatives in the acute stage with the false notion of driving out of the intestinal canal something or other which has no relation whatever to the disease. This fallacy constitutes the second deadly sin—purgation. It may be fatal to give any form of purgative at any time in any abdominal pain. This just as surely causes a blow-out as would happen to a thin rubber tube were stretched beyond its capacity.

Do not give morphine or other sedatives for abdominal pain when appendicitis is suspected. It only hides the symptoms and delays a positive diagnosis and proper surgical treatment, thereby increasing the danger to the patient.

Further enlightenment of the laity upon appendicitis is imperatively demanded. Foremost in the cause should come the physician and to his aid must follow boards of health, civic organizations, schools, nurses and druggists. If an annual cancer week and periodic health examinations and tuberculosis clinics, why not an appendicitis week? People must be shown that in appendicitis the "attack" is not the disease, but only the knock at the door; that appendicitis is a continuing process, a going concern, always existing before the attack comes; that one attack does not protect, but that in 98 per cent of the cases it means others to follow, if the first attack does not prove fatal.

The city of Philadelphia, through its health department, has shown commendable zeal in proposing a campaign to reduce the high death rate in acute appendicitis. Bulletins published there show that there was an increase of 18 per cent in the death rate of appendicitis in Philadelphia between the years 1913 and 1923 and that purgatives given to patients with abdominal pain before they reached the hospital were responsible for a large number of deaths. In addition, attention is called to the estimate that in 1926, 17,000 people in the United States died of appendicitis; 12,000 of these were given purgatives, and of this number 11,000 probably died from the results of the purgative.

Delay Increases Danger.

The danger of delay is also stressed. After the first few hours of the attack, the danger increases rapidly with each hour. It would be interesting to know further how many cases of appendicitis died without being operated on. In the so-called clean cases of appendicitis, early in the attack, almost any surgeon can show a record of no deaths. The whole matter, then, is to have the appendix removed before it becomes gangrenous and before it ruptures and to remember that the causes of these complications are practically always due to procrastination and purgatives, twin factors of fatality in appendicitis.

In conclusion, let us summarize the salient points:

1. There is no safe medical treatment for appendicitis.
2. There is a crying need to remind both the medical profession and the laity that delay in the beginning of acute appendicitis is still the unpardonable sin; that the administration of purgatives in any form is the explosive blast that wrecks the works; that once appendicitis, always appendicitis, until the little assasin is removed.
3. Instruction of the laity and renewed concern of the physician chiefly upon the dangers of delay and giving of purgatives, is demanded.
4. Whenever gangrene or bursting of the appendix occurs someone has blundered.
5. The tragedy of appendicitis is that even one human being should die of this disease.

The Background of Foreign Affairs

The Riches of Peru; The Land of the Incas; Two Sides of the Ledger; Three Countries in One.

BY HENRY KITTREDGE NORTON

LIMA, Peru, June 6.—Every schoolboy knows that Peru is a land of fabulous wealth. His data may be a bit confused, but somewhere in the back of his mind is a combination of gold, Incas, Pizarro, murder and sudden death, which establishes the wealth of Peru as something worth fighting for.

The tradition of Peruvian wealth has persisted down to our own day and millions of American money have been poured into the country for the development of these riches. The total runs between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000. The majority of this is in investments in the industries of the country, but a goodly share is in loans to the Peruvian government, made during the days when Senor Leguia was being cajoled—and was cajoling himself—into the idea that he was "The Little Giant of the Pacific," "The Roosevelt of Peru" and other exaltations.

Now that the depression which has swept over the world has hit Peru—and hit it hard—there is considerable interest in the actualities back of the stories of Peruvian wealth. How much of it is real today and how much of it is literary deposit from the days of the Incas?

Peru is as large as France, Germany and Italy put together. It has a demonstrated capacity to produce cotton, sugar, wool and wheat as cheaply as any country. Its mountains are well provided with copper, gold, silver and lead, and its northern section has witnessed a striking development in petroleum.

There is at least the beginning of a substantial national wealth. And when the markets of the world were devouring these raw materials with a seemingly insatiable avidity, the returns gave to Peru every appearance of actual wealth. And it was actual wealth. The only difficulty was that it was wholly dependent upon the continuance of the mundial appetite. The lack of industries for the conversion of these raw materials into articles of consumption within the country left Peru without the power of sustaining its own prosperity when the world market fell. It still manages to sell its products abroad, but only to about half the value it had become accustomed to. Cut the income of such a country in half and trouble is almost sure to follow.

Especially is this the case when it has to carry a heavy burden of service on a foreign debt; a service which does not vary in amount with the prosperity of the country, but which demands full payment month after month and year after year, regardless of what is left in the national pocketbook to pay for daily necessities.

But will not Peru be able to develop its enormous resources, increase its production and restore the national financial balance?

Geography must help to answer that question. Peru is divided into three sections. There is a narrow coastal plain cut by occasional river valleys. Back of this rises the tremendous wall of the Andes with its altitudinous plains. And still further to the east the slope down to the Amazon river and its tributaries. The lowest passes across the mountain wall are in the neighborhood of 15,000 feet high and the approaches are so precipitous that railroads can only reach them by means of switchbacks and cogwheels.

The coastal plain, while it lies in the tropics, is most untropical. Such east winds as reach it have been wrung dry by the frigid crests of the Andes. And the prevailing southwest winds bring no more moisture. For along the coast runs the cold Humboldt current, straight from the Antarctic icepack. This not only cools the coastal plain but also the winds that pass over it. Instead of bringing rain they are drying winds. As a result the coastal plain of Peru is a barren desert except where it is cut by the turbulent streams whose waters can be diverted for irrigation.

The agricultural lands of Peru, therefore, consist not of the vast coastal plain, but of a dozen strips along the river banks. Thus the productive area of this section is reduced at one stroke to a mere fraction of its apparent size. The remainder is as barren as the Sahara.

The metallic wealth of the country is, of course, mainly in the mountains. And inconsiderately enough it chose to deposit itself on the eastern side of the Andean wall. Now, a ton of copper is a ton of copper wherever it is. But it is worth more in New York, for example, than it is in Peru. The Peruvian value is less by whatever it costs to get it to New York. That is not a serious matter when it is on the seaboard. But it becomes a very real item when it has to be carried over mountain passes 15,000 feet high. Whether it goes by man-back, donkey-back or railway, it means a heavy discount on the value of every ton of copper or other mineral that is dug up on the landside of the mountain wall. The debt side of the mineral ledger thus carries some large figures.

As if to make up for this lack of foresight in the placing of the metallic deposits, nature put Peru's petroleum resources right at the water's edge. For many years this country was the largest oil producer in South America, a position which it has now yielded to Venezuela. But Peru can still count upon her petroleum deposits for a large income.

So, too, can it count upon the high plains of the Andes to produce wool and wheat in considerable quantity. Never, however, on the mass production scale of our western prairies or that of the limitless plains of Argentina or Russia. And always there is the mountain wall between the producers and their world market.

The third part of Peru, the Oriente, a tropical land where the jungle growth is so rapid that it is difficult to keep roads open through it, has an enormous potential capacity for agricultural production. But so has southern Siberia. And for practical present purposes the Oriente is as far out of the world as Siberia. The cost of transportation would far exceed the value of anything that could be raised there. Mankind will have to need food-producing land far more than it does now before the Oriente will be cleared and planted.

The traditional wealth of Peru was made up of gold and silver that had been collected by the Incas and their predecessors through many centuries. The Spaniards took it from them and enriched themselves. But the process cannot be repeated in modern times. Peru has its riches—its resources are great. But the all but impassable wall of the Andes on one side and the limitless jungles of Brazil on the other, cut all but a fraction of them off from the markets where they can be converted into money or other goods.

Peru is practically three countries. For practical economic purposes the Oriente might as well be in the midst of the Antarctic continent and the Andean plains would be more accessible in the islands of the South Seas. Only the coastal plain with its oil and its skimpy valley of cotton and sugar are a functioning part of the present economic world.

Favors Plan To Reduce Number of Counties

Editor Constitution: I notice the plan of redistricting the state of Georgia in order that we may have 49 districts instead of 161 counties.

I think this would be a good plan. We certainly need to make some change in order to have fewer men in the house and senate. It is like this:

Fewer men, more done, less pay,
More men, less done, more pay.
Let's have some kind of a change.

A Cottage by the Sea

(After a Visit to St. Simons Island.)

To a cottage so dear
With the singing waves near—
A cottage well named The Sea Shell—
We came with our cares
But left them like tares
To be burned in the dear fairy dell.

By the side of The Shell
We all love so well
A mocking bird sings all the day;
We are held by the spell of the fairy dell
And pray, Dear God, let us stay.

By the sea we would bask
But return to our task
With hearts made large by the tide;
With the sea as our friend
Ourselves we can spend
With sympathies ocean-wide.

Prevention of Threatened Lynching Won Constitution Award for Sheriff Howell

First Time in History of County Crime Committed Not Followed by Mob Violence.

Details of the official acts performed by Sheriff Sid Howell, of Early county, for which he was designated by a committee of the Georgia County and Peace Officers' Association as winner of The Constitution's annual award for the most meritorious service in line of duty by a peace officer, were announced Saturday by Chief of Police Ben T. Watkins, of Macon, president of the association.

Chief Watkins was the winner of the award for the preceding year, both awards having been announced at the recent meeting of the association in Macon. The exploit for which he was honored was the capture of a trio of escaped convicts from West Virginia who had barricaded themselves in a house on the outskirts of Macon.

Editor Constitution: I wish to thank you for the check which was presented to me on last Friday by your representative, which was the award for meritorious service for the year beginning June, 1929, and ending June, 1930.

I also wish to inform you that the award committee of our association passed on a number of applications for the year beginning June, 1930, and ending June, 1931, and selected Mr. Sid Howell, sheriff of Early county, Blakely, Ga., as the officer to whom this award should be given. The presentation will be made at our next annual meeting, which will be in May, 1932, in Savannah.

BEN T. WATKINS,
President, Georgia County and Peace Officers' Association.

Prevented Probable Lynching.

The statement upon which the committee of the Peace Officers' Association gave the award to Sheriff Howell was signed by three prominent citizens of Early county—A. H. Gray, lawyer; S. P. Holland, physician, and R. O. Waters, banker—and gave him full credit for having prevented an almost certain lynching.

The statement was in part as follows:

"On Sunday night, December 14, 1930, Sheriff Howell was called upon to arrest a negro by the name of Edgar Jenkins for an attack claimed to have been committed upon two white girls, one 9 years of age, the other 11 years of age.

"Sheriff Howell immediately went to the home of the children, obtained from them, and from their father, all information available, and then started a search for the negro, first obtaining a promise from the father to say nothing of the crime until he obtained a further report and advice from the sheriff. Within three hours Sheriff Howell had the negro under arrest and in jail at Blakely, and soon thereafter took him to a jail in another county.

"As soon as the crime became generally known in the county great excitement prevailed, and talk of lynching the negro was commonly current.

"Sheriff Howell immediately called a meeting at the courthouse of the county commissioners and leading citizens from every section of the county. Included in this call were those persons whom Sheriff Howell recognized would be most likely to agitate a lynching of the negro, and who would act as leaders of a mob.

"This meeting was well attended, and, after some discussion, in which the harmful effects of mob violence were pointed out, every man present pledged his support and active assistance to Sheriff Howell in preventing the lynching of the negro when he was brought back to the county for trial at a special term of court, which Sheriff Howell assured would be called promptly.

"Sheriff Howell immediately communicated the result of this meeting to the circuit judge, who called a special term of Early superior court to convene on December 22, 1930, and a grand jury and petit jury were summoned for that date.

Leading Citizens Deputized.

"The special term of court convened as called, Sheriff Howell swore in a detail of special deputies, armed them, and placed them at strategic points about the courthouse, and in the courthouse, so placed and in sufficient numbers to prevent any concerted rush upon the courthouse. This detail of deputies was composed of the most outstanding citizens of the county, men whose influence alone would have great weight upon any body of their fellow citizens, and men, moreover, who were known to be fearless, and who would not retreat from a course of action once formed.

The negro was promptly indicted, brought into court, where the court appointed three attorneys to represent him. He was put upon trial during the same day, and found guilty upon two separate charges of rape, there being two bills returned against him. There was no room for doubt of his guilt. Indeed, he admitted his guilt to the sheriff after being arrested.

"The jury promptly found the defendant guilty upon both indictments, and he was sentenced to be electrocuted on January 16, 1931, at which time the sentence was carried into effect. Immediately upon the conclusion of the trial Sheriff Howell with his force of deputies carried the negro to a jail in another county, where he was kept until he was taken to the state prison for electrocution.

"From the beginning to the end of this affair Sheriff Howell kept his own counsel, taking no one into his confidence, as to his handling of the matter. He moved quickly whenever it was necessary to have the prisoner in his custody. No one knew how he got the negro back to Blakely on the day he was tried, and when he left with him after the trial, as stated, he was under heavy guard.

"Early county has heretofore had a number of lynchings, and several outbreaks of mob violence on the part of whites directed toward negroes. It was freely predicted by numbers of people, in fact it was the general belief, that this negro would be lynched. That he was not is a source of much gratification to the law-abiding citizens of our county.

Used Cool Judgment.

"Sheriff Howell displayed splendid judgment, we believe, when called upon to arrest this negro, in proceeding alone and not calling in a posse, and in requiring the father of the victims to keep quiet until the culprit was apprehended. In this way the negro was safely in jail in another county before news of the crime became generally known. Knowing the prevalent sentiment against crimes of this nature, which is especially violent in this county, we confidently believe that had knowledge of this crime become general before the negro was arrested and removed, that he would assuredly have been lynched.

"Sheriff Howell's action in calling a public meeting of the substantial citizens of the county, and including with these the turbulent spirits who he knew would take the lead in stirring up public excitement, and who would act as leaders of a mob, should one be formed, was a master-stroke. The latter could not in such a meeting afford to label themselves as lawbreakers when called upon to give their pledge against mob violence, and, having given their word, could not well afford to break it. The assurance of the best element of our citizenry to Sheriff Howell that they would use their best efforts to prevent a lynching, to the extent of using force if it became necessary (some of these actually enlisted in the sheriff's detail of deputies at the trial), effectually dampened the mob spirit, which by then had obtained considerable momentum.

"We believe that strong public opinion in any given situation is one of the most effective weapons against mob violence, and this, by his tact and strategy Sheriff Howell effectually brought into play. So that, on the day of the trial there was absolutely no demonstration of any kind, and no evidence whatever of mob spirit. The situation at the trial, while naturally tense, was quiet and orderly in every respect.

"The fact that Sheriff Howell is known to the county at large as a man of determination, and of quick and positive action when the occasion demands, also had its effect, as he had announced that if the negro were brought to Blakely for trial that there would be no lynching, and it was well known that Sheriff Howell would make good that statement with his life if necessary.

This is the first time in the history of Early county that the perpetrator of the crime of which the negro was convicted has not been lynched. We believe that Sheriff Howell, by his effective handling of this situation, has set a precedent which will go a long way toward preventing future mob violence in this county."

Give Help to Plodders, Urges Atlanta Pastor

Editor Constitution: The most casual reader of our daily papers will realize that there is something radically wrong under the sun. It doesn't take a prophet to tell what it is that troubles us either. Our big problems are not primarily economic either. They go deeper than mere dollars and cents, they go beyond material things. Our trouble is spiritual and cannot be reached or healed in the mere material realm. Four words will express our condition.

Profit! The whole world is out after gain. Laborers and capitalists are seeking for the gold and they have forgotten in the search God..

Pleasure! Man is a social being and none of us would be joy killers. God ordained that man should live by the sweat of his brow. Science has enabled man to invent machines to do most of his work, and sweating, for him and our pressing problem today is what will we do with our leisure time? Superficial ideals and aims are keeping us back from the best. A lack of struggle is causing flabby muscles.

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, but all play and no work makes Jack a worthless boy.

Parasites: Children around us are becoming public wards because perchance some one is nursing poodles. Progressive bridge is pushing the child into the background and service is giving place to a mad search after selfishness.

Plodders: And along with all our many saving graces comes the presence of so many plodders. Just ordinary American citizens who stay at home or in their places of business and day in and day out are grinding at the same old daily tasks trying to keep the family together and to help meet the tragic issues that are arising with each new morn. While many are busy chasing fashion, fun, frivolity, fame, foolishness, and are making merry, there are others who are trying to render a good account of their stewardship in the small places where they have been placed.

Unless this group is helped the whole structure of society is going to fall. So our schools, churches, civic governments and financial corporations should be doing their best to help this group which is the leaven that will cause the whole lump to rise.

Says Elberton Trial Was in Every Way Fair

Editor Constitution: I am glad that Judge Orville Park has corrected what no doubt was an unintentional injustice to Elbert county.

Judge B. T. Mosley, who happens to be from Madison county and whom I have known all my life, certainly did nothing to be pronounced judicial lynching, nor did the grand jury of Elbert county who returned the indictment, nor the jury who convicted the prisoner, Charles Downer.

It was as fair a trial as has ever been in any court. Judge Mosley, who is now getting old like a good many of us, certainly deserves no such criticism. True, he hasn't been on the bench very long, but if there was ever a judge ripened up to the position he now holds it is Judge Mosley. He had been urged for years and years, not only by the people of Madison county but by the people of the other counties in the circuit, to make the race for judge, but he had a lucrative practice and didn't care to go into politics, so when the lamented Judge Hodges died I went with a delegation from Madison county and we were met by a delegation from Oglethorpe county to ask the governor to appoint him judge. The governor had known Judge Mosley all his life, they being near the same age, and the governor told me afterwards that it was the easiest appointment he ever had to make during the four years that he had been in office.

As to the people of Elbert county, they are as high-class citizens as can be found in any county in the whole state.

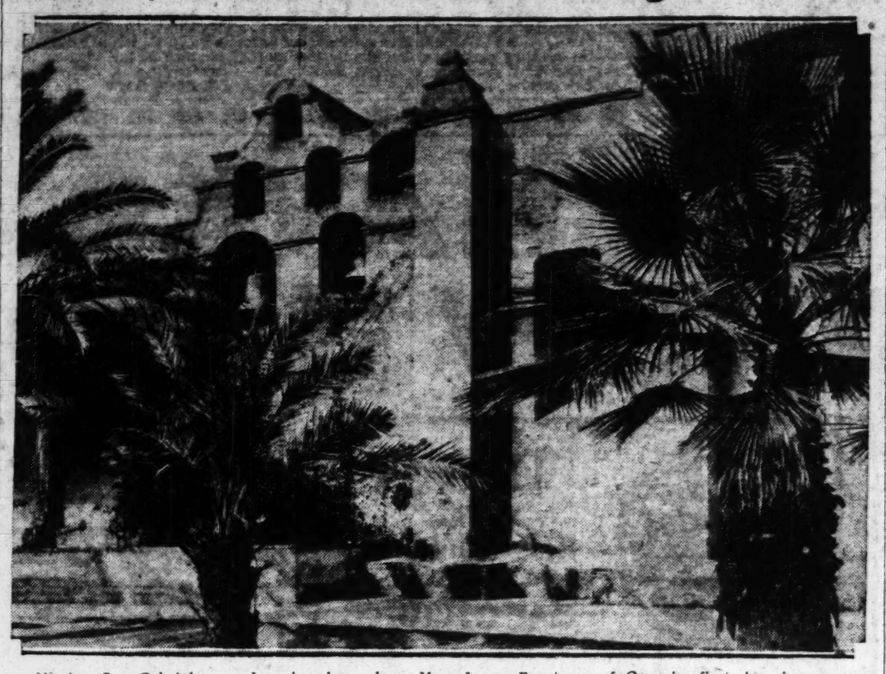

In my race for the senate last summer I went to every house in Elbert county and got acquainted with those that I had missed getting acquainted with in school and otherwise.

I know at least two-thirds of the grand jury that indicted this negro and I must say they were by far a better class of citizenry than the average grand jury. The foreman, Rev. J. C. West, is a Baptist minister, and I had the pleasure of hearing him talk at a fifth Sunday rally at Danielsville, Ga., yesterday afternoon. I happen to know the larger part of the jury that sat on the case and they are just about as high-class men as usually sit on the grand jury.

Somebody, I don't know who, employed two lawyers to help our solicitor-general, Hon. A. S. Skelton, prosecute the negro. Judge Mosley then appointed three lawyers to match these three in the defense. Could anything be fairer than this? Too, I happen to know personally the solicitor, as well as the other two lawyers appointed to help him and two of the lawyers appointed to defend him. The other lawyer's name is Smith. I don't happen to know him, but his name sounds mighty good to me.

California to Honor First American Woman Settler, Who Came From Georgia in 1849

Mission San Gabriel, near Los Angeles, where Mrs. Laura Evertsen, of Georgia, first American woman to settle in Los Angeles county, arrived with her family in 1849 and lived for many years as friend and tutor of the Mission Indians. Los Angeles will honor Mrs. Evertsen in pageant and parade during La Fiesta de Los Angeles, the city's 150th birthday party, September 4 to 13.

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—With her 150th birthday drawing near, and planning a rousing fiesta to celebrate it, this city thumbs the pages of her early history and finds written therein big letters the name of Mrs. Laura Marie Elizabeth Cecelia Morin Evertsen, of Savannah, Ga.—the first American woman to settle in this part of California.

At the side of her pioneering husband, and with three little children gathered in her sheltering arms, Mrs. Evertsen dared the peril of Indians on the plains, came through a savage onslaught that nearly cost her life, braved agonizing thirst across the desert, to settle at Mission San Gabriel, a few miles from the little Pueblo de Nuestra Senora la Reina de Los Angeles—Village of Our Lady the Queen of the Angels—in days when the glamour and charm of old Spanish pastoral days still lay upon the land.

Perhaps back there in Georgia her courage has gone unsung, her name forgotten, but Los Angeles reveres the memory of the woman who showed the way for the hundreds of other pioneer American women who were soon to follow in her path.

Because of their hardy spirit, this city plans to honor Mrs. Evertsen and the pioneer mothers who followed her as few American women ever have been honored, during La Fiesta de Los Angeles, the city's 150th birthday party, a ten-day period of historic pageantry and general carnival, beginning next September 4.

Laura Evertsen, of Savannah, will be glorified by impersonation in the historic parades and pageants, and her name and her deeds will ring in the eulogies of historians and fiesta officials. The little adobe home which she and her family built at San Gabriel, still standing, will be virtually a shrine to those who take more than a passing interest in the history and the people of early Los Angeles.

Born in Savannah.

The blood of the pioneer coursed naturally through the veins of this daring woman. Her forbears had emigrated from France to Haiti, whence they were compelled to flee for their lives during General Christophe's barbarous onslaught against the whites during the Napoleonic attempt to restore slavery in the island. Mrs. Evertsen's people came to the United States and ultimately to Savannah, where Laura Marie was born in 1812.

Grown to 19, she married John R. Evertsen, who had come to her home from New York. After several happy years in Savannah, they moved to Florida. Evertsen fought in the Mexican War on the staff of General Winfield Scott, and at the conclusion of the war the family, now including seven children, went to Texas to make their home.

Shortly after their arrival, however, four of the children died from cholera within two days, and the frantic parents departed almost overnight for California with their remaining three youngsters, John, Evert and Laura. That was early in 1849, and they arrived at San Gabriel on November 30 of the same year, more dead than alive after almost overwhelming hardships.

An Indian attack had stampeded or killed their horses and oxen, stripped them of their belongings and left them stranded on the desert and in despair. Fortunately, the little party soon fell in with another band of overlanders, who provided the ox team and wagon with which they finally gained the shelter of San Gabriel.

"In a short time," later wrote Mrs. A. J. King, the little Laura of the expedition, who married a Los Angeles judge, "we were surrounded by the Mission Indians, quiet, inoffensive people, only curious to see Americans. Among them were Dona Victoria Reid, the Indian wife of Hugo Reid, Scotch traveler and scholar, and to her the first American child she had ever seen was a grand curiosity. The Indians brought presents of dried fruits and nuts, filling my apron with them and jabbering among themselves about my clothing. Short skirts on a girl were something unknown in their experience."

The mother and the little girl at once endeared themselves to the Mission Indians as teachers and friends. Housekeeping was begun in an abandoned mission building, but living conditions were impossible and the venture was given up as hopeless. The family moved to Los Angeles, living there for a year or more while they built a new home in an olive grove near the mission.

Compiled First Census.

During their stay in Los Angeles, John Evertsen, acting as a government census agent, compiled the first census of Los Angeles city and county, that of 1850, a now priceless document recently found and reprinted.

At the new San Gabriel home the little family planted a vegetable garden and raised the first okra ever grown in California. Meat was plentiful; the family had a flock of sheep, and fresh beef could be lassoed on the hoof when required.

"Having made some pleasant friends during the year we spent in the pueblo," Mrs. King wrote later, "my mother invited them from time to time to visit us at the mission. Such gentlemen as General Magruder, J. Lancaster Brent, Rand, who was editor of the first Los Angeles newspaper, and others came to stay for days at a time with us, for as General Magruder remarked, they were only too glad of an opportunity to speak with an American lady once more."

Brent, by the way, must have been a welcome visitor indeed, there in little old San Gabriel, for he was a southern gentleman, destined to make history as the last Confederate general to lay down his sword.

When the wanderlust again called Evertsen his wife declined to accompany him on a trip to Nicaragua, saying that she would stay behind and educate the children. Evertsen departed on his new venture but was slain by Indians before he reached his destination.

Mrs. Evertsen kept on at San Gabriel, operating a store, caring for her children and looking after the interests of her self-appointed charges, the Mission Indians, a lone woman in a strange land.

Little wonder, then, that this city will pay glamorous tribute to such a woman as this in La Fiesta de Los Angeles. The various features of the celebration, such as the water carnival, the musical fiesta in Hollywood Bowl, the night illuminated parade of the moving picture studios, the congress of rough riders, the two-day international air meet, the street dancing and general merrymaking will all be dedicated to the courage of this woman and of the heroic group of other pioneers whose names are enshrined in the history of this city.

(Pictures in gravure pictorial section.)

SANDUSKY, Ohio, June 6.—Last week saw the first Memorial Day services at the graves of 206 Confederate soldiers on Johnson's Island since the United States government took over their care.

Patriotic organizations paid tribute to Union men on one side of the city and the next day the same people journeyed to Johnson's Island on the other side to pay the same tribute to the Confederate dead. The same firing squad and same bugler from the American Legion post paid honor to both.

The graves on Johnson's island, the farthest north shrine of the southland, became government property the last week in January when the United States senate and house of representatives passed, and President Herbert Hoover signed, a bill which provided for their perpetual care by the United States.

Efforts are now being made by local patriotic and social organizations, including the Johnson's Island Chapter United Daughters of the Confederacy, to have the state of Ohio take over that part of the island outside the cemetery and make it a state park as a supplement to the government work for the graves. Legislators are planning to introduce a bill in the state legislature within the next year with this in mind.

After the war the burial plot of the Confederate prisoners was neglected for many years until March 30, 1890, when the 206 graves were marked with headstones.

November 18, 1904, an option was given the United Daughters of the Confederacy to buy the cemetery and March 14, 1905, they purchased a strip of land 100 feet wide by 485 feet long, including the cemetery 100 feet wide and 209 1-2 feet long. June 18, 1910, the monument now standing was unveiled. It represents a Confederate soldier looking toward his beloved southland.

Letters were recently received by officials here from Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools and president of the National Education Association, and from G. Edgar Croft, of Atlanta, expressing the appreciation of the people of the south for local efforts in having the government take over the cemetery and for the efforts to have the island made a state shrine.

Unique Shrine.

Johnson's island is perhaps in many ways the most unique shrine in the north. It was a prison almost exclusively for Confederate officers, most of them from the far south, including Georgia, and it was the only prison of its kind on northern soil. It was the scene of an attempted prison break and uprising planned through Canada which failed. John Yates Beall, a wealthy Virginia officer, was hanged for his part in the affair and there is a legend still hovering about the island that it was his execution which was responsible for the assassination of President Lincoln. According to the legend he was a relative of John Wilkes Booth and it was in revenge for his execution that the president was killed. There seems to be no reliable authority for this, however.

The number of prisoners confined on the island at any one time varied. Toward the close of the war there were more than 3,000 at one time. Altogether about 15,000 Confederate officers were confined there at sometime during the war. Of this number 206 died, most of them from wounds with which they were suffering upon their arrival at the island. There were many prisoners confined upon the island who afterward became famous in the history of the United States. Among them was H. H. Lurton, afterward a justice of the United States supreme court and a judge of the supreme court of Tennessee.

The island, one of the greenest and prettiest along beautiful Lake Erie during the summer, lies three miles north of Sandusky in land-locked Sandusky bay, protected from the storms blowing over Lake Erie by the mainland on the north and from the south by the city of Sandusky. It consists of about 300 acres, almost a mile long and about half a mile wide, which slopes up from the bay on each side to a height of 50 feet.

The property was leased by the United States government as a place for prisoners early in 1861 and the first prisoners were installed in April of 1862 in charge of a regiment which later became the 128th Ohio Volunteer infantry.

The buildings were constructed of waste lumber full of knot holes, were 100 feet long and two stories high, box style and each story was divided into two rooms. Interiors were neither ceiled nor plastered.

A Confederate surgeon confined on the island for awhile said that the quarters were comfortably fitted out, the food was the same as that of the guards and that the prisoners were allowed many privileges and extra comforts which could be brought in from the ontside. A letter of his written after his release and contained in a report on prison conditions made to the third session of the 40th congress contained the following:

"The sleeping accommodations are very comfortable and consist of a bunk with straw bed and if the individual has no blanket one is furnished and he is allowed to buy as many more as he wants. Every room has a stove and is furnished with a sufficiency of wood. This the prisoners have to saw for themselves after it is brought to the door. The prison consists of 13 large wooden buildings. The space of ground is 13 acres, of which the prisoners have full liberty to exercise in, to sing southern national songs, to hurrah for Jeff Davis, to play ball or any other games they choose."

Prisoners passed the time by making chairs, tables, bedsteads and other household articles to make prison life more comfortable. Hundreds of split bottom cane chairs were made and after the war were auctioned off. Most of the articles had the names of the makers carved on them to identify the property in quarters and to insure return when taken from quarters.

"It is not an uncommon thing to see a chair sitting around once owned by Colonel Sawyer of the 14th Mississippi or Brigadier Generals Johnson, Marmaduke or other notables of the prison," one of the guards wrote.

The Attempted Escape.

Many conflicting details of the plan to release the prisoners made through Jake Thompson, agent of President Jefferson Davis, from Toronto, have been told. The exact story will, of course, never be known.

Through a report of Thompson made to his chief in 1864 it was learned that the plan involved seizure of the U. S. Michigan, a Federal gunboat guarding the prison, and an uprising from within the prison. Information reached Federal authorities in some unexplained way, some say through a prisoner, and the plan was frustrated.

The Register of October 19, 1876, contains the following extract from the report of Thompson which was made from Toronto in 1864:

"It had been previously ascertained that an organization existed among the prisoners on the island for the purpose of surprising the guard and capturing the island; the presence of the steamer Michigan, which carried 14 guns, being the only obstacle. Secret communications were had by which the prisoners were advised that on the night of September 19 an attempt would be made to seize the steamer. On that night Captain Cole who had established the friendliest relations with officers of the steamer was to have a wine drunk with them on board and at a given signal Acting Master Beall was to appear on the boat to be obtained for that purpose with a sufficient number of soldiers to board and take the steamer.

"Should they capture the steamer, a cannon shot was to announce to the prisoners that the hour for their release had come. Should they take the island, boats were to be improvised and Sandusky was to be attacked. If taken, the prisoners were to be mounted and taken to Cleveland, the boats co-operating, and from Cleveland the prisoners were to make for Wheeling and thence to Virginia. The key to the whole movement was the capture of the Michigan. On the evening of the 12th by some treachery Cole was arrested and the messenger who was to reach Acting Master Beall at Kelley's island did not reach him. Disappointed but nothing daunted Acting Master Beall, having possession of the Philo Parsons, passenger steamer from Detroit to Sandusky, went on his way to Johnson's island.

"Having landed at Middle Bass Island to procure a supply of wood, the steamer Island Queen with a large number of passengers and 30 soldiers, came up alongside and lashed herself to the Parsons. An attack was at once resolved on. The passengers and soldiers were soon made prisoners and the boat delivered up to our men. The soldiers were regularly paroled, the passengers were left on the island, having given their promise not to attempt to leave for 24 hours, and the boat was taken out into the lake and sunk. The Parsons then steered directly for the Bay of Sandusky. Here the men, for reasons not altogether satisfactory, refused to make an attack on the Michigan. Beall returned, landed at Sandwich, Ontario, and the men scattered through the country. Most of them have returned to the Confederate states.

"But a few days since Acting Master Bennett C. Burley was arrested and his trial is now going on under the extradition treaty. If he had Cole's, Beall's or his own commission I should not fear the result. As it is they will have to prove they acted under my order and that will probably secure his release but it may lead to my expulsion from the provinces. At lease I have it from a reliable source that this last proposition has been presented to the Canadian authorities and they have considered it. Should the course of events take this direction, unadvised by you, I shall consider it my duty to remain where I am and abide the issue. I should prefer, if possible, to have your views on the subject. Captain Cole is a prisoner on Johnson's island."

Beall was captured at Niagara Falls December 16, 1864, was tried as a spy in New York and was hung on Governor's island February 24, 1865.

The Register of October 12, 1889, printed a complete list of those buried in the cemetery and stated that there were only two copies of the list of the dead in existence. In 1889 a delegation from Georgia visited the island and attempted to arrange for care of the graves which failed because L. B. Johnson, the owner of the land, would not sell the burial plot.

Urges That Georgia Follow Example Of Other States in Taxing Buses, Trucks

Editor Constitution: The legislature of 1927 and the legislature of 1925 endeavored to pass laws regulating the bus and the truck business, but in each instance it was lost. In 1929 a bill was passed providing for the regulation of busses and trucks and also for the taxation thereof. Of course the advocates of the bus regulation bills did not want taxes to be included, so the tax feature of the law was enjoined by a group of bus operators, including the Greyhound Lines. To this date, and it is now almost two years, not one single cent of this tax has been paid and they have enjoyed the free use of our highways. Then comes the governor's special session, which cost the taxpayers of our state $200,000. A great deal of time was spent on enacting laws for the regulation of busses and trucks again. What happened? The law was passed and now the 1931 act is stopped by action of the courts—and again they romp with free use of our highways.

But they want the part of the law that gives them the franchises protecting them against "unfair competition," and they have that protection now, and they have the use of our highways, and pay nothing for it—nothing.

How long are the people of our good state going to put up with it? How long is the intelligence of our people and legislators going to be insulted by these operators? They must take Georgians for a pack of fools.

The Greyhound Lines have not practiced such methods in other states. They have paid the taxes levied in other states. They paid a tax of an average of $500 per bus in Wisconsin. They paid a tax of as much as $1,100 per bus in Minnesota and they have paid it for five years. They paid into the treasury of that state approximately $75,000 a year for the use of the highways and they were not all paved either. They paid in Texas. They paid in California 6 per cent gross receipts tax, plus special city and state taxes. They paid in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and other states, higher taxes than in Georgia. They paid the mileage tax in Iowa for years without question. They paid in Florida a license plate tax of $500 per bus and a mileage tax on top of that for using 60 miles of Florida's highways. They paid in Mississippi a tax much greater than in Georgia. They paid in Pennsylvania a tax four times greater than in Georgia.

In every state they operate they paid a tax from two to ten times higher than in Georgia. Now let's see what they paid in Georgia. Twenty-five dollars per bus, to the Georgia public service commission. A state license plate (like you or I buy) at 50 cents per hundred pounds—same as you or I pay. A gas tax of 6 cents per gallon—same as you pay and any other operator of a passenger car or truck. And they cry—Georgia is taxing us out of business. As a matter of fact, this company has paid less than 1-10 of 1 per cent of its gross receipts to the state of Georgia for the use of its paved highways. Again I repeat, are they making fools of our legislators?

The state gives them a paved right-of-way, 500 miles long for less than 1-10 of 1 per cent of their revenue and gives them a franchise against competition for $400 a year in special taxes. Is it fair to the public to lease out 460 miles of paved highway, for which the taxpayers paid, for $400 a year, and then protect their business against competition? What other business gets the use of public property without taxation, or even their own property without taxation? What other business does the state protect against competition? They talk of government subsidy to the railroads, by land grants during the development of our country. Who built our towns and cities anyhow? Did these busses do it? No! They come in and use our public paid highways in competition with railroads who spent millions to help build our cities and towns, and compete with them on a road-bed, and at that the railroads are the largest taxpayers in our state. Did they enjoin the state from collecting the heavy taxes saddled on them? No, they paid and paid and paid. If this bus company wants a land grant, I say give it to them—let them build their own right-of-ways like our railroads did. They wouldn't take it. What they want is a public paid road, free use of it, protection against competition, and no taxes.

What this company is doing is making fools of our intelligence—it is an insult, to our people and to our lawmakers. If the state is not going to collect taxes from this company, are they still going to protect them and give them our roads? The law has only been enforced against the little fellow, who was unable to pay a lawyer to fight—he took the bread from his family to pay, and today the comptroller-general and the public service commission have men all over the state waiting to arrest some poor fellow who might come across the line with a box of soap or some man that has a truck and has not paid his tax. If such is the effect of two sessions of the legislature—do away with the law—what good is it, other than a burden on the public and the small operator, and a burden on our highways?

The Greyhound Lines have paid into the state treasury only $1,000 approximately since 1927—four years—$250 per year for the use of 500 miles of public highway, not including gas and tag tax. What's wrong with our state departments?

Our forefathers fought for "taxation without representation." These busses want all representation, no taxation.

Los Angeles Doctor, Born in Dixie, Wants Songs of Old South

Editor Constitution: Ante-bellum slave songs and the militant ring of canzones sung by rebel soldiers had charm and romance without parallel for master, slave and soldier. Many are slipping into the dimness of time, though some are hummed and enjoyed by old-timers of the south, and their children ring out bars from piquant war songs with gusto.

A few such melodies often drift into my own mind, and I live again in the halcyon years of childhood, for each tune brings to memory scenes and incidents of days agone—sweet, hallowed days. The best friend and most beloved that the negro ever had was his erstwhile master. Some of my father's slaves lived with him for many years after the civil war was over. From them I learned cornfield melodies, and from older brothers, ex-soldiers, I knew the battle songs.

I am desirous of securing all the old songs and stories of that period that may be had of others' memories. I just found in my scrapbook: "Run, nigger, run. The patterol'l ketch yuh; Run, nigger, run. Hit's almos' day." Is it asking too much that if any of your readers have or remember any of these old songs that they will communicate with me.

I am sure there are old soldiers in the Confederate homes who will enjoy sending scraps to me, even if only a part can be recalled. Or grey-headed children of these old patriots may remember too, and be inspired to write me. I believe, too, that stories of our great generals, Lee, Longstreet, Morgan, Early, Jackson, Hood and others should be gathered for preservation, together with these songs and precious memories.

Suggests Plan To Solve City's Traffic Problems

Editor Constitution: Allow me to suggest a plan to solve our traffic problems.

Organize an accident insurance company by the municipal government, entirely separate from the council or any other department of city government.

Compel every driver to be examined and get city license. Application for this license shall be accompanied by an accident insurance. This insurance policy will specify that any driver who is convicted for any unlawful act of traffic, the insurance policy shall be cancelled immediately, which would cancel the city license. The guilty party shall not have the insurance restored under 12 months.

This proposition at $3 for license will give the city about $100,000 per annum. The insurance department would no doubt double that amount.

Holds Governmental "Racketeers" Breaking Down Farmers of Country

Editor Constitution: The agricultural marketing act of congress, approved by President Hoover June 15, 1929, provides that the $500,000,000 could be used in acquiring physical facilities for marketing the farmers' produce; for lending to the marketing agencies created, or adopted by the federal farm board; and, to carry on an educational program.

There is no express provision in the act of congress that authorizes the federal farm board to buy wheat and cotton, or any other farm products.

The purpose of the agricultural marketing act was to establish a monopoly in the right and the power to market the products of the farmers. The act of congress did not declare this purpose in so many words, and had it done so, it would have met with such opposition as to defeat its passage. I dare say many members of the United States congress—like the members of the general public—were ignorant of the real purpose back of this act and they read only the label—"Federal Farm Relief." And the agricultural marketing act being thus labeled, it commanded unquestioned support of the congress.

When C. C. Teague resigned as a member of the board, he took occasion to congratulate the president on his happy selection of the members of the board and to "pat himself on the back" for the magnificent service he had rendered the farmer in "merchandising his produce."

No more sinister, cynical, impudent utterance was ever openly made.

To one who has observed the activity of the federal farm board since its creation, it is manifest that its purpose in thus buying wheat and cotton under a strained construction of the agricultural marketing act was to intimidate the "speculator" and put out of business those agencies who have heretofore bought wheat and cotton. No better method could be devised to achieve that object. No one dares buy wheat and cotton except by permission of the federal farm board when he can be destroyed by the board through the simple process of flooding the market with the wheat and cotton held by the board.

The farm board purposes to eliminate "speculators" altogether and this purpose has frequently been declared by the board. It designates the present marketing agencies as "speculators" in order to fix on them a certain odium and to discredit them in the minds of the farmers who are sought to be snared and subjugated by the federal farm board.

C. C. Teague, speaking for the farm board in Boston, Mass., on March 23, 1931, proclaimed the board's purpose to use the rural and city high schools and the agricultural colleges of the country to carry on the board's "educational program." Some of the agricultural colleges of the country, including the agricultural college in Georgia, are already wittingly or unwittingly engaged in carrying on this work for the federal farm board.

Dr. J. Phil Campbell, of the University of Georgia, recently informed the farmers of Georgia that cotton can be grown at five cents a pound.

W. D. Anderson, president of that great manufacturing establishment, was not quite so rash as Dr. Campbell, but he declares in effect that if the farmer were efficient that he "could sell his cotton at eight to ten cents per pound with a good profit to himself and we will drive the world in front of us so far as cotton is concerned."

So we must conclude that the federal farm board is holding wheat and cotton, with no definite declaration as to when and how it will dispose of it, for the purpose of keeping "speculators" from buying and selling cotton—in other words, to put the present marketing agencies out of business and establish a monopoly for its own governmentally subsidized marketing agencies.

Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, that great prophet in agriculture, was recently quoted as demanding that the Federal Land Bank be turned over to the control of the federal farm board. Thus, the federal farm board will control the farmer's banking facilities and also his marketing agencies.

The banking facilities can then be used to furnish the "bait" and the marketing agencies will constitute the "trap" and the farmer can be forced to produce at bare cost—"to make brick without straw."

In that program the farm board will have the co-operation of the agricultural colleges and the manufacturers.

In other words, Mr. Anderson's thought and the thought of the federal farm board is the same, to wit: America must meet the "Russian menace" by "Russianizing" its farmers in order to furnish cheap raw material to the manufacturers and cheap food to "organized industry."

And this in the name of "federal farm relief!"

Is "organized industry" responsible for passage of the agricultural marketing act of congress? The farmers did not demand it, or understand it, and do not yet understand it. They simply know they are being crushed to death and the press looks on in perfect silence. The south and the west at present are the chief sufferers—the "organized" east the beneficiary. Soon both agriculture and "organized industry" will be crushed in the interest of the governmental "racketeers."

The subjugated American farmer must sustain "organized industry" on the highest level in the world's history. It can't be done. The governmental "racketeers" will break down both the farmers and "organized industry."

Under an honest and intelligent leadership, the agricultural marketing act can be repealed, the federal farm board abolished and the Smoot-Hawley tariff recalled. On that platform a democratic administration would be called into service.

Georgia's Greatest Need Is a State-Wide Body To Attract Wealth and Population

BY C. F. REDDEN.

"Every second person you meet a new cash customer."

This is not a businessman's dream of Utopia, but a cold statement of facts recently issued by United States department of commerce, and California state officials.

According to actual figures, every second person you meet in southern California has moved there within the last 10 years. In other words, the population of southern California has doubled since 1921.

Ten years ago this month southern California was in the lowest depths of the 1921 panic and she started a national advertising campaign to attract vacationists and home-seekers to that state, in an endeavor to expand her volume of business and pull out of the depression.

As a result of her national advertising, she has, during the past 10 years, increased the property valuations of Los Angeles county alone from $600,000,000 to over $3,000,000,000; increased the bank clearance from $3,000,000,000 to $11,000,000,000. In other words, these new citizens have more than tripled the volume of trade in homes, furniture, clothing, automobiles, jewelry and the products of mines, manufacturers, farms and orchards.

Officials claim that this tremendous prosperity and growth has been due almost entirely to the united effort of the cities and counties of the state, co-operating with a central organization to boost the state.

Think what it would mean to Georgia real estate values; to the profits of our merchants; to the bank accounts of our farmers, dairy, poultry and truck ranches, and to the prosperity of all of our citizens—if 10 years hence Georgia had doubled her population and doubled, tripled and doubled again the wealth of her citizens—that is exactly what California has done.

Georgia could easily duplicate this tremendous achievement if all the cities and communities in the state get together in a spirit of co-operation and co-ordination and back up a state-wide movement to advertise Georgia to the nation.

Georgia has many advantages to attract sportsmen, home seekers and vacationists, not enjoyed by any other state east of the Rockies.

We are within 24 hours by rail of the great centers of population.

We have, within the state, a range of climatic conditions insuring pleasant, healthful climate 12 months in the year.

The natural beauty of our mountains, forests and seashore can compete with anything in the world in attracting sportsmen and pleasure seekers.

One factor alone would insure a tremendous growth in our population, if properly and aggressively broadcast to the nation, and that is—you can get more of the pleasures and pastimes of life in Georgia for less money than any other place on this continent.

Georgia's greatest need now is a statewide organization, representing all interests throughout the state, working together in a co-operative spirit to boost Georgia and to attract new wealth and new population.

Other states have proven for us, that only by co-ordinated effort can we bring to Georgia these millions of new money.

By co-operation we can, also, retain in Georgia many additional millions that are now expended outside of the state to purchase food and other supplies, that are not as good as what we raise here.

Prevention of Threatened Lynching Won Constitution Award for Sheriff Howell

First Time in History of County Crime Committed Not Followed by Mob Violence.

SHERIFF SID HOWELL.

Details of the official acts performed by Sheriff Sid Howell, of Early county, for which he was designated by a committee of the Georgia County and Peace Officers' Association as winner of The Constitution's annual award for the most meritorious service in line of duty by a peace officer, were announced Saturday by Chief of Police Ben T. Watkins, of Macon, president of the association.

Chief Watkins was the winner of the award for the preceding year, both awards having been announced at the recent meeting of the association in Macon. The exploit for which he was honored was the capture of a trio of escaped convicts from West Virginia who had barricaded themselves in a house on the outskirts of Macon.

Editor Constitution: I wish to thank you for the check which was presented to me on last Friday by your representative, which was the award for meritorious service for the year beginning June, 1929, and ending June, 1930.

I also wish to inform you that the award committee of our association passed on a number of applications for the year beginning June, 1930, and ending June, 1931, and selected Mr. Sid Howell, sheriff of Early county, Blakely, Ga., as the officer to whom this award should be given. The presentation will be made at our next annual meeting, which will be in May, 1932, in Savannah.

BEN T. WATKINS,
President, Georgia County and Peace Officers' Association.

Prevented Probable Lynching.

The statement upon which the committee of the Peace Officers' Association gave the award to Sheriff Howell was signed by three prominent citizens of Early county—A. H. Gray, lawyer; S. P. Holland, physician, and R. O. Waters, banker—and gave him full credit for having prevented an almost certain lynching.

The statement was in part as follows:

"On Sunday night, December 14, 1930, Sheriff Howell was called upon to arrest a negro by the name of Edgar Jenkins for an attack claimed to have been committed upon two white girls, one 9 years of age, the other 11 years of age.

"Sheriff Howell immediately went to the home of the children, obtained from them, and from their father, all information available, and then started a search for the negro, first obtaining a promise from the father to say nothing of the crime until he obtained a further report and advice from the sheriff. Within three hours Sheriff Howell had the negro under arrest and in jail at Blakely, and soon thereafter took him to a jail in another county.

"As soon as the crime became generally known in the county great excitement prevailed, and talk of lynching the negro was commonly current.

"Sheriff Howell immediately called a meeting at the courthouse of the county commissioners and leading citizens from every section of the county. Included in this call were those persons whom Sheriff Howell recognized would be most likely to agitate a lynching of the negro, and who would act as leaders of a mob.

"This meeting was well attended, and, after some discussion, in which the harmful effects of mob violence were pointed out, every man present pledged his support and active assistance to Sheriff Howell in preventing the lynching of the negro when he was brought back to the county for trial at a special term of court, which Sheriff Howell assured would be called promptly.

"Sheriff Howell immediately communicated the result of this meeting to the circuit judge, who called a special term of Early superior court to convene on December 22, 1930, and a grand jury and petit jury were summoned for that date.

Leading Citizens Deputized.

"The special term of court convened as called. Sheriff Howell swore in a detail of special deputies, armed them, and placed them at strategic points about the courthouse, and in the courthouse, so placed and in sufficient numbers to prevent any concerted rush upon the courthouse. This detail of deputies was composed of the most outstanding citizens of the county, men whose influence alone would have great weight upon any body of their fellow citizens, and men, moreover, who were known to be fearless, and who would not retreat from a course of action once formed.

The negro was promptly indicted, brought into court, where the court appointed three attorneys to represent him. He was put upon trial during the same day, and found guilty upon two separate charges of rape, there being two bills returned against him. There was no room for doubt of his guilt. Indeed, he admitted his guilt to the sheriff after being arrested.

"The jury promptly found the defendant guilty upon both indictments, and he was sentenced to be electrocuted on January 16, 1931, at which time the sentence was carried into effect. Immediately upon the conclusion of the trial Sheriff Howell with his force of deputies carried the negro to a jail in another county, where he was kept until he was taken to the state prison for electrocution.

"From the beginning to the end of this affair Sheriff Howell kept his own counsel, taking no one into his confidence, as to his handling of the matter. He moved quickly whenever it was necessary to have the prisoner in his custody. No one knew how he got the negro back to Blakely on the day he was tried, and when he left with him after the trial, as stated, he was under heavy guard.

"Early county has heretofore had a number of lynchings, and several outbreaks of mob violence on the part of whites directed toward negroes. It was freely predicted by numbers of people, in fact it was the general belief, that this negro would be lynched. That he was not is a source of much gratification to the law-abiding citizens of our county.

Used Cool Judgment.

"Sheriff Howell displayed splendid judgment, we believe, when called upon to arrest this negro, in proceeding alone and not calling in a posse, and in requiring the father of the victims to keep quiet until the culprit was apprehended. In this way the negro was safely in jail in another county before news of the crime became generally known. Knowing the prevalent sentiment against crimes of this nature, which is especially violent in this county, we confidently believe that had knowledge of this crime become general before the negro was arrested and removed, that he would assuredly have been lynched.

"Sheriff Howell's action in calling a public meeting of the substantial citizens of the county, and including with these the turbulent spirits who he knew would take the lead in stirring up public excitement, and who would act as leaders of a mob, should one be formed, was a master-stroke. The latter could not in such a meeting afford to label themselves as lawbreakers when called upon to give their pledge against mob violence, and, having given their word, could not well afford to break it. The assurance of the best element of our citizenry to Sheriff Howell that they would use their best efforts to prevent a lynching, to the extent of using force if it became necessary (some of these actually enlisted in the sheriff's detail of deputies at the trial), effectually dampened the mob spirit, which by then had obtained considerable momentum.

"We believe that strong public opinion in any given situation is one of the most effective weapons against mob violence, and this, by his tact and strategy Sheriff Howell effectually brought into play. So that, on the day of the trial there was absolutely no demonstration of any kind, and no evidence whatever of mob spirit. The situation at the trial, while naturally tense, was quiet and orderly in every respect.

"The fact that Sheriff Howell is known to the county at large as a man of determination, and of quick and positive action when the occasion demands, also had its effect, as he had announced that if the negro were brought to Blakely for trial that there would be no lynching, and it was well known that Sheriff Howell would make good that statement with his life if necessary.

This is the first time in the history of Early county that the perpetrator of the crime of which the negro was convicted has not been lynched. We believe that Sheriff Howell, by his effective handling of this situation, has set a precedent which will go a long way toward preventing future mob violence in this county."

Give Help to Plodders, Urges Atlanta Pastor

Editor Constitution: The most casual reader of our daily papers will realize that there is something radically wrong under the sun. It doesn't take a prophet to tell what it is that troubles us either. Our big problems are not primarily economic either. They go deeper than mere dollars and cents, they go beyond material things. Our trouble is spiritual and cannot be reached or healed in the mere material realm. Four words will express our condition.

Profit! The whole world is out after gain. Laborers and capitalists are seeking for the gold and they have forgotten in the search God..

Pleasure! Man is a social being and none of us would be joy killers. God ordained that man should live by the sweat of his brow. Science has enabled man to invent machines to do most of his work, and sweating, for him and our pressing problem today is what will we do with our leisure time? Superficial ideals and aims are keeping us back from the best. A lack of struggle is causing flabby muscles.

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, but all play and no work makes Jack a worthless boy.

Parasites: Children around us are becoming public wards because perchance some one is nursing poodles. Progressive bridge is pushing the child into the background and service is giving place to a mad search after selfishness.

Plodders: And along with all our many saving graces comes the presence of so many plodders. Just ordinary American citizens who stay at home or in their places of business and day in and day out are grinding at the same old daily tasks trying to keep the family together and to help meet the tragic issues that are arising with each new morn. While many are busy chasing fashion, fun, frivolity, fame, foolishness, and are making merry, there are others who are trying to render a good account of their stewardship in the small places where they have been placed.

Unless this group is helped the whole structure of society is going to fall. So our schools, churches, civic governments and financial corporations should be doing their best to help this group which is the leaven that will cause the whole lump to rise.

Says Elberton Trial Was in Every Way Fair

Editor Constitution: I am glad that Judge Orville Park has corrected what no doubt was an unintentional injustice to Elbert county.

Judge B. T. Mosley, who happens to be from Madison county and whom I have known all my life, certainly did nothing to be pronounced judicial lynching, nor did the grand jury of Elbert county who returned the indictment, nor the jury who convicted the prisoner, Charles Downer.

It was as fair a trial as has ever been in any court. Judge Mosley, who is now getting old like a good many of us, certainly deserves no such criticism. True, he hasn't been on the bench very long, but if there was ever a judge ripened up to the position he now holds it is Judge Mosley. He had been urged for years and years, not only by the people of Madison county but by the people of the other counties in the circuit, to make the race for judge, but he had a lucrative practice and didn't care to go into politics, so when the lamented Judge Hodges died I went with a delegation from Madison county and we were met by a delegation from Oglethorpe county to ask the governor to appoint him judge. The governor had known Judge Mosley all his life, they being near the same age, and the governor told me afterwards that it was the easiest appointment he ever had to make during the four years that he had been in office.

As to the people of Elbert county, they are as high-class citizens as can be found in any county in the whole state.

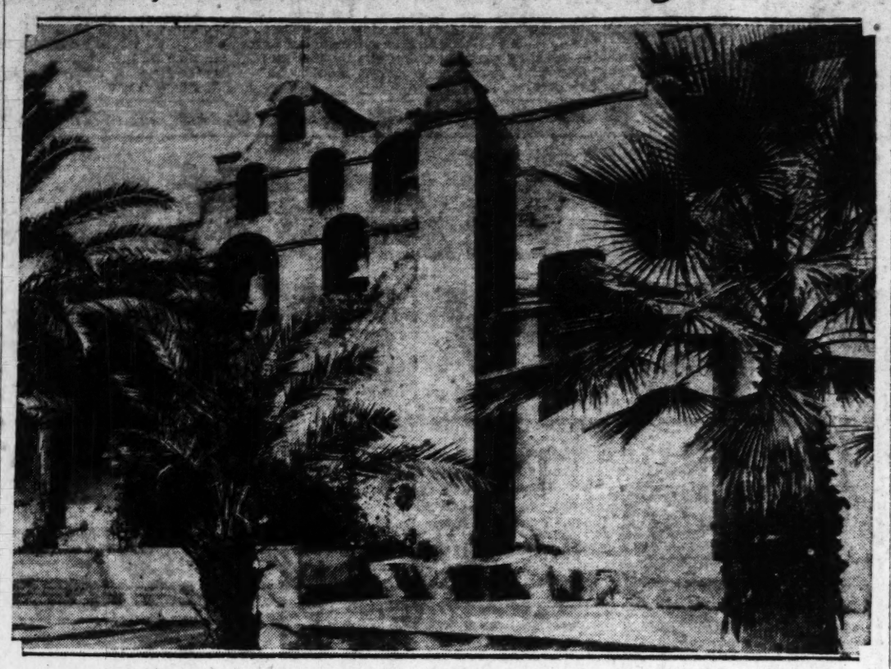

In my race for the senate last summer I went to every house in Elbert county and got acquainted with those that I had missed getting acquainted with in school and otherwise.

I know at least two-thirds of the grand jury that indicted this negro and I must say they were by far a better class of citizenry than the average grand jury. The foreman, Rev. J. C. West, is a Baptist minister, and I had the pleasure of hearing him talk at a fifth Sunday rally at Danielsville, Ga., yesterday afternoon. I happen to know the larger part of the jury that sat on the case and they are just about as high-class men as usually sit on the grand jury.

Somebody, I don't know who, employed two lawyers to help our solicitor-general, Hon. A. S. Skelton, prosecute the negro. Judge Mosley then appointed three lawyers to match these three in the defense. Could anything be fairer than this? Too, I happen to know personally the solicitor, as well as the other two lawyers appointed to help him and two of the lawyers appointed to defend him. The other lawyer's name is Smith. I don't happen to know him, but his name sounds mighty good to me.

California to Honor First American Woman Settler, Who Came From Georgia in 1849

Mission San Gabriel, near Los Angeles, where Mrs. Laura Evertsen, of Georgia, first American woman to settle in Los Angeles county, arrived with her family in 1849 and lived for many years as friend and tutor of the Mission Indians. Los Angeles will honor Mrs. Evertsen in pageant and parade during La Fiesta de Los Angeles, the city's 150th birthday party, September 4 to 13.

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—With her 150th birthday drawing near, and planning a rousing fiesta to celebrate it, this city thumbs the pages of her early history and finds written therein big letters the name of Mrs. Laura Marie Elizabeth Cecelia Morin Evertsen, of Savannah, Ga.—the first American woman to settle in this part of California.

At the side of her pioneering husband, and with three little children gathered in her sheltering arms, Mrs. Evertsen dared the peril of Indians on the plains, came through a savage onslaught that nearly cost her life, braved agonizing thirst across the desert, to settle at Mission San Gabriel, a few miles from the little Pueblo de Nuestra Senora la Reina de Los Angeles—Village of Our Lady the Queen of the Angels—in days when the glamour and charm of old Spanish pastoral days still lay upon the land.

Perhaps back there in Georgia her courage has gone unsung, her name forgotten, but Los Angeles reveres the memory of the woman who showed the way for the hundreds of other pioneer American women who were soon to follow in her path.

Because of their hardy spirit, this city plans to honor Mrs. Evertsen and the pioneer mothers who followed her as few American women ever have been honored, during La Fiesta de Los Angeles, the city's 150th birthday party, a ten-day period of historic pageantry and general carnival, beginning next September 4.

Laura Evertsen, of Savannah, will be glorified by impersonation in the historic parades and pageants, and her name and her deeds will ring in the eulogies of historians and fiesta officials. The little adobe home which she and her family built at San Gabriel, still standing, will be virtually a shrine to those who take more than a passing interest in the history and the people of early Los Angeles.

Born in Savannah.

The blood of the pioneer coursed naturally through the veins of this daring woman. Her forbears had emigrated from France to Haiti, whence they were compelled to flee for their lives during General Christophe's barbarous onslaught against the whites during the Napoleonic attempt to restore slavery in the island. Mrs. Evertsen's people came to the United States and ultimately to Savannah, where Laura Marie was born in 1812.

Grown to 19, she married John R. Evertsen, who had come to her home from New York. After several happy years in Savannah, they moved to Florida. Evertsen fought in the Mexican War on the staff of General Winfield Scott, and at the conclusion of the war the family, now including seven children, went to Texas to make their home.

Shortly after their arrival, however, four of the children died from cholera within two days, and the frantic parents departed almost overnight for California with their remaining three youngsters, John, Evert and Laura. That was early in 1849, and they arrived at San Gabriel on November 30 of the same year, more dead than alive after almost overwhelming hardships.

An Indian attack had stampeded or killed their horses and oxen, stripped them of their belongings and left them stranded on the desert and in despair. Fortunately, the little party soon fell in with another band of overlanders, who provided the ox team and wagon with which they finally gained the shelter of San Gabriel.

"In a short time," later wrote Mrs. A. J. King, the little Laura of the expedition, who married a Los Angeles judge, "we were surrounded by the Mission Indians, quiet, inoffensive people, only curious to see Americans. Among them were Dona Victoria Reid, the Indian wife of Hugo Reid, Scotch traveler and scholar, and to her the first American child she had ever seen was a grand curiosity. The Indians brought presents of dried fruits and nuts, filling my apron with them and jabbering among themselves about my clothing. Short skirts on a girl were something unknown in their experience."

The mother and the little girl at once endeared themselves to the Mission Indians as teachers and friends. Housekeeping was begun in an abandoned mission building, but living conditions were impossible and the venture was given up as hopeless. The family moved to Los Angeles, living there for a year or more while they built a new home in an olive grove near the mission.

Compiled First Census.

During their stay in Los Angeles, John Evertsen, acting as a government census agent, compiled the first census of Los Angeles city and county, that of 1850, a now priceless document recently found and reprinted.

At the new San Gabriel home the little family planted a vegetable garden and raised the first okra ever grown in California. Meat was plentiful; the family had a flock of sheep, and fresh beef could be lassoed on the hoof when required.

"Having made some pleasant friends during the year we spent in the pueblo," Mrs. King wrote later, "my mother invited them from time to time to visit us at the mission. Such gentlemen as General Magruder, J. Lancaster Brent, Rand, who was editor of the first Los Angeles newspaper, and others came to stay for days at a time with us, for as General Magruder remarked, they were only too glad of an opportunity to speak with an American lady once more."

Brent, by the way, must have been a welcome visitor indeed, there in little old San Gabriel, for he was a southern gentleman, destined to make history as the last Confederate general to lay down his sword.

When the wanderlust again called Evertsen his wife declined to accompany him on a trip to Nicaragua, saying that she would stay behind and educate the children. Evertsen departed on his new venture but was slain by Indians before he reached his destination.

Mrs. Evertsen kept on at San Gabriel, operating a store, caring for her children and looking after the interests of her self-appointed charges, the Mission Indians, a lone woman in a strange land.

Little wonder, then, that this city will pay glamorous tribute to such a woman as this in La Fiesta de Los Angeles. The various features of the celebration, such as the water carnival, the musical fiesta in Hollywood Bowl, the night illuminated parade of the moving picture studios, the congress of rough riders, the two-day international air meet, the street dancing and general merrymaking will all be dedicated to the courage of this woman and of the heroic group of other pioneers whose names are enshrined in the history of this city.

(Pictures in gravure pictorial section.)

SANDUSKY, Ohio, June 6.—Last week saw the first Memorial Day services at the graves of 206 Confederate soldiers on Johnson's Island since the United States government took over their care.

Patriotic organizations paid tribute to Union men on one side of the city and the next day the same people journeyed to Johnson's Island on the other side to pay the same tribute to the Confederate dead. The same firing squad and same bugler from the American Legion post paid honor to both.

The graves on Johnson's island, the farthest north shrine of the southland, became government property the last week in January when the United States senate and house of representatives passed, and President Herbert Hoover signed, a bill which provided for their perpetual care by the United States.

Efforts are now being made by local patriotic and social organizations, including the Johnson's Island Chapter United Daughters of the Confederacy, to have the state of Ohio take over that part of the island outside the cemetery and make it a state park as a supplement to the government work for the graves. Legislators are planning to introduce a bill in the state legislature within the next year with this in mind.

After the war the burial plot of the Confederate prisoners was neglected for many years until March 30, 1890, when the 206 graves were marked with headstones.

November 18, 1904, an option was given the United Daughters of the Confederacy to buy the cemetery and March 14, 1905, they purchased a strip of land 100 feet wide by 485 feet long, including the cemetery 100 feet wide and 209 1-2 feet long. June 18, 1910, the monument now standing was unveiled. It represents a Confederate soldier looking toward his beloved southland.

Letters were recently received by officials here from Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools and president of the National Education Association, and from G. Edgar Croft, of Atlanta, expressing the appreciation of the people of the south for local efforts in having the government take over the cemetery and for the efforts to have the island made a state shrine.

Unique Shrine.

Johnson's island is perhaps in many ways the most unique shrine in the north. It was a prison almost exclusively for Confederate officers, most of them from the far south, including Georgia, and it was the only prison of its kind on northern soil. It was the scene of an attempted prison break and uprising planned through Canada which failed. John Yates Beall, a wealthy Virginia officer, was hanged for his part in the affair and there is a legend still hovering about the island that it was his execution which was responsible for the assassination of President Lincoln. According to the legend he was a relative of John Wilkes Booth and it was in revenge for his execution that the president was killed. There seems to be no reliable authority for this, however.

The number of prisoners confined on the island at any one time varied. Toward the close of the war there were more than 3,000 at one time. Altogether about 15,000 Confederate officers were confined there at sometime during the war. Of this number 206 died, most of them from wounds with which they were suffering upon their arrival at the island. There were many prisoners confined upon the island who afterward became famous in the history of the United States. Among them was H. H. Lurton, afterward a justice of the United States supreme court and a judge of the supreme court of Tennessee.

The island, one of the greenest and prettiest along beautiful Lake Erie during the summer, lies three miles north of Sandusky in land-locked Sandusky bay, protected from the storms blowing over Lake Erie by the mainland on the north and from the south by the city of Sandusky. It consists of about 300 acres, almost a mile long and about half a mile wide, which slopes up from the bay on each side to a height of 50 feet.

The property was leased by the United States government as a place for prisoners early in 1861 and the first prisoners were installed in April of 1862 in charge of a regiment which later became the 128th Ohio Volunteer infantry.

The buildings were constructed of waste lumber full of knot holes, were 100 feet long and two stories high, box style and each story was divided into two rooms. Interiors were neither ceiled nor plastered.

A Confederate surgeon confined on the island for awhile said that the quarters were comfortably fitted out, the food was the same as that of the guards and that the prisoners were allowed many privileges and extra comforts which could be brought in from the outside. A letter of his written after his release and contained in a report on prison conditions made to the third session of the 40th congress contained the following:

"The sleeping accommodations are very comfortable and consist of a bunk with straw bed and if the individual has no blanket one is furnished and he is allowed to buy as many more as he wants. Every room has a stove and is furnished with a sufficiency of wood. This the prisoners have to saw for themselves after it is brought to the door. The prison consists of 13 large wooden buildings. The space of ground is 13 acres, of which the prisoners have full liberty to exercise in, to sing southern national songs, to hurrah for Jeff Davis, to play ball or any other games they choose."

Prisoners passed the time by making chairs, tables, bedsteads and other household articles to make prison life more comfortable. Hundreds of split bottom cane chairs were made and after the war were auctioned off. Most of the articles had the names of the makers carved on them to identify the property in quarters and to insure return when taken from quarters.

"It is not an uncommon thing to see a chair sitting around once owned by Colonel Sawyer of the 14th Mississippi or Brigadier Generals Johnson, Marmaduke or other notables of the prison," one of the guards wrote.

The Attempted Escape.

Many conflicting details of the plan to release the prisoners made through Jake Thompson, agent of President Jefferson Davis, from Toronto, have been told. The exact story will, of course, never be known.

Through a report of Thompson made to his chief in 1864 it was learned that the plan involved seizure of the U. S. Michigan, a Federal gunboat guarding the prison, and an uprising from within the prison. Information reached Federal authorities in some unexplained way, some say through a prisoner, and the plan was frustrated.

The Register of October 19, 1876, contains the following extract from the report of Thompson which was made from Toronto in 1864:

"It had been previously ascertained that an organization existed among the prisoners on the island for the purpose of surprising the guard and capturing the island; the presence of the steamer Michigan, which carried 14 guns, being the only obstacle. Secret communications were had by which the prisoners were advised that on the night of September 19 an attempt would be made to seize the steamer. On that night Captain Cole, who had established the friendliest relations with officers of the steamer, was to have a wine drunk with them on board and at a given signal Acting Master Beall was to appear on the boat to be obtained for that purpose with a sufficient number of soldiers to board and take the steamer.

"Should they capture the steamer, a cannon shot was to announce to the prisoners that the hour for their release had come. Should they take the island, boats were to be improvised and Sandusky was to be attacked. If taken, the prisoners were to be mounted and taken to Cleveland, the boats co-operating, and from Cleveland the prisoners were to make for Wheeling and thence to Virginia. The key to the whole movement was the capture of the Michigan. On the evening of the 12th by some treachery Cole was arrested and the messenger who was to reach Acting Master Beall at Kelley's island did not reach him. Disappointed but nothing daunted Acting Master Beall, having possession of the Philo Parsons, passenger steamer from Detroit to Sandusky, went on his way to Johnson's island.

"Having landed at Middle Bass Island to procure a supply of wood, the steamer Island Queen with a large number of passengers and 30 soldiers, came up alongside and lashed herself to the Parsons. An attack was at once resolved on. The passengers and soldiers were soon made prisoners and the boat delivered up to our men. The soldiers were regularly paroled, the passengers were left on the island, having given their promise not to attempt to leave for 24 hours, and the boat was taken out into the lake and sunk. The Parsons then steered directly for the Bay of Sandusky. Here the men, for reasons not altogether satisfactory, refused to make an attack on the Michigan. Beall returned, landed at Sandwich, Ontario, and the men scattered through the country. Most of them have returned to the Confederate states.

"But a few days since Acting Master Bennett C. Burley was arrested and his trial is now going on under the extradition treaty. If he had Cole's, Beall's or his own commission I should not fear the result. As it is they will have to prove they acted under my order and that will probably secure his release but it may lead to my expulsion from the provinces. At lease I have it from a reliable source that this last proposition has been presented to the Canadian authorities and they have considered it. Should the course of events take this direction, unadvised by you, I shall consider it my duty to remain where I am and abide the issue. I should prefer, if possible, to have your views on the subject, Captain Cole is a prisoner on Johnson's island."

Beall was captured at Niagara Falls December 16, 1864, was tried as a spy in New York and was hung on Governor's island February 24, 1865.

The Register of October 12, 1889, printed a complete list of those buried in the cemetery and stated that there were only two copies of the list of the dead in existence. In 1889 a delegation from Georgia visited the island and attempted to arrange for care of the graves which failed because L. B. Johnson, the owner of the land, would not sell the burial plot.

Urges That Georgia Follow Example Of Other States in Taxing Buses, Trucks

Editor Constitution: The legislature of 1927 and the legislature of 1925 endeavored to pass laws regulating the bus and the truck business, but in each instance it was lost. In 1929 a bill was passed providing for the regulation of busses and trucks and also for the taxation thereof. Of course the advocates of the bus regulation bills did not want taxes to be included, so the tax feature of the law was enjoined by a group of bus operators, including the Greyhound Lines. To this date, and it is now almost two years, not one single cent of this tax has been paid and they have enjoyed the free use of our highways. Then comes the governor's special session, which cost the taxpayers of our state $200,000. A great deal of time was spent on enacting laws for the regulation of busses and trucks again. What happened? The law was passed and now the 1931 act is stopped by action of the courts—and again they romp with free use of our highways.

But they want the part of the law that gives them the franchises protecting them against "unfair competition," and they have that protection now, and they have the use of our highways, and pay nothing for it—nothing.

How long are the people of our good state going to put up with it? How long is the intelligence of our people and legislators going to be insulted by these operators? They must take Georgians for a pack of fools.

The Greyhound Lines have not practiced such methods in other states. They have paid the taxes levied in other states. They paid a tax of an average of $500 per bus in Wisconsin. They paid a tax of as much as $1,100 per bus in Minnesota and they have paid it for five years. They paid into the treasury of that state approximately $75,000 a year for the use of the highways and they were not all paved either. They paid in Texas. They paid in California 6 per cent gross receipts tax, plus special city and state taxes. They paid in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and other states, higher taxes than in Georgia. They paid the mileage tax in Iowa for years without question. They paid in Florida a license plate tax of $500 per bus and a mileage tax on top of that for using 60 miles of Florida's highways. They paid in Mississippi a tax much greater than in Georgia. They paid in Pennsylvania a tax four times greater than in Georgia.

In every state they operate they paid a tax from two to ten times higher than in Georgia. Now let's see what they paid in Georgia. Twenty-five dollars per bus, to the Georgia public service commission. A state license plate (like you or I buy) at 50 cents per hundred pounds—same as you or I pay. A gas tax of 6 cents per gallon—same as you pay and any other operator of a passenger car or truck. And they cry—Georgia is taxing us out of business. As a matter of fact, this company has paid less than 1-10 of 1 per cent of its gross receipts to the state of Georgia for the use of its paved highways. Again I repeat, are they making fools of our legislators?

The state gives them a paved right-of-way, 500 miles long for less than 1-10 of 1 per cent of their revenue and gives them a franchise against competition for $400 a year in special taxes. Is it fair to the public to lease out 460 miles of paved highway, for which the taxpayers paid, for $400 a year, and then protect their business against competition? What other business gets the use of public property without taxation, or even their own property without taxation? What other business does the state protect against competition? They talk of government subsidy to the railroads, by land grants during the development of our country. Who built our towns and cities anyhow? Did these busses do it? No! They come in and use our public paid highways in competition with railroads who spent millions to help build our cities and towns, and compete with them on a road-bed, and at that the railroads are the largest taxpayers in our state. Did they enjoin the state from collecting the heavy taxes saddled on them? No, they paid and paid and paid. If this bus company wants a land grant, I say give it to them—let them build their own right-of-ways like our railroads did. They wouldn't take it. What they want is a public paid road, free use of it, protection against competition, and no taxes.

What this company is doing is making fools of our intelligence—it is an insult, to our people and to our lawmakers. If the state is not going to collect taxes from this company, are they still going to protect them and give them our roads? The law has only been enforced against the little fellow, who was unable to pay a lawyer to fight—he took the bread from his family to pay, and today the comptroller-general and the public service commission have men all over the state waiting to arrest some poor fellow who might come across the line with a box of soap or some man that has a truck and has not paid his tax. If such is the effect of two sessions of the legislature—do away with the law—what good is it, other than a burden on the public and the small operator, and a burden on our highways?

The Greyhound Lines have paid into the state treasury only $1,000 approximately since 1927—four years—$250 per year for the use of 500 miles of public highway, not including gas and tag tax. What's wrong with our state departments?

Our forefathers fought for "taxation without representation." These busses want all representation, no taxation.

Los Angeles Doctor, Born in Dixie, Wants Songs of Old South

Editor Constitution: Ante-bellum slave songs and the militant ring of canzones sung by rebel soldiers had charm and romance without parallel for master, slave and soldier. Many are slipping into the dimness of time, though some are hummed and enjoyed by old-timers of the south, and their children ring out bars from piquant war songs with gusto.

A few such melodies often drift into my own mind, and I live again in the halcyon years of childhood, for each tune brings to memory scenes and incidents of days agone—sweet, hallowed days. The best friend and most beloved that the negro ever had was his erstwhile master. Some of my father's slaves lived with him for many years after the civil war was over. From them I learned cornfield melodies, and from older brothers, ex-soldiers, I knew the battle songs.

I am desirous of securing all the old songs and stories of that period that may be had of others' memories. I just found in my scrapbook: "Run, nigger, run. The patterol'l ketch yuh; Run, nigger, run. Hit's almos' day." Is it asking too much that if any of your readers have or remember any of these old songs that they will communicate with me.

I am sure there are old soldiers in the Confederate homes who will enjoy sending scraps to me, even if only a part can be recalled. Or grey-headed children of these old patriots may remember too, and be inspired to write me. I believe, too, that stories of our great generals, Lee, Longstreet, Morgan, Early, Jackson, Hood and others should be gathered for preservation, together with these songs and precious memories.

Suggests Plan To Solve City's Traffic Problems

Editor Constitution: Allow me to suggest a plan to solve our traffic problems.

Organize an accident insurance company by the municipal government, entirely separate from the council or any other department of city government.

Compel every driver to be examined and get city license. Application for this license shall be accompanied by an accident insurance. This insurance policy will specify that any driver who is convicted for any unlawful act of traffic, the insurance policy shall be cancelled immediately, which would cancel the city license. The guilty party shall not have the insurance restored under 12 months.

This proposition at $3 for license will give the city about $100,000 per annum. The insurance department would no doubt double that amount.

Holds Governmental "Racketeers" Breaking Down Farmers of Country

Editor Constitution: The agricultural marketing act of congress, approved by President Hoover June 15, 1929, provides that the $500,000,000 could be used in acquiring physical facilities for marketing the farmers' produce; for lending to the marketing agencies created, or adopted by the federal farm board; and, to carry on an educational program.

There is no express provision in the act of congress that authorizes the federal farm board to buy wheat and cotton, or any other farm products.

The purpose of the agricultural marketing act was to establish a monopoly in the right and the power to market the products of the farmers. The act of congress did not declare this purpose in so many words, and had it done so, it would have met with such opposition as to defeat its passage. I dare say many members of the United States congress—like the members of the general public—were ignorant of the real purpose back of this act and they read only the label—"Federal Farm Relief." And the agricultural marketing act being thus labeled, it commanded unquestioned support of the congress.

When C. C. Teague resigned as a member of the board, he took occasion to congratulate the president on his happy selection of the members of the board and to "pat himself on the back" for the magnificent service he had rendered the farmer in "merchandising his produce."

No more sinister, cynical, impudent utterance was ever openly made.

To one who has observed the activity of the federal farm board since its creation, it is manifest that its purpose in thus buying wheat and cotton under a strained construction of the agricultural marketing act was to intimidate the "speculator" and put out of business those agencies who have heretofore bought wheat and cotton. No better method could be devised to achieve that object. No one dares buy wheat and cotton except by permission of the federal farm board when he can be destroyed by the board through the simple process of flooding the market with the wheat and cotton held by the board.

The farm board purposes to eliminate "speculators" altogether and this purpose has frequently been declared by the board. It designates the present marketing agencies as "speculators" in order to fix on them a certain odium and to discredit them in the minds of the farmers who are sought to be snared and subjugated by the federal farm board.

C. C. Teague, speaking for the farm board in Boston, Mass., on March 23, 1931, proclaimed the board's purpose to use the rural and city high schools and the agricultural colleges of the country to carry on the board's "educational program." Some of the agricultural colleges of the country, including the agricultural college in Georgia, are already wittingly or unwittingly engaged in carrying on this work for the federal farm board.

Dr. J. Phil Campbell, of the University of Georgia, recently informed the farmers of Georgia that cotton can be grown at five cents a pound.

W. D. Anderson, president of that great manufacturing establishment, was not quite so rash as Dr. Campbell, but he declares in effect that if the farmer were efficient that he "could sell his cotton at eight to ten cents per pound with a good profit to himself and we will drive the world in front of us so far as cotton is concerned."

So we must conclude that the federal farm board is holding wheat and cotton, with no definite declaration as to when and how it will dispose of it, for the purpose of keeping "speculators" from buying and selling cotton—in other words, to put the present marketing agencies out of business and establish a monopoly for its own governmentally subsidized marketing agencies.

Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, that great prophet in agriculture, was recently quoted as demanding that the Federal Land Bank be turned over to the control of the federal farm board. Thus, the federal farm board will control the farmer's banking facilities and also his marketing agencies.

The banking facilities can then be used to furnish the "bait" and the marketing agencies will constitute the "trap" and the farmer can be forced to produce at bare cost—"to make brick without straw."

In that program the farm board will have the co-operation of the agricultural colleges and the manufacturers.

In other words, Mr. Anderson's thought and the thought of the federal farm board is the same, to wit: America must meet the "Russian menace" by "Russianizing" its farmers in order to furnish cheap raw material to the manufacturers and cheap food to "organized industry."

Is "organized industry" responsible for passage of the agricultural marketing act of congress? The farmers did not demand it, or understand it, and do not yet understand it. They simply know they are being crushed to death and the press looks on in perfect silence. The south and the west at present are the chief sufferers—the "organized" east the beneficiary. Soon both agriculture and "organized industry" will be crushed in the interest of the governmental "racketeers."

The subjugated American farmer must sustain "organized industry" on the highest level in the world's history. It can't be done. The governmental "racketeers" will break down both the farmers and "organized industry."

Under an honest and intelligent leadership, the agricultural marketing act can be repealed, the federal farm board abolished and the Smoot-Hawley tariff recalled. On that platform a democratic administration would be called into service.

Georgia's Greatest Need Is a State-Wide Body To Attract Wealth and Population

BY C. F. REDDEN.

"Every second person you meet a new cash customer."

This is not a businessman's dream of Utopia, but a cold statement of facts recently issued by United States department of commerce, and California state officials.

According to actual figures, every second person you meet in southern California has moved there within the last 10 years. In other words, the population of southern California has doubled since 1921.

Ten years ago this month southern California was in the lowest depths of the 1921 panic and she started a national advertising campaign to attract vacationists and home-seekers to that state, in an endeavor to expand her volume of business and pull out of the depression.

As a result of her national advertising, she has, during the past 10 years, increased the property valuations of Los Angeles county alone from $600,000,000 to over $3,000,000,000; increased the bank clearance from $3,000,000,000 to $11,000,000,000. In other words, these new citizens have more than tripled the volume of trade in homes, furniture, clothing, automobiles, jewelry and the products of mines, manufacturers, farms and orchards.

Officials claim that this tremendous prosperity and growth has been due almost entirely to the united effort of the cities and counties of the state, co-operating with a central organization to boost the state.

Think what it would mean to Georgia real estate values; to the profits of our merchants; to the bank accounts of our farmers, dairy, poultry and truck ranches, and to the prosperity of all of our citizens—if 10 years hence Georgia had doubled her population and doubled, tripled and doubled again the wealth of her citizens—that is exactly what California has done.

Georgia could easily duplicate this tremendous achievement if all the cities and communities in the state get together in a spirit of co-operation and co-ordination and back up a statewide movement to advertise Georgia to the nation.

Georgia has many advantages to attract sportsmen, home seekers and vacationists, not enjoyed by any other state east of the Rockies.

We are within 24 hours by rail of the great centers of population.

We have, within the state, a range of climatic conditions insuring pleasant, healthful climate 12 months in the year.

The natural beauty of our mountains, forests and seashore can compete with anything in the world in attracting sportsmen and pleasure seekers.

One factor alone would insure a tremendous growth in our population, if properly and aggressively broadcast to the nation, and that is—you can get more of the pleasures and pastimes of life in Georgia for less money than any other place on this continent.

Georgia's greatest need now is a statewide organization, representing all interests throughout the state, working together in a co-operative spirit to boost Georgia and to attract new wealth and new population.

Other states have proven for us, that only by co-ordinated effort can we bring to Georgia these millions of new money.

By co-operation we can, also, retain in Georgia many additional millions that are now expended outside of the state to purchase food and other supplies, that are not as good as what we raise here.

Miss Hammett Is Guest of Honor.

Mrs. Binion N. Jordan was hostess at a tea yesterday at her home on Clifton road in compliment to her sister, Miss Charlotte Hammett, whose marriage to Charles Wilson will be solemnized at Druid Hills Baptist church June 16.

The tea table was covered with a lace and madeira cloth and graced in the center by a silver bowl holding pink roses and blue larkspur. Punch was served by the hostess' sisters, Misses Evelyn and Marie Hammett, and Miss Virginia Browning.

Miss Hammett has been the honor guest at many affairs since the announcement of her engagement. Miss Joe Jackson entertained at a luncheon and shower at Brookhaven Country Club in her honor. Miss Emma Joiner complimented her with a luncheon and shower at Rich's tea room recently. Miss Mary Elizabeth Grant entertained for Miss Hammett and Mr. Wilson at a party last week. Miss Frances Johnson also complimented them at a dinner party at the Gateway tea room.

Miss Ruth De Foor gave a theater party and tea in honor if Miss Hammett. The guests included the members of the wedding party. Mrs. G. W. Hammett will be hostess at a troussean tea Saturday in honor of her daughter. She will also entertain the wedding party at a buffet supper following the wedding rehearsal Monday evening, June 15.

Hogg-McIntyre Rites

BUENA VISTA, Ga., June 6.—A marriage of interest to friends and relatives throughout the state was that of Miss Nettylee Hogg, of Buena Vista, and Charles Drake McIntyre, of Laurinburg, N. C., which took place Saturday morning at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hogg Sr., in Buena Vista. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. P. Allison, great uncle of the bride, in the presence of the family and a few close friends.

The bride was lovely wearing a navy blue ensemble trimmed in white with accessories to match. She carried a bouquet of white roses and valley lilies tied with white tulle.

Mrs. McIntyre is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hogg Sr., of Buena Vista. She graduated from Buena Vista High school and later attended Georgia State Teacher's College in Athens, Ga. The bridegroom is a native of Laurinburg, N. C.

Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre left for a motor trip through the Carolinas before returning to Laurinburg, N. C., where they will make their home. Among the out-of-town guests were: Angus McPherson, of Laurinburg, N. C.; Mrs. Grady Barnhill, of Whitakers, N. C.; Mrs. T. N. Halley, of Columbus, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hogg Jr., of Atlanta, Ga.

Waller—Rogers.

FAIRMOUNT, Ga., June 6.—Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Waller announce the marriage of their daughter, Mabel Anne, to Floyd S. Rogers, of Fairmount. The marriage was solemnized in Center, Ala., May 2.

Monday - FIRST Day of Surprising! Spectacular! FINAL Clearaway!

KEELY CLOSES OUT PIECE GOODS DEPARTMENTS!

Silks! Tub Cottons! Woolens! Linens! Bedding!

—For sixty-four years KEELY'S PIECE GOODS DEPARTMENTS have stood a symbol of all that is quality-right, fashion-right, price-right, not only for Atlanta, but for the entire South. Year in and year out people have bought KEELY'S PIECE GOODS—have been proud to display PIECE GOODS from KEELY'S—and you'll agree materials have to be GOOD to sell that way! —Because Keely's PIECE GOODS DEPARTMENTS have become so definitely identified with Atlanta and the south—this CLOSE-OUT SALE carries with it a tinge of regret.

—But, CHANGE is the life of progress—and Keely's is on tiptoe, alive to every possibility that spells advancement. NEW DEPARTMENTS to replace the PIECE GOODS DEPARTMENTS are now being planned—and to consummate these plans the PIECE GOODS DEPARTMENTS MUST CLOSE OUT as quickly as possible, that is the reason for these sweeping price reductions Monday! —Thousands of yards of gorgeous silks—tub cottons—linens—the 1931 highlights of America's more important manufacturers—newest summer and spring fabrics, and SILKS and WOOLENS you will want to buy and keep for next fall and winter wear will be sacrificed at ridiculous prices.

Miss Delaune, of Lockport, La., To Wed John Edward McGuire

Miss Ida Lucille Delaune, beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elson A. Delaune, of Lockport, La., whose engagement is announced today to John Edward McGuire, of New Orleans, La., formerly of Atlanta.

LOCKPORT, La., June 6.—Of cordial interest to fashionable society throughout the south is the announcement, made today by Mr. and Mrs. Elson A. Delaune, of the betrothal of their daughter, Ida Lucille, to John Edward McGuire, of New Orleans, La., their marriage to unite families of prominence and influence in the south.

The bride-elect is one of the most beautiful young girls of Louisiana society, and she inherits from a long line of aristocratic French ancestry a charm of manner and great personal magnetism that have made her an acknowledged belle. She received her education at the Dominican College in New Orleans, and since finishing school has enjoyed the cultural advantages of wide travel.

Mr. McGuire is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius McGuire, of Atlanta, Ga., where he was born and reared. His grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Corrigan, beloved and influential citizens of Atlanta. He is widely and popularly known in the Georgia capital, where the news of his engagement will be received with cordial interest by a host of friends.

Mr. McGuire holds the position of assistant vice president of the Hibernia Bank & Trust Co., of New Orleans, where he and his bride will make their home following their wedding, which will be solemnized Thursday morning, June 25, at the Church of the Holy Name of Jesus, Upper St. Charles avenue, New Orleans.

Miss Randall Weds Elton Tingle In Griffin, Ga.

GRIFFIN, Ga., June 6.—A marriage characterized by beauty and simplicity and one of wide interest was that of Miss Sara Randall to Elton Tingle, of Atlanta, which was solemnized this afternoon in the First Baptist church at Griffin. Dr. John B. Turner, pastor, performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate families and a few intimate friends. The church was beautifully decorated with palms and ferns interspersed with baskets of calla lilies.

The bride and bridegroom entered together. The bride's exquisite beauty was enhanced by her wedding ensemble of navy blue silk with blouse of imported cream batiste. Her hat was a small French model of dark blue straw and her slippers and bag were of dark blue. The bride's corsage bouquet was of valley lilies and Sweetheart roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Tingle left for a wedding trip to points of interest in North and South Carolina and upon their return will be at home at 856 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E., Atlanta.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Ella Lee Randall, of Griffin. She is a young woman of unusual charm and vivacity and has enjoyed a wide popularity throughout the state. She attended school in Griffin and later received her degree at G. S. C. W. in Milledgeville. Mr. Tingle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Tingle, of Locust Grove. He is superintendent of the Atlanta branch of the New York Casualty Company and is associated with the American Surety Company, of New York.

Miss Fain Weds Mr. Ferguson At Brilliant Ceremony in Texas

HOUSTON, Texas, June 6.—Unsurpassed brilliance characterized the wedding of Miss Carolyn Fain, daughter of Mrs. William Mercer Fain, of Atlanta, Ga., to James Franklin Ferguson, of this city, son of Dr. and Mrs. James A. Ferguson, of Brennan, Texas, which was solemnized at a sunset ceremony this afternoon at 5 o'clock at the palatial home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eikel, on Del Monte drive. Bishop Quinn, of the Episcopal diocese, performed the impressive ceremony which was attended by several hundred guests including a number from Atlanta and other cities. The rites were solemnized in the spacious solarium where an altar was erected, the entire altar being covered with white satin. A mound of Easter lilies from which arose three tall cathedral tapers was arranged in the center of the altar. Garlands of white sweet peas adorned the tapers with showers of these lovely flowers falling to the bottom of the mound which was entwined with smilax. Similar but smaller floral mounds graced either side of the altar out of which arose a single cathedral candle. On the lower part of the altar were seven-branched candelabras holding unshaded white tapers from which fell showers of white sweet peas. Palms and foliage plants were massed at the back of the altar in which were interspersed seven-branched candelabras resting on plateaux of Easter lilies from which trailed showers of white sweet peas to the floor. The wall at the back of the altar was hung with a wide panel of shimmering silver metal cloth which reflected a radiant glow over the beautiful wedding scene. An aisle way reaching from the reception room to the solarium was formed of tall standards of Easter lilies connected with strings of smilax and white satin ribbon, the members of the bridal party descending the handsome marble steps singly. Miss Mary Augusta Eikel, the bride's cousin and Mrs. Robert Organ, of Atlanta, Ga., acted as maid of honor and matron of honor. The former wore an exquisite gown of yellow chiffon and Mrs. Organ's gown was fashioned of delicate blue chiffon. The graceful skirts of the gowns reached to a floor length and their picture hats were made of organdy to match their gowns. They carried gorgeous bouquets of yellow roses and blue delphinium, the handles of which were covered with yellow and blue pansies from which fell streamers of blue and yellow moire taffeta ribbon. The bride was preceded by the little flower girl, Miss Barbara Organ, of Atlanta, who wore a dainty frock of yellow chiffon and carried an old-fashioned bouquet formed of yellow and blue pansies.

Beautiful Bride.

The beautiful young bride was accompanied to the altar by her uncle, Charles Eikel, by whom she was given in marriage. She presented a radiant figure in her wedding gown of white crepe made on long graceful lines and trimmed with a sunburst design embroidered in tiny seed pearls on the front of the bodice. A court train of real lace fell from a Juliet cap made of the lace and held to the head by slender sprays of orange blossoms. Tiny orange blossom buds were caught at intervals on the priceless veil which is a valued heirloom in the bride's family. The bride's bouquet was formed of delicately flesh-tinted orchids and valley lilies and showered with valley lilies and narrow white satin ribbon. The groom was attended by F. M. Talbert, of Houston, as best man.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Eikel entertained at a brilliant reception at which they were assisted in receiving by the bride and groom, members of the bridal party, Mrs. W. M. Fain, of Atlanta; the bride's mother and Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Ferguson, of Brennan, Texas, the bridegroom's parents. Others who assisted in entertaining were Mr. and Mrs. William V. Barlow, of Atlanta, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. James H. Drake, of Vera Cruz, Mexico, and Jack Fain, of Atlanta; Gene Lee, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wilkerson, of Hearne, Texas, and Mrs. W. P. Dunn, of Atlanta.

Mrs. Fain, the bride's mother, wore a handsome gown of flesh colored lace veiling shell pink chiffon and her shoulder bouquet was formed of white orchids. Mrs. Ferguson was gowned in gray lace over chiffon and her shoulder bouquet was of lavender tinted orchids. Mrs. Eikel's costume was fashioned of orchid lace over lavender chiffon and she wore a corsage of lavender orchids. Mrs. Drake's gown was created of black lace and chiffon and she wore a bouquet of gardenias. Mrs. Wilkerson wore light green moire crepe with a corsage of gardenias and valley lilies. Mrs. Dunn wore a gown of canary yellow chiffon with a shoulder spray of gardenias.

Reception in Garden.

The reception was held in the gardens of the magnificent estate, the reflection of the sunset against the stately marble home providing a beautiful effect for the occasion. Members of the receiving line stood in the lower sunken garden against a bower of green shrubbery, on either side of which were huge Italian marble urns filled with blue and pink hydrangeas and Easter lilies. Punch bowls were placed on either side of the spraying fountain on which played lights in rainbow hue.

The bride's table was placed at one end of the sunken garden and presented a scene of floral beauty in the shades of yellow, orchid and blue. The table was overlaid with yellow satin veiled by imported lace with a cover of sheerest lavender organdie veiling the lace cloth. The centerpiece was formed of a plateau of yellow roses, blue and lavender sweet-peas, out of which arose a tall silver vase filled with yellow roses. Around the central decoration were six small silver baskets holding yellow roses and blue and lavender sweet peas, the handles of which were tied with fluffy butterfly bows of blue, lavender and yellow tulle. At each end of the beautifully appointed table were epergnes holding yellow roses and blue sweet peas resting on plateaux of these lovely flowers.

Elaborate decorations prevailed throughout the lower floor of the spacious home. In the music room a color motif of red and white was effectively carried out with red roses and calla lilies. Yellow daisies, blue delphinium and red roses were attractively arranged in the library and in the living room Easter lilies, long-stemmed pink roses and blue delphinium were used in profusion with palms and foliage plants providing a rich background. The chandeliers and wall brackets were garlanded with smilax.

Wedding Trip.

Mr. Ferguson and his bride left immediately after the reception for a wedding trip to Canada, where they will spend some time at Banff Springs and Lake Louise. They will return to Omaha, Neb., July 1, where they will reside at the Blackstone hotel. The bride's going-away costume was a Patou model fashioned of cocoon chongella cloth with which she wore a blouse of ecru lace. She wore an Agnes model hat in a small close-fitting shape in a shade matching her gown, and a shoulder bouquet of gardenias.

Among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. James H. Drake, of Vera Cruz, Mexico; Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wilkerson, of Hearne, Texas; Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Ferguson, of Brennan, Texas; Mrs. Charles Gaddis, of Dallas, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Organ, Mrs. W. P. Dunn, Gene Lee, Jack Fain and William Fain, all of Atlanta.

Prior to the marriage of this popular couple, who are representatives of distinguished southern families, a number of social affairs were given in their honor and for the out-of-town guests here for the wedding.

House Party.

Sidney Jordan entertained a congenial group of members of the younger set at his lodge on Lake Burton at a house party last week. Out-of-door sports formed the chief entertainment for the party and swimming, boating, fishing and picnics were enjoyed daily.

The guests included: Misses Martha Gunn, Frances Gunn, Elizabeth Kelley, Katherine Graves, of Quincy, Fla.; Mary Lawrence Baker, of Asheville, N. C.; Augusta King, Mary Evelyn Martin, Mrs. T. M. Myrick, Sidney Jordan, J. L. Benton, E. C. Kelly, of Monticello; Heard Ballard and Kenneth Salley.

Miss Eberhardt Weds E. J. Saywell Jr. at Quiet Ceremony

Beauty and simplicity marked the wedding of Miss Lillian Eberhardt and E. J. Saywell Jr., which was quietly solemnized at All Saints Episcopal church yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. W. W. Memminger and Rev. E. J. Saywell, father of the bridegroom, performed the ceremony in the presence of relatives and close friends.

The church was decorated in palms and field daisies and the sanctuary was lovely in this setting with cathedral candelabra interspersed among the floral background.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother. Emory Stroberg, of Macon, Ga. E. H. Wade acted as best man.

Mrs. Saywell is the youngest daughter of Mrs. C. T. Eberhardt and the late Mr. Eberhardt, a prominent manufacturer of Fort Valley, Ga. She is a graduate of Fort Valley High school and attended the Georgia State Teachers' College for Women. Mr. Saywell is the only son of Rev. and Mrs. E. J. Saywell and is a popular young businessman of this city.

The bride wore a traveling suit of blue with matching hat and accessories. Her flowers were a shoulder corsage of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Mr. and Mrs. Saywell left for a motor trip to points of interest in Florida.

Griffin Weddings Are of Interest

GRIFFIN, Ga., June 6.—A marriage of cordial interest was that of Miss Jessie Steele and George Edward Howard, both of Griffin, which was solemnized Sunday evening, the Rev. G. R. Brown performing the service at his home on the Milner road in the presence of relatives and a few close friends. The bride was gowned in a spring model of blue crepe with accessories in matching tones. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Howard will make their home at Orchard Hill, near Griffin. Mrs. Howard is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Steele, of Griffin, and is a young woman of attractive personality and charm. She is a graduate of the Griffin High school. Mr. Howard is the son of Colonel and Mrs. C. P. Howard, of Orchard Hill. He has made his home in Griffin for a number of years, and holds a responsible position with the Texas company.

Mrs. William Jones Sams has announced the engagement of her daughter, Martha, to James Crawford Tribble, of Cassville and Adairsville. Miss Sams is the younger daughter of Mrs. Sams and the late Mr. Sams, well-known Griffin citizens. Her only sister is Mrs. William Boyt Griffin, of Easton, Pa. Miss Sams is a first honor graduate of the Griffin High school and later received her bachelor of arts degree from the Georgia State College for Women in Milledgeville. She had a post-graduate course at Emory University, and for the past three years has been teaching in Georgia high schools. Miss Sams has traveled extensively in the United States, Canada and Mexico, and possesses both beauty and charm. Mr. Tribble is the son of Mrs. Lydia Tribble, of Cassville. He received his bachelor of arts degree from Furman University in South Carolina, later taking post-graduate work at Emory University. He is superintendent of schools in Adairsville. The wedding of Miss Sams and Mr. Tribble will be a quiet event of June.

Miss Asbury Weds Mr. Crouch At Park Street Methodist Church

The wedding of Miss Mary Gwynne Asbury and Harry Cornelius Crouch was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the Park Street Methodist church, the Rev. H. H. Jones, pastor of the church, performing the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of relatives and friends. The altar was banked with luxuriant palms, interspersed with floor vases of white gladioli. A large vase of white gladioli flanked by seven-branched cathedral candelabra, holding white tapers graced the altar. Smilax garlanded the altar rail, forming a bower of luxuriant green and white as the setting for the impressive ceremony. Pews reserved for members of the families were designated by bows of tulle showered with sweetpeas.

Mrs. E. E. Aiken, organist, rendered a program of nuptial music. Preceding the marriage service, Miss Marie Green sang "Because," and Mrs. James Marvin Hill sang "Oh, Promise Me." "To a Wild Rose" and "Venetian Love Song" were rendered during the ceremony. Mendelssohn's wedding chorus was used as the recessional.

The ushers were: Hal Asbury, brother of the bride, and Leon Green Jr. Mrs. Leon Green Jr., as matron of honor, entered with Larkin Cathcart. She was lovely in a gown of blue chiffon, made princess style. The high waistline was marked by a wide sash of faille pink ribbon and her slippers were of blue moire. A picture hat of blue horsehair braid completed her costume. She carried a bouquet of Columbia roses and delphinium, showered with orchid sweetpeas and tied with pink satin ribbon.

Miss Jessie Asbury, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of blue chiffon, similar to that worn by the matron of honor. Her hat was of blue horsehair braid and her slippers of blue moire. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and delphinium, showered with sweetpeas and tied with pink satin ribbon.

The lovely bride, who entered with her father, James Henry Asbury, by whom she was given in marriage, was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, James Marvin Hill. The bride was charming in her bridal costume, a Chanel model of pink lace, fashioned on long graceful lines with V-neck and long flowing sleeves. A picture hat of pink horsehair braid and pink moire slippers completed her costume. She carried a bouquet of white roses showered with valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. Crouch left for a wedding trip by motor to points of interest in Florida and upon their return will be at home at 491 Seminole avenue, N. E. Mrs. Crouch wore for traveling a smart ensemble of navy felt crepe with accessories to match. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Asbury, of Clarkesville, Ga. Her sisters are Miss Jessie Asbury and Miss Dolly Asbury, and her brothers are Wells Asbury, of Newark, N. J.; Hal Asbury, Robert Asbury and Jack Asbury. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Crouch, and his brother is Paul Crouch, of LaGrange.

Miss Ross To Wed Lt. W. B. Forse Jr. In September

COLUMBUS, Ga., June 6.—Of wide social significance to both the civilian and military social contingents is the announcement made by Major Frank Ross, U. S. A., of Fort Benning, and Mrs. Ross of the engagement of their daughter, Winifred Nancy, to William B. Forse Jr., lieutenant, U. S. A. The wedding will be solemnized in Washington, D. C., in September.

Miss Ross is a charming young member of the younger contingent of Fort Benning and is a member of the Debutante Club. She has a host of friends, both in Atlanta and at Fort McPherson, where she has often visited as the guest of her cousins, Major General Frank Ross McCoy and Mrs. McCoy.

Lieutenant Forse is the son of Colonel William B. Forse, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Forse, of San Francisco, and is a member of the graduating class of the Officers' School at Fort Benning. He and his bride will sail in October for station in Panama, where he has been recently detailed for duty.

New Garden Club To Be Organized.

The ladies of Avondale Estates plan to organize a garden club to stimulate interest in individual civic gardening enterprises.

Mrs. L. O. Freeman, president of fifth district, Federation of Georgia, and Mrs. J. R. Bachman, chairman of fifth district, garden division, will assist in the formation of the new club. The first meeting is called for 3 o'clock Wednesday, June 10, at the home of Mrs. Paul J. McGovern, 22 Dartlimouth avenue, Avondale Estates.

Johnson-McMurry Wedding Is Solemnized in New York

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 6.—A wedding which centered widespread interest was solemnized in the Little Church Around the Corner at high noon today, when Miss Helen Johnson, of Winston-Salem, N. C., became the bride of the Rev. Carl Walker McMurry, of Atlanta. The church was decorated with palms, ferns and white roses, while tall cathedral candelabra graced the altar. Prior to the ceremony a program of nuptial music was rendered.

Following the ceremony the Rev. McMurry and Mrs. McMurry will go on a wedding trip abroad. They will sail aboard the S. S. Carmania for a visit to the British Isles. From there they will go through the Mediterranean for a stay in Egypt and Palestine. Their interesting itinerary includes Syria, Turkey, Greece and Italy. They plan to return to the states in September and will go to Atlanta to make their home where Mr. McMurry will continue his work as pastor of the Morningside Presbyterian church. While on his travels Mr. McMurry will render service as educational director of the Travel Institute of Bible research.

Accomplished Bride.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Stella Bell Johnson and the late Rufus Eugene Johnson, of Winston-Salem, N. C. Mr. Johnson was connected with the Reynolds Tobacco Company during his lifetime and was identified with the civic, religious and fraternal life of Winston-Salem. Her mother comes from Southampton county, Virginia, and her forebears were among the leading educators of the state. Her paternal grandfather was Eugene Johnson, of North Carolina, and a brother of James M. Johnson, of Atlanta. Her paternal grandmother is Mrs. Annie Le Grand, who resides in Winston-Salem, and is a native of Richmond county, North Carolina. Her maternal grandmother was the beautiful Mollie Gillette, of Virginia, prior to her marriage to Captain Joseph Robert Bell, a prominent businessman of Petersburg, Va., and a native of the Isle of Wight county, Virginia.

Mrs. McMurry is a talented young woman with striking beauty and charm. She obtained her bachelor of arts degree from Salem College in North Carolina as well as her bachelor of music degree. She studied advanced piano and voice at the Damrosch School of Music in New York. Her civic master of music was obtained under the direction of Dr. John Finley Williamson, of Deyton Westminster Choir school. For the past winter she has been completing her education at the Institute of Musical Art in New York and her marriage took place immediately following the commencement exercises.

Popular Pastor.

The bridegroom is the beloved and popular pastor of the Morningside Presbyterian church of Atlanta. He is chaplain of the Morningside Lodge No. 295, Free and Accepted Masons. He received his bachelor of arts degree from the Presbyterian College of South Carolina and his master of arts from the University of South Carolina. Mr. McMurry is a graduate of the Columbia Theological Seminary and obtained his master of theology degree from Princeton Theological Seminary. He is a member of the Chi Omega Chapter of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

During the World War Rev. McMurry served as ensign in the United States navy with duty aboard the U. S. S. Roanoke as communication officer. He was also navigation officer of the United States shipping board just following the close of the World War. His brother, Major C. M. McMurry, served with the third division in France during the war. His father is Harvey Pickens, prominent land owner of Lancaster county South Carolina, and his mother was Miss Margaret McCain, of North Carolina, prior to her marriage. Mr. McMurry's only sister resides in Atlanta with her son, Dr. William M. Dunn. Both his maternal and paternal grandparents are identified with the social, civic and religious development of the Carolinas. His grandfather, John Harvey McMurry, served with Wheeler's cavalry during the Civil War. His grandmother was the daughter of Colonel Thomas W. Huey. On his mother's side he traces his descent from the McCain, Walker and McCorkle families of North Carolina.

Garden Parties Honor Brides And Visitors in Columbus, Ga.

COLUMBUS, Ga., June 6.—Mrs. Floyd Bullock entertained at a garden party Friday afternoon in the river gardens on the estate of her daughter, Mrs. Tom Huston. Mrs. Bullock had as her honor guest her daughter, Mrs. Malcolm McKinnon, who before her marriage last week was Miss Sarah Crowell Bullock. The picturesque gardens, with winding, flower-bordered walks leading down to the river, formed a beautiful setting for the affair. Mrs. Bullock received her guests in the parlor, assisted by Miss Helen Dudley and Miss Latimer Watson. Assisting in entertaining were Mesdames Tom Huston, Malcolm McKinnon, W. H. Young, Jr., William Blanchard Howard and Charles M. Woolfolk Jr.

Assisting in receiving were Miss Elsie Julius, Mrs. Eugene Cook, of Wrightsville, Ga.; Mrs. Harbin Park, Mrs. John Thompson and Mrs. Charlie Frank Williams. Miss Sarah Bussey and Miss Evelyn Daniel served punch.

Miss Margaret Walton was hostess at a garden party Thursday at her home as a compliment to her guests, Miss Elizabeth Mills, of Greenville, S. C., and Miss Dorsey White, of Birmingham. Receiving with Miss Walton and the honor guests were Misses Sara Molder, Jane McEwen, Carolyn Wade, Finley Bize and Marguerite Struppa. Presiding at the punch bowl was Miss Helen Campbell and assisting were Misses Carrie Dudley, Mildred Edge, Ann Dexter, Dorothy Dudley and Frances McCann. The guests were met at the entrance to the garden by Miss Natilu McKenny, Miss Joan Raht and Miss Sarah Slate.

A group of members of the Big Eddy Club were hosts Thursday evening at a ravioli dinner in compliment to the state highway commissioners who spent Thursday and Friday in Columbus. The honor guests were Judge John L. Philips, of Louisville; W. C. Vereen, of Moultrie; Captain J. W. Barnett, of Athens; Mr. McWhorter and Mr. Wright, of Atlanta. The club was decorated with palm fronds and southern moss. White willow fish baskets held sprays of flowering shrubs. The guests included the honor guests and Leighton McPherson, Ernest Dismukes, Cecil Neill, T. C. Crawford, Rhodes Browne, George Woodruff, James W. Woodruff, Frank Foley, Henry Crawford, Herman Swift, Judge Frank McLaughlin and Cooper Campbell.

Southern Plantation Supper To Be Given Tuesday at Boxwood

Mr. and Mrs. Veazey Rainwater will entertain Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock at an old-fashioned southern plantation supper at their home, Boxwood, on Springdale road, the occasion to be followed by dancing. The affair will honor the hosts' three sons, Veazey Jr., Brown and Crawford Rainwater, who returned yesterday from Principia in St. Louis, and members of their house party who are guests at Boxwood, including Misses Sally Brown Sawyer, of Beaumont, Texas; Elsa Sommer, of New York; Angeline Williams, of Chicago; Ann Stewart, of Huntsville, Ala.; Gladys Tanzler, of New York; Jane Gardner, of Wrentham, Mass., and Marvin Conklin, of Kansas City, Mo.; Bob Utley, of Detroit, Mich.; Mershon Sawyer, of Beaumont, Texas; Bob Lindsley, of Chicago, and Cleve Clayton, of Hollywood, Cal.

The occasion will assemble a large number of popular young Atlanta society and an interesting and colorful note will be added by the cotton costumes worn by the guests representing characters in southern history and similar to those worn by the young guests' ancestors.

Miss Martha Brown Edmondson entertained at dinner last evening at the Piedmont Driving Club dinner-dance in honor of her nephews, Veazey Rainwater Jr., Brown and Crawford Rainwater, and members of their house party.

Summer Brides

Sketched by Cleo Mansfield

Miss Sarah Morris, of Athens, Ga.

MISS SARAH McCURDY MORRIS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Morris, of Athens, Ga., and a popular belle of this state, whose marriage to Albert Burton Mobley Jr., of Atlanta, will be a brilliant social event of Thursday, June 11, at the home of the bride-elect's parents. The occasion will assemble a number of out-of-town guests, including relatives and friends of the bride-to-be and bridegroom-elect, who are representatives of distinguished Georgia families.

Service Star Legion President Makes Appeal for Summer Work

Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, state president of the Service Star Legion, outlines the history of the organization in the following article and makes an appeal to members to continue the program of work planned for the summer months:

"Summer is coming on and as usual we hold no regular meetings, but let us not forget that our prayers and work for the disabled soldiers of the World War and their loved ones must never stop. Let us remember that during the dark days of 1917 and 1918 we worked unceasingly for our boys at the front and at home we hung the service star in our windows, proud that the world might know that one or more of our loved ones was serving his country. When the soldiers returned we found that they needed us more than ever, and right now we hear through competent judges that the peak of suffering and need of our soldiers will not be passed until 1940.

"Do not forget that we were first organized in 1918 as War Mothers of America, but in 1919 in convention in Baltimore, Md., those present realized the importance of one large patriotic organization, with the result that 10 other organizations affiliated with the War Mothers of America and adopted the new name of Service Star Legion, suggested by the service star flag which hung in the window during the service men's absence from home. The 11 organizations thus forming the Service Star Legion were: American Mothers of National Defenders, Daughters of Liberty, Daughters of the Nation, Mothers' Club of Virginia, Mothers of Democracy, Sammies' Mothers' Club, Sunset Division of Service League, War Mothers of America, White Star War Hospital Service, Women of American Patriots and Woman's Patriotic League of America.

"The slogan of the league is 'Service.' Banded together for service to God, country and humanity and to promote peace and brotherhood among men and nations, the women relatives of the men and women who actively participated in the World War, associated themselves together and established the Service Star Legion.

Non-Sectarian.

"Their loyalty and co-operation since have made the Service Star Legion the largest independent woman's organization that has come out of the World War, and in point of service they are the oldest of either men or women's organizations. The Service Star Legion is non-sectarian, and is not partisan politically.

"The purposes of the Service Star Legion are represented by the five points in the star, viz: Sisterhood, education, relief, remembrance and vigilance. As outlined in our national constitution our objects are: (1) To promote and guard the welfare of soldiers, sailors and the mariners who were engaged in the World War and to lend aid and comfort to their families. (2) To preserve and cherish the memory of the men and women who sacrificed their lives for the liberty of the world. (3) To foster the spirit of sisterhood and democracy among women. (4) To co-operate in all civic and patriotic work. (5) To protect and preserve American ideals and traditions.

"The Service Star Legion was incorporated under the laws of Maryland in 1920, and operates through state divisions and local chapters. Ten paid-up members can apply for a charter and constitute a chapter. According to our constitution and by-laws, grandmothers, mothers, wives, sisters and aunts of any man or woman actively and honorably engaged in the military or naval service of the United States of America in the prosecution of the World War are eligible to active membership. Any army and naval nurse is so eligible and the women enlisted as yeoman. Thus we see Service Star Legion appeals to every woman's heart, for we everyone had the same heartaches and the same yearnings over the loved ones called alike to the same war. In the gold star division are listed the names of women whose relatives gave their lives for the liberty of the world. A junior branch provides for the training of children in patriotic service.

Oldest Organization.

"The Service Star Legion was the oldest organization coming out of the World War; was the first to own and publish its own magazine; was the first to establish an educational loan fund for the members of the families of World War veterans; conceived and carried out the first gardening project for shell-shocked boys; planted the first memorial grove of trees in 1919 in Druid Hill park, Baltimore, Md.; conducted the first poppy sales in this country; was the first organization to adopt the poppy as the memorial flower, and Service Star Legion has established a record of useful activity in individual effort and co-operation with all veterans' organizations and their auxiliaries.

"Let us remember that our special call is to the disabled soldiers, whether in hospitals or at home, and that their families need not only a helping hand but sympathy.

"Remember the foreigners in our midst, for in the past Service Star Legion has been so active in aiding them that we have borne off the silver cup given by the general federation of clubs for Americanization With the spirit of vigilance we can be a power for good in these times of unrest.

"As we enjoy our vacations, let us plain for Service Star Legion and wherever possible let us watch for every opportunity to aid the disabled American veterans.

"Each patriotic organization has its own duty to perform. There is a place for each one and let us co-operate but let us remember that many of our boys, in the late war, gave their lives for our freedom and to make democracy sure to the whole world. It is therefore our duty to see that it is fulfilled, to raise monuments to these departed heroes and to help the many that are worse than dead by brightening their lives and educating the children of those less fortunate than ourselves. Let us work for our educational and relief fund during the summer for we have pledged $500 for this work.

"Our Georgia division has been a power during the past seven years and with every member of Service Star Legion a paid-up and active member we can make this a great year, not only in aiding our disabled veterans but growing bigger and better ourselves in working for others.

"Let us try to increase the number of chapters in the state, realizing that Service Star Legion is the banding together of women in a common cause, thereby drawing them closer together, and is an uplifting influence in every community where organized. Service Star Legion must grow and serve on, erecting not only visible memorials of bronze and stone and living trees, but a more fitting memorial, a greater America, nearer the ideal of its founders."

Mrs. Lee Heads Mountain View Club.

Mrs. John Lee was elected president of the Mountain View Woman's Club at the meeting held at Oakwood, the home of Mrs. W. F. McKenzie, Wednesday. The other officers elected were: Mrs. Frank Davis, first vice president; Mrs. M. W. Spiker, second vice president; Mrs. John Blackburn, secretary; Mrs. Jim Anderson, assistant secretary, and Miss Mattie Mae Wright, treasurer. Miss Mattie Mae Wright, the retiring president, presided. Mrs. M. W. Spiker gave a reading entitled "The Little Things That We Forget." A vocal solo, "In the Garden of My Heart," was rendered by Miss Helen McKenzie, and an instrumental solo, Chopin's "Etude," was presented by Mrs. Pierpont Spiker.

Among those present were: Mesdames George Brown, M. W. Spiker, J. V. Ashmore, John Lee, Dudley Wright, W. F. McKenzie, Frank C. Davis, Nellie McCrackin, Pierpont Spiker, Elmer Anderson and Misses Mattie Mae Wright and Helen McKenzie.

Atlanta Y. W. C. A. Camp Highland Holds Official Opening June 15

The staff recently selected for the Y. W. C. A. Camp Highland will be entertained at a number of entertainments preceding the official opening of Highland June 15. Several of the counselors from other cities will arrive in Atlanta the latter part of the week and will be guests of the Y. W. C. A. residence, 82 Baker street, N. W. Saturday afternoon, June 13, Mrs. Fred Patterson, chairman of the camp committee, will entertain at a swimming party and tea at the Druid Hills Country Club in honor of the camp staff. She will be assisted in entertaining by Miss Clara Nolen and other members of the Y. W. C. A. staff.

Sunday afternoon the "camp family" will motor to Highland, where they will have everything in readiness to receive the first campers early Monday morning. A number of registrations have been received at information desk, 37 Auburn avenue, and Miss Ruth Ludeking, director, is expecting a record-breaking crowd for the first two weeks, when girls under 13 years of age may be guests. After July 1 only those above this age limit will be permitted to register.

The camp family includes Miss Ruth Ludeking, business girls' secretary of the Y. W. C. A., who is to be the director; Mrs. L. M. Moore, of the North Avenue Presbyterian school faculty, who will be head counselor; Miss Virginia Wilbanks, of the Albany High school, who returns as dietitian; Mrs. Carl B. Walker, former director of the Y. cafeteria, who is acting as consulting dietitian.

Counselors Selected.

The group of senior and junior counselors have been selected from a large number of applicants because of their outstanding ability. Miss Virginia Carmichael, who was one of the favorite counselors last season, returns as instructor in swimming and athletics after a year at the University of Virginia. Miss Nancy White, who will direct dramatics and recreation, is fitted for her position, as she has enjoyed professional stage experience and has taught in Chicago and New York. Miss White has been in charge of the Drama Workshop, sponsored by the Business Girls' League, during the past six months and is well known among the businesswomen of the city. Miss Annie Laurie Liggin, who has been in charge of arts and crafts at the Shrine hospital, will be handicraft counselor. Miss Mary Dimon, of G. S. C. W., who has specialized in the study of flowers and birds, will act as nature lore counselor and also as office assistant.

Junior counselors are Miss Martha Parker, of G. S. C. W., who will plan the vesper services; Miss Dorothy Ramage, of Agnes Scott, counselor of music and sports; Miss Clarchen Karston, of Girls' High school, who will assist with swimming and in the camp store, and Miss Marian West, also of the Girls' High school, music counselor.

Plans Outlined.

Junior assistants were guests at Highland June 6-7 for a setting-up conference, when plans for the season were outlined by Miss Ludeking.

Although Camp Highland is not opened officially until June 15, many groups, such as Girl Reserves, Sunday school classes, businesswomen's organizations and others, have enjoyed picnic and week-end trips there since early spring. It is interesting to note that over 427 guests registered from April 18 to May 31, 1931.

Miss Nannie Burwell Crow, health educator director of the "Y," is spending several weeks at Camp Arcola, Arcola, Pa.

Hardy-Reeves Rites.

THOMASTON, Ga., June 6.—A wedding of cordial interest was that of Miss Virginia Broughton Hardy and Joel Reeves, which was solemnized Friday afternoon, May 29, at the home of the bride's father, J. B. Hardy, with the Rev. C. S. Durden officiating. The wedding was witnessed by only a few close friends and members of the families. The bride is the elder daughter of J. B. Hardy, editor of the Thomaston Times, and Mrs. Lucile Blackburn Hardy. She attended Shorter College and Brenau College, where she was a popular member of the Alpha Delta Phi sorority and is an attractive member of the young social contingent of Thomaston. Mr. Reeves is the elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Reeves, of Thomaston. He attended the Emory Academy and the University of Georgia, and is a member of the Chi Psi fraternity. He is connected with several commercial and farming interests in Upson county. Mr. and Mrs. Reeves will make their home in Thomaston.

University Dances For Commencement Are Announced

ATHENS, Ga., June 6.—The first commencement social program to be sponsored by the senior class of the University of Georgia has been set for June 15-17 and arrangements have been completed. Mark Hollis, of Savannah, is chairman of the senior class social committee.

At a special meeting of the class held last week Chancellor Charles M. Snelling approved of the class sponsoring the program. Two dances, a banquet and a buffet supper Monday and Tuesday, June 15 and 16, preceding graduation exercises Wednesday, June 17, are included as the features of the program.

Monday evening a buffet supper for members of the class will be given in Memorial Hall and it will be followed by the traditional costume dance in Woodruff Hall. The banquet will be held at the Georgian hotel Tuesday evening and will be followed by a second dance. The occasion will be strictly a class event, although several house parties have been planned by the various fraternities. All students and their visitors are invited to both dances.

The class will participate in the university day exercises and alumni day exercises to be held June 15 and 16, respectively.

Miss Russell Weds Robert E. Collier.

CARLTON, Ga., June 6.—The marriage of Miss Sydney Louise Russell and Robert Emmett Collier, of Atlanta, was solemnized June 1. Rev. Ralph Stewart, pastor of the Baptist tabernacle, performed the ceremony in the presence of a few relatives.

The bride was lovely wearing a powder blue ensemble with accessories to match. She is the attractive daughter of Mrs. J. D. Evans, of Carlton, and a graduate of Piedmont hospital in the class of '29.

Mr. Collier, the son of Mrs. R. E. Collier, of Atlanta, is connected with the Standard Oil Company.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Collier left for a motor trip to points of interest in Florida. Upon their return they will be at home at 1215 Virginia avenue, Atlanta.

Miss Sparkman Weds Rev. Satterlee In Columbia, S. C.

Mrs. George Lewis has returned from Columbia, S. C., where she attended the wedding of her niece, Miss Frances Sparkman, to Rev. Capus Satterlee.

The wedding is of interest to a large circle of Atlanta friends of the bride.

The marriage was solemnized on the evening of June 2 in Trinity church, Bishop Kirkman Finlay and the Rev. Henry Philips, rector of Trinity, officiating.

The brunette beauty of the bride was emphasized by her wedding gown of white satin. The church was elaborately decorated. Blue hydrangeas and pink oleanders emphasized the blue gowns of the bridesmaids, who carried arm bouquets of pink roses, double larkspur and sweet peas.

The bridegroom is one of the most popular young clergymen in the diocese of South Carolina. He is the son of Mrs. Satterlee, of Columbia, and the late Captain Satterlee, of the United States army, and the grandson of the late Bishop Ellison Capus, of South Carolina. He and his bride sailed from New York Friday for Haiti, where the Rev. Satterlee will supply for three months the Episcopal church in Port-au-Prince and where he and his bride will be the guests of Bishop Carson. The bride is the niece of Colonel Z. D. Harrison, George Harrison and Mrs. E. Y. Clarke.

Music Club Closes For Summer.

With the close of the season for music, the Atlanta Music Center activities will be suspended until September 1. The center has had a busy and constructive year. The report presented at the last director's meeting showed a wide and varied scope of activities in music education work. One hundred and eighteen lectures were given from October until June. Thirty-five schools were visited, an interest in music was created through the P.-T. A. groups in Atlanta and in the state. Work has been done also with organizations and factory groups. Miss Helen Coyne Riley, director, will give aid next year to the Tallulah Falls Mountain school and will assume the directorship of the junior department of the Atlanta Music Club. The offices for the center will be located at Rich's, Inc., on the fifth floor, after September 1.

Miss Riley left Saturday to attend the National Federation of Music Clubs convention at San Francisco. She will accompany Madame Ogla Samaroff, well-known concert pianist and educator, who will be one of the speakers at the convention.

Dancing Class Meets.

Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock an interesting entertainment will be staged at the meeting of the class for correct ballroom dancing, sponsored by the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce. The meeting will be in Hall No. 1 of the Chamber building and will feature the presentation to the board of directors of the woman's division of a splendid electric Columbia-Kolster instrument that has been purchased by the dance class. A program of solo dances and ensembles will be given, followed by the presentation by Executive Vice President B. S. Barker, of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. The gift will be accepted by Mrs. Nellie Nix Edwards, president of the woman's division, representing the board of directors. After this program those present will be invited to join in a social dance. The public is invited to attend.

The class has been notably successful, and is completing its sixth year of continuous operation, under the instruction of Mrs. Lillian A. Dove. It will continue meeting during the summer, every Tuesday evening and the public will be welcomed to its meetings.

Dodd-Thomas Nuptial Plans Of Interest

Centering widespread interest is the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Elizabeth Dodd and Everett Thomas. The wedding will be solemnized at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, June 17, at the First Presbyterian church, with the Rev. Dr. J. Sprole Lyons performing the ceremony in the presence of a fashionable assemblage. The beautiful bride-elect, who is the younger daughter of Harry Dodd and the late Mrs. Elizabeth Collier Dodd, has chosen for her matron of honor her sister, Mrs. Sam Worley. Her bridesmaids will be a pair of attractive members of the younger contingent, Miss Virginia Courts and Miss Salina Wilson, of Orlando, Fla. Ed Merritt will act as Mr. Thomas' best man and the groomsmen will be Sam Worley, Henry Morgan, Humphrey Wager and John Dodd.

Following the wedding Harry Dodd will entertain at a reception at his home on Peachtree circle. The honor guests will include the members of the wedding party.

A series of parties have been planned in honor of Miss Dodd and Mr. Thomas to take place during the coming week. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Gould Jr. entertain at tea this afternoon in honor of Miss Dodd, Mr. Thomas and the members of the wedding party. Miss Mary Elizabeth Warren entertains at a luncheon Wednesday, June 10, at Brookhaven, the Capital City Country Club, with Miss Dodd as honor guest. Among those planning additional entertainments to fete this charming young bride-to-be are Mrs. Charles Whitner Jr., Miss Virginia Courts, Mrs. Wallace Kilgore and Miss Dorothy Collier.

Atlantans Journey To Sea Island.

SEA ISLAND BEACH, Ga., June 6.—The Atlanta coterie here is being augmented daily by representative members of society and Friday chronicled the arrival for the week-end of Dr. and Mrs. Julian Riley and their sister, Mrs. Julia Murphy Whitehead. Arriving at the same hour were Cator Woolford and his daughters, Charlotte and Isobel. The little girls began to plan at an 8 o'clock breakfast just how they would spend the day. First, they would go on the beach and search for shells, and afterward they would don bathing suits and swim in the pool, and their excited little voices betrayed how eagerly they looked forward to the realization of these plans.

Other attractive additions from Atlanta who arrived for the week-end are Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Atkinson, who are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Dick at their cottage. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Harris Jr. arrived, also, for the week-end, which will be very gay here.

Miss White And Mr. Walsh Wed in N. Y.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., June 6.—The marriage of Thomas Edward Walsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ogden Walsh, of Atlanta, and Miss Mercedes Joan White, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Mathias White, of 4 Orchard place, New Rochelle, was fashionably solemnized here this morning at 11 o'clock in the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Charles A. Branton, of Andover, Mass., performed the ceremony, which was followed by an elaborate wedding breakfast for relatives and friends.

The beautiful bride was given in marriage by her father, E. Mathias White. She wore a becoming imported gown of lustrous white satin, fashioned on long, flowing lines. The bridal veil of white tulle completely enveloped her slender, graceful figure, and she carried an arm bouquet of valley lilies.

Miss Irene Dolores White, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor. Her gown of Nile green eyelet-embroidered batiste was worn with a becoming wide-brimmed hat, slippers and other accessories of a matching shade. An arm bouquet of Talisman roses completed her costume.

Two other sisters of the bride, Mrs. Osmun Whiting Lorini, of Yonkers, N. Y., and Mrs. Randall Michael O'Rourke, of Detroit, Mich., were the bridesmaids. They wore dainty gowns of ot

Miss Sutton Weds Mr. Beeks At Valdosta Church Ceremony

VALDOSTA, Ga., June 6.—A marriage of cordial interest was that of Miss Sudie Sutton to Edwin Albert Beeks, which was quietly solemnized at the First Baptist church, Valdosta, Ga., Thursday. The ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Henley M. Fugate, pastor of that church, in the presence of relatives and close friends.

The bride was smartly gowned in a model of aquamarine crepe, fashioned on princess lines, with flowing skirt and ruffled sleeves. The bodice at the front was molded by white lace and georgette, the sleeves being fashioned in the same manner. Her hat was a small model in aquamarine straw, with white trimming and was matched in tone by her other accessories. A bride's Bible completed the costume. For traveling the bride was attired in a tan crepe model and all accessories were in harmony.

Mrs. Beeks is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thomas Sutton, of Rochelle, Ga. Her father, a planter and formerly prominently identified in the turpentine business, is a pioneer citizen of Wilcox county and one of the major founders of the social, civic and religious life of the county. She received her education at Shorter College, Rome, Ga., and for the past several years has taught in the Valdosta public schools.

The bridegroom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Lot Beeks, of Huntington, Ind. His father has been connected with the Erie railroad for more than a quarter of a century. He received his college training at Purdue University, LaFayette, Ind., being foreign student secretary on the Y. M. C. A. board. Before attending the university Mr. Beeks spent a number of years in the experimental department of the General Electric Company, at Fort Wayne, Ind., and he is engaged in the photographic business.

A bit of sentiment connected with the marriage was the date of the ceremony being selected for it was the wedding anniversary of the bridegroom's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Beeks left immediately after the ceremony for a motor trip in Georgia and Florida. They plan to visit the home of the bride and will also visit the bridegroom's parents before making an extended trip through the northern states.

Druid Hills Methodist W. M. S. Plans Annual June Day Program

Celebrating the half year of achievement and gathering inspirational impetus for the coming months, the Woman's Missionary Society of the Druid Hills Methodist church will hold its annual June Day program Tuesday, June 9.

June Day at Druid Hills has become an institution, being eagerly anticipated each year. It is always largely attended, many visitors coming from other churches. The program is always one of rare interest, presenting authorities and distinguished speakers. Tuesday will be no exception. The sessions begin promptly at 10 o'clock and will be presided over by Miss Annie May Broach, president.

Mrs. W. A. Albright, who is in charge of the program, announces the following speakers: Dr. Gordon Singleton, who will speak on "Forestalling Future Illiteracy;" Miss Carrie Lou Allgood, who will discuss "Children in Industry," and Miss Clara Nolan, of the Young Woman's Christian Association; Miss Newell, from the Child Welfare group, and Mrs. Mary Russell, of the W. C. T. U., will make short talks. Educational development in China will be discussed by Mrs. Adie J. Moncrief.

Special music will be rendered with Mrs. R. J. Banta in charge. The children of the Junior Church will offer several numbers. Mrs. Alva G. Maxwell is in charge of the entertainment during lunch hour. Dr. J. Sprole Lyons will lead the devotional. Lunch will be served by the ladies of the church to all guests.

Group Meetings of Interest To Baptist Church Women

Annual rally of the second district of the B. W. M. U. of Atlanta Association was held Wednesday at Orchard Knob Baptist church, with the secretary, Mrs. W. L. Allen, presiding. A fine program had been arranged by Mrs. Allen. Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, superintendent of the Atlanta B. W. M. U., was present and spoke. Other speakers were Mrs. T. H. Piedmont Association, B. W. M. U., Holds All-Day Session in Waycross

Mrs. W. H. Robinson, publicity chairman of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of the Piedmont Association, writes the following:

"Executive board of the Woman's Missionary Union of the Piedmont Association met in all-day session Wednesday at the home of Mrs. H. J. Gibson in Waycross. Reports of chairmen and round-table discussion of plans for the summer activities of the union featured the meeting. This is the golden anniversary year of the organization of the Georgia B. W. M. U. and it is the request of the missionary societies of this association that all societies meet their apportionments for the Baptist co-operative program and thus be able to go to the anniversary convention as a "victorious union." Anniversary aims are "prayer, Bible study and golden gifts for the Master.'

"Mrs. B. G. Porter, superintendent of the association, presided over the session and the opening devotional was conducted by Mrs. W. T. Calloway, of Waycross. Reports of different phases of the work showed interest and energy expended by both chairmen and societies.

"At noon a happy social hour, with luncheon served by the hostess, added much in the way of good fellowship to the occasion. Those present were: Mrs. B. J. Porter, superintendent; Mrs. J. B. Cason, acting secretary; Mrs. J. A. Jones, treasurer; Mrs. R. L. Shipes, of Waycross, stewardship chairman; Mrs. W. T. Calloway, Waycross, mission study chairman; Mrs. A. C. Blythe, Waycross, personal service chairman; Mrs. H. J. Gibson, Waycross, white cross chairman; Mrs. W. B. Lee, Brunswick, officer at large; Miss Mabel Willingham, Waycross, young people's leader, and Mrs. W. H. Robinson, Folkston, publicity chairman. Secretaries of districts present were: Mrs. J. H. Johnson, Brunswick; Mrs. D. G. Horton, Jesup. Visitors in attendance were: Mrs. W. E. Banks and Mrs. S. P. Mills from Folkston."

Briefly Told

Mrs. C. R. Stauffer, accompanied by her husband, Rev. C. R. Stauffer, has gone to Eureka, Ill., where Rev. Stauffer will preach the baccalaureate sermon at Eureka College Sunday morning. Next week they will return bringing with them their daughter, Miss Dorothy, who has been a student at the college during the past year.

The many friends over the state of Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary-treasurer of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia, will be glad to know that she is convalescing from her very serious recent automobile accident as satisfactorily as could be expected. It is anticipated, however, that Mrs. McMahon will be forced to continue in the Georgia Baptist hospital, where she now is, for several weeks longer.

Miss Mary Christian, Baptist state young people's secretary, is spending the week at the associational young people's camp near Helena. Miss Christian is teaching and speaking on the religious programs that are a prime factor of this camp.

Mrs. W. J. Neel, of Cartersville, state B. W. M. U. president, was in Atlanta this week to attend the state executive board meeting. Mrs. Neel came up from Macon after attending the commencement of Mercer University where she was accorded honors as one of the outstanding citizens and religious leaders of the state.

Young Woman's Auxiliary of the West End Baptist church met in a most enthusiastic missionary meeting Monday evening. Mrs. L. O. Freeman, College Park, was the program speaker.

Attention is called to the change in listing in the telephone directory from Stewart Avenue Day Nursery to Kate P. Dawson Day Nursery. The number remains the same, Raymond 1557.

Mrs. M. E. Tilly, conference secretary of the Methodist Woman's Missionary Society, North Atlanta district, is in Augusta where she is teaching in the Pastor's school at Paine College. She will be away until June 12.

Miss Layona Glenn, well known Methodist missionary, who has been at home on furlough, sails for her work in Brazil June 26.

Miss Bertha Tucker, retired missionary from Cuba, has been put in charge of the new Georgia White Home for Girls in the city. Dr. White recently gave this home as a convalescent home for needy working girls, honoring Mrs. White, who has done so much for the cause of the church in the city.

Mrs. Arthur I. Harris, president of the Travelers' Aid Society, announced that there has been appointed a speaker's committee from the Travelers' Aid. This committee will be glad to speak before any church organization, meeting or appear on any program desired. The committee is composed of women acquainted with public speaking, women who can tell of the work done by the Travelers' Aid Society, showing the romantic, humorous side as well as the practical help given. If program chairmen will call Mrs. Harris, Dearborn 2726, she will be glad to send them a speaker for their meeting.

Alathean Class.

Alathean class of the First Baptist church was entertained at a spend-the-day party Wednesday by the president, Mrs. M. L. Clark, at her home, 1420 Boulevard, N. E. During the morning plans for summer activities were discussed. At 1 o'clock luncheon was served by the hostess.

The afternoon was spent with the business session of the class. The president, Mrs. Clark, presiding, bringing the devotional in poetry form. A shower was planned for the Good-Will Center this month. A picnic was planned by the social committee for the last of June.

Among those present were Mesdames D. J. Gantt, teacher; L. Pharr, J. C. Martin, Jack Bergstrom, H. D. Kahrs, H. E. Reams, M. L. Clark, H. Whatley, J. Cureton, A. C. Thomas, E. S. Lammers, Hollis Hope, John Gray, E. F. Lindgren, S. Hall, Homer Turner, M. J. Long, V. B. Whatley, W. W. Gross, little Miss Mary Anne Turner and Anna Bergstrom.

Mrs. Martin Speaks.

Sunday morning, June 14, at 9:30 o'clock, the Susanah Wesley class, of the Druid Hills M. E. church, will hear Mrs. J. O. Martin, a recent member, tell of her trip abroad, using colored slides and pictures taken by herself and Mr. Martin. She will also show curios and other objects of interest.

Central Presbyterian To Hold Vacation Bible School

The vacation Bible school of the Central Presbyterian church opens Monday morning, June 15, to continue through July 3, with a daily session, Monday through Friday, from 9 to 12 o'clock.

Boys and girls from 5 years of age through 14 years are eligible for admittance and Bible studies, Bible stories, songs, sewing and painting will be some of the interesting features of the daily program. A beautiful silver pin will be presented to each boy and girl who does all the memory work assigned in each of the departments, and attends the school 11 days out of the 15. Blue ribbons are the badges of honor to be presented commencement night to all boys and girls who attend the school every day on time.

The superintendents for the departments for this year are: Mrs. T. A. Clayton, beginners; Mrs. T. C. Dickson, primary; Mrs. J. M. Harvey, junior; J. H. McCain, intermediate; Mrs. J. H. Dickson, sewing; Miss Cornelia Cunningham, painting; J. M. Harvey, general superintendent.

Park Street W. M. S. Holds Meeting.

Woman's Missionary Society of Park Street Methodist church met at the church Monday afternoon, the president, Mrs. R. M. Brandon, presiding. Mrs. P. D. Johnson conducted the Scripture lesson.

It was announced that the expenses of two Wesley house boys to the Bert Adams Scout Camp, this summer, will be defrayed by the society and the Hall-Davies class. Mrs. J. J. Rivers was authorized to forward a check toward the expense of the Daily Vacation Bible school of Wesley house, to be held for three weeks beginning June 8. Special interest was manifested in the endeavor of Miss Bertha Tucker, who has taken charge of the recently established Georgia White home at 5 Shadydale avenue, Lakewood Heights, which is under the supervision of the Churches' Homes for Girls. Mrs. Brevard Montgomery made a strong appeal for furnishings of any kind to equip this home, which will be used largely as a place where girls who have been ill, may recuperate before taking up their work again.

The W. M. S. will unite with the College Park Methodist church in sending Miss Catherine Parham as a missionary to Africa. As a token of their interest in Miss Layona Glenn, who is leaving this week for Brazil to take up her work in a mission school, the society voted to send a check to purchase some of her equipment. Mrs. Brandon called special attention to the important all-day church meeting of June 11, assembling all the circles of the society, to complete the mission study book. Mrs. E. E. Aiken introduced Miss Charlotte Richard and Miss Geraldine Chapman, of the Young People's Missionary Society, who gave a song. The home mission book, "The Turn Toward Peace," was presented by Miss Julie King.

Susannah Wesley Class Gives Tea

The home of Mrs. Arthur Burdette, in Brookwood Hills, was the scene of a lovely tea given by the Susannah Wesley class of the Druid Hills Methodist church, Tuesday afternoon from 3 till 5 o'clock. The spacious rooms were attractive in their decorations of garden flowers. The dining table was centered with a silver epergne of flowers, surrounded by candlesticks holding unshaded orchid tapers, tied with green tulle bows. Quantities of sweetpeas were used in the sun parlor where punch was served by Mrs. R. L. McCullough, Mrs. Homer Moore, Mrs. L. A. Morris and Mrs. C. H. McFee.

Receiving with Mrs. Burdette were: Mrs. H. H. Harris, Mrs. J. C. Oliver, Mrs. Willis Dobbs, Mrs. J. H. Starr, Mrs. J. L. Morris, Mrs. J. C. Aycock, Mrs. Marion Sims, Mrs. R. C. Camp, Mrs. W. P. Felker, Miss Lucile Moore and Mrs. R. L. Russell. Miss Polly Burdette and Miss Juliette Sims assisted in entertaining. A delightful program was given by a group of Atlanta artists, including Miss Ethel Beyer, pianist; Miss Frances Woodberry, soprano; Mrs. John Sizoo, contralto, and Mrs. Alva G. Maxwell, reader. A quartet of young musicians, pupils of Mrs. M. E. Patterson, with Mrs. E. D. Ivey at the piano, rendered selections.

Business meeting of Haygood Woman's Missionary Society was held at the church Monday afternoon, Mrs. A. B. Laird, president, presiding. Excellent reports from all departments were given by the respective superintendents. The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. C. N. McPherson, and all adjourned to the lawn where a garden party was enjoyed. An entertaining program was rendered and many amusing games were played. Fifty were present.

Circle No. 1 of Martha Brown Memorial church met Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. J. S. Wilson, 776 Virginia circle, N. E., Mrs. A. B. Tanner presiding. Mrs. L. V. Kennerly led the devotional. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Joe Felker, 437 Flat Shoals avenue, S. E., the fourth Monday in June.

Patience of Grace

The patience of which our Lord speaks is not the mere patience of nature. It is the patience of grace. It is the patience of hope and of faith. It is not mere doggedness and resolution. It is something more than fortitude; it is the patience which not only keeps our true selves, but makes our true selves. It is a great thing to have the courage necessary to resist trouble. It is a far greater thing to have the patience that takes something out of trouble, something which makes a new character, something which gives a new power of discerning and loving and reverencing. To remain under pain and trouble, and to live in spite of them, is something, but far greater is the achievement which permanently enriches the soul.—W. Robertson Nicoll.

Second Baptist Church Plans Reception for Dr. and Mrs. Knight

Members of the congregation of the Second Baptist church will entertain at an elaborate reception Friday evening, June 12, as a complimentary gesture to the new pastor, Dr. Ryland Knight, and Mrs. Knight. The reception will be held at the church and will be among the brilliant events marking the week's social calendar.

Dr. and Mrs. Knight arrived Thursday from St. Louis, Mo., where Dr. Knight was formerly pastor of the Delmar Street Baptist church. They are at the Georgian Terrace hotel temporarily.

Mrs. James D. Cromer, president of the Woman's Missionary Society of the church, will act as official hostess at the reception, with the members of the executive board forming the reception committee. Receiving the guests with Mrs. Cromer and the honor guests, Dr. and Mrs. Knight, will be Fred Patterson, chairman of the executive board; Mrs. Fred Paxon, leader of the Business Women's class; Clarence Sessions, representing the B. Y. P. U.; Miss Dorothy Coleman, president of the Young Woman's auxiliary, and Grady Lee, representing the Sunday school.

The reception will assemble several hundred of the church members.

Hodges-Turner Wedding Plans Are of Widespread Interest

MARIETTA, Ga., June 6.—Centering widespread interest throughout the southeast is the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Mary Stone Hodges, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McCormick Davis Hodges, who will wed Charles Dowd Turner, of Charlotte, N. C., Wednesday evening, June 17. The impressive ring ceremony will be used and the marriage will be solemnized at the First Methodist church in Marietta, at 8:30 o'clock, Rev. J. W. Veatch performing the ceremony.

Preceding the marriage service a musical program will be rendered by Charles Beaton, pianist, and Georg Fr. Lindner, violinist, of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music. The wedding marches, "Lohengrin's" and Mendelssohn's, will be played by Miss Evelyn Latimer, and Mrs. Clara C. Nolen will sing several numbers.

Miss Hodges will be given in marriage by her father, M. D. Hodges. Following the ceremony a large reception will be given at the Marietta Golf Club by Mr. and Mrs. Hodges.

Miss Hodges has chosen for her maid of honor her cousin, Miss Frances Cheney, and the group of bridesmaids will include Misses Martha Gramling, Cresswell Morrisette, Louise Greene, Mallie Nolen, Ida Brumby, Dorothy Burns, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Lucye Turner, of Eatonton, Ga., and Susie Jolly, of Atlanta. The junior bridesmaids will be Miss Elizabeth Hodges, sister of the bride-elect, and Miss Elizabeth Fowler.

Mr. Turner's best man will be his brother, Thomas Turner, of High Point, N. C. The groomsmen will be Jack Hodges, brother of the bride-elect; Bayard Cole, Dr. Edwin Pound, of Atlanta, and Wells Alexander, of Charlotte, N. C.

Acting as ushers will be Len C. Baldwin, Paul Lovejoy, Carl P. Barnes and Dr. Sam L. Rambo. The ringbearer will be Master Tommy Turner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Turner, of High Point, N. C., and the little flower girl will be Harriet Alice Whitlock, daughter of Mrs. Malcolm Whitlock.

A series of luncheons and bridge-teas will be given prior to the wedding. Misses Frances and Evelyn Cheney will entertain at a buffet supper preceding the wedding rehearsal at their home.

Garber-Powell Rites.

CAIRO, Ga., June 6.—Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Garber, of Jackson, Miss., announce the marriage of their daughter, Velva Lois, to John A. Powell II, of Cairo, at Jackson, May 25, the Dr. H. M. King officiating, at the pastorium. The ceremony was performed immediately after the former Miss Garber received her diploma from Mississippi College, at Clinton, and while she still wore her graduation cap and gown. She is also a graduate of the Virginia-Interment College at Bristol, Va. At Bristol she was the roommate of Mrs. William Searcy, of Thomasville, formerly Miss Emily Barkley, of Adel, and was the maid of honor at the recent Barkley-Searcy wedding at Adel, in which Mr. Powell was a groomsman.

Mr. Powell is the youngest son of Mrs. Eula B. Powell and the late L. B. Powell, of Cairo. He is a graduate of the Eastman Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he received a diploma for his Pace and Pace course in higher accounting.

Mrs. Powell has been at home with her parents in Jackson since the marriage, but will join Mr. Powell to make Cairo their home in the near future.

Atlanta Council of Camp Fire Plans Busy Week of Activities

Atlanta Council of Camp Fire Girls will spend a busy week in their different organizations. Monday, June 8, there will be the last meeting of girls' council for the year in Davison-Paxon's tea room at 3 o'clock. A camp skit will be presented and plans for the summer program will be discussed.

Tuesday, June 9, at 12:30 o'clock there will be a councillors' luncheon in the tea room to introduce the councillors to each other and to the board of directors. This will be the first time the 1931 councillors of Camp Toccoa have met together.

Wednesday, June 10, the board of directors will hold its monthly meeting at the Piedmont hotel, at 12:30 o'clock. Mrs. Tom Brooke, president, will report on the national board meeting that she has just returned from in New York.

Thursday, June 11, the Guardians' Association meets in the tea room at Davison-Paxon Company at 3 o'clock. There will be an election of officers followed by a social meeting.

Friday, June 12, there will be a meeting of the committee of awards at the Y. W. C. A. at 3 o'clock. All girls ready to pass their rank, in whole or part, are requested to come before the committee at this time so they may be given their rank at camp. Where a girl is not ready to pass her requirements in whole she may pass whatever part she is ready for and at a later time may finish the requirements.

Group meetings are being held by the individual groups and are mostly out of doors. Breakfasts, nature hikes and swimming parties are quite popular with the girls.

Miscellaneous Shower.

Mrs. Clarence Brown entertained at a surprise miscellaneous shower at her home on Williams' Mill road Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. Thomas Watson, formerly Miss Blanche Hamby, of Lavonia, Ga. Mrs. Watson was becomingly gowned in a green chiffon and the hostess wore printed yellow crepe.

The guests were Misses Louise Hopkins, Grace Mooney, Ann Straub, Louise Estes, Elsie Weems, Virginia Morris, Irma Coryell, Roberta Smith, Patsy McGregor, Ruth Moler, Sally Duncan, Rebecca Jones, Linnie Ergle, Dolores Kelly; Mesdames Leo Payne, E. L. Clark, Denny Burns; Duke Duvall and Henry Peebles.

'Fairest Lord Jesus' Is Hymn Of Month Chosen by Music Club

Last December the Atlanta Music Club, through its department of music in religious education, Mrs. Harold C. McKenzie, chairman, inaugurated a plan for the study of one hymn each month. This plan has been adopted by many churches of the city and recently has been taken up by churches in other towns over the state.

The hymn for study in June is "Fairest Lord Jesus," translated in 1850 and arranged by Richard S. Willis. Since this hymn was not written until 1677 it can hardly be truthfully called "The Crusaders' Hymn." However, whenever it is sung it reminds one of that great children's crusade in the twelfth century. The tune is an ancient Silesian folk song and was adapted to these words by Richards S. Willis and published in America.

The stanzas follow:

Fairest Lord Jesus,
Ruler of all nature,
O thou of God and man the Son;
Thee will I cherish,
Thee will I honor,
Thou, my soul's glory, joy and crown.

Fair are the meadows,
Fairer still the woodlands,
Robed in the blooming garb of spring;
Jesus is fairer,
Jesus is purer,
Who makes the woeful heart to sing.

Fair is the sunshine,
Fairer still the moonlight,
And all the twinkling, starry host;
Jesus shines purer,
Than all the angels heaven can boast.

League of Women Voters Holds Annual Finance Field Day

Annual finance field day of the executive board of the Georgia League of Women Voters was held at the Candler hotel in Decatur Wednesday, June 3. The president, Mrs. W. A. Ozmer, of Decatur, presided.

Mrs. O. W. Carpenter Jr., of Atlanta, secretary, and Miss Frances Ford, of Columbus, treasurer, gave interesting reports. Work of the local leagues was told by Mrs. L. L. Hendren, of Athens; Mrs. Leonard Haas, of Atlanta; Mrs. Mercer Morris, of Columbus, and Mrs. J. B. Richards, of DeKalb. Mrs. Morris, fourth district chairman, and Mrs. W. C. Robinson, fifth district, also told of progress made in their districts. Mrs. J. Harry Rogers, of Atlanta, membership chairman, spoke of activities along this line.

An interesting financial discussion, led by Miss Ford, featured the morning's program. At 1 o'clock a luncheon was served at the hotel. During the afternoon a legislative round-table was enjoyed, with discussion of bills to come up before the legislature this summer. Mrs. Wellington Stevenson, of Decatur, legislative chairman, had charge.

Attending the meeting were Mrs. W. A. Ozmer, Decatur, president; Miss Frances Ford, Columbus, treasurer; Mrs. O. W. Carpenter Jr., Atlanta, secretary; Mrs. Wellington Stevenson, Decatur, auditor; Mrs. W. A. Antiolotti, Atlanta, business manager; her guest, Miss Naneita Antiolotti, New York city; Mrs. J. B. Richards, Decatur, president DeKalb league; Mrs. Mercer Morris, Columbus, chairman fourth district; Mrs. W. C. Robinson, Atlanta, chairman fifth district; Mrs. J. Harry Rogers, chairman membership and publicity; Mrs. L. L. Hendren, Athens, chairman efficiency in government; Mrs. Leonard Haas, Atlanta, chairman legal status of women; Mrs. J. O. Martin, Atlanta, chairman of education; Mrs. J. D. Swagerty, Atlanta, chairman living costs; Mrs. Sinclair Jacobs, Atlanta, chairman international co-operation to prevent war, and Mrs. H. G. Hastings, of Decatur.

Villaret-Haleston Wedding Solemnized in Columbus, Ga.

and simplicity characterized the wedding of Miss Adrienne Villaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Villaret, of Englewood, N. J., and Lieutenant John Haleston, which was solemnized Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Polo Hunt Club. As the guests assembled a program of nuptial music was rendered by an orchestra which also played the "Lohengrin" wedding march. Miss Helen Coyne Riley, of Atlanta, sang "Coronation," by Aylward.

Mrs. Gustave Villaret Jr., was her sister's matron of honor and only attendant. She wore a gown of yellow organdie made ankle length, with large hat of yellow straw, and carried a bouquet of yellow tea roses.

The bride entered with her brother, Captain Gustave Villaret, and was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Lieutenant Richard McKee.

The bride was radiantly lovely in her wedding gown of white chiffon made with cowl neck and very full skirt which swept the floor to form a train. With this she wore a picture hat of white lace straw, long white gloves and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Following the reception Captain and Mrs. Villaret entertained with a reception and dance. The tea table was laid with a filet lace and cut work cloth and was centered with the three-tiered cake which, in accordance with a time-honored custom, the bride cut with her husband's saber.

During the afternoon the bride changed her wedding gown for a traveling costume, a Patou model of black and white crepe made ensemble. With this she wore a close-fitting black and white hat and accessories to match. Lieutenant and Mrs. Haleston left for a motor trip to New York and from there will sail June 11 for France, where they will spend the summer. On their return in the fall they will go to their new station at Fort Eustis, Va.

WHO'LL WIN THE ROGERS CAR?

THERE'S ONLY one week left in which to enter the Rogers contest . . . and a chance of winning a beautiful Chevrolet automobile for your very own!

The contest closes at midnight, June 15th. So if you haven't already sent in your name and slogan for the new sliced loaf of Rogers' bread . . . go by your nearest Rogers' store . . . secure a card and full information regarding the contest . . . fill in the card and mail immediately.

Better yet . . . if it isn't convenient for you to visit a Rogers' store . . . if you'll send Jacqulyn the name and slogan you have selected, along with your name and address . . . she'll be only too happy to secure a card and mail it in for you.

You really should taste this marvelous sliced bread . . . finding a suitable name will be much easier, once you've tasted it!

Your slogan must not be over ten words . . . and, of course, the name should be as short as possible.

So many people are finding it great fun . . . this contest, which offers such a grand prize to the winner! Just imagine being the proud possessor of a new Chevrolet! Believe you me, I'm trying awfully hard to win . . . and so are thousands of others. So don't miss all the fun! Enter your name and slogan tomorrow! Who knows but that you may be the very lucky winner?

Judges for the contest have already been selected. Two prominent Atlanta clubwomen have graciously consented to act as judges . . . and also our Mayor Pro Tem!

If you'd like for me to fill out a card for you, just send your name and slogan to Jacqulyn, in care of The Atlanta Constitution . . . and I'll get it mailed in right away. In sending in your own name and slogan, mail it to Rogers Contest Editor, care Rogers, Inc., Atlanta.

"PATENT PUMPS"—

THE TREND in summer footwear. Walkover Shoe Store, always first in smart footwear . . . has just received a new shipment of Patent Pumps.

They are tailored, yet dressy enough for any day-time costume . . . trim . . . and infinitely chic!

This shoe represents the most important of the successful new shoe fashions—those that smartest patrons are demanding.

The fit of this new pump is marvelous. It seems to fairly mold itself to the foot, with none of the usual gape at the instep to slip at the heel. Priced $10.50.

So many ladies are completing their Vacation wardrobes just now . . . and, of course, the Summer wardrobe would be so incomplete without a pair of these smart patent pumps! In fact, few fashionable women would even dare go on a Vacation without a pair! Because they're more stylish . . . more popular than any other shoe!

So I advise a visit to Walk-Over Shoe Store, 203 Peachtree Street.

Welcome, Sunlite Bake Shop!

HUNDREDS of old friends visited this attractive shop on opening day. In case you, dear reader, didn't attend the grand opening . . . Sunlite Electrik Bake Shop has a completely remodeled modern building, with entirely new equipment, in their old location at 19 Broad Street, S. W. The new equipment is so attractive, carrying out a beautiful color scheme of green and grey. And in their new shop, they're doing all their baking by electricity! I was extremely happy to recognize the same pleasant faces of salesladies and bakers, who extended such courteous service in the shop before it burned.

Sunlite

Of course I knew they would have the same delicious hot rolls and luscious pastries! "Quality First—Last—and Always" is truly a fitting slogan for such a successful shop! Visit the new shop this week! It will prove a most delightful treat.

For the convenience of their North Side patrons, Sunlite will maintain their branch at 1003 Peachtree.

Duffee-Freeman Furniture Company.

IS SHOWING the loveliest of porch and lawn furnishings!

Now that Summer is here, we are all scouting about, trying to find the most attractive furniture to accentuate the beauty of beautiful grounds and porches.

I've had so many inquiries as to where one might select such furniture . . . until I decided to tour the entire city. And at Duffee-Freeman's I found the most complete assortment . . . and also the most beautiful!

One handsome set consisted of every piece of lawn furniture the discriminating home-maker could desire. It is fashioned of such durable material, too . . . positively waterproof . . . and with the gayest of Summer colors predominating.

There's a large glider-swing . . . and its cushions are all reversible (a feature not found in the cheaper sets) . . . one side being a cool, lovely shade of green . . . the other a fascinating and inviting orange. Then there's the charming table of green . . . just waiting for sparkling drinks to be placed upon it, for thirsty guests . . . and the table had the extra large adjustable umbrella, in the same delightful colors.

If you're searching for a glider for the porch . . . at Duffee-Freeman Furniture Company you'll find every conceivable design in leading Summer colors . . . all of durable waterproof materials.

You're sure to want several of the gay beach chairs . . . to scatter about your lawn and porch. So visit this store right away for your selection!

Duffee-Freeman has long been acclaimed by smart Atlanta women as our leading furniture establishment . . . and this year they have more lovely things, more exclusive and colorful designs in outdoor furniture than in any previous season!

You must purchase furniture for your porch and lawn . . . before Summer visitors begin popping in unexpectedly . . . as only Summer visitors can! So I earnestly advise an early visit to Duffee-Freeman Furniture Company, 74 Broad Street.

Quartet of Belles To Plight Troth in the Early Summer

OCCUPYING the social spotlight are a foursome of prospective brides of the summer season, whose engagements are announced today. Miss Hunt, the beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John James Hunt Jr., will wed James King Rankin at a June ceremony. Miss Beck, the lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Beck, of Griffin, and one of the most popular belles of her native city, has chosen June 22 as the date of her marriage to Daniel Phillip Hatch, of Hanover, N. H. Miss McPhaul, of Charlotte, N. C., is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Wilber Ashley McPhaul, whose betrothal is announced today to Randolph Whitfield, of Tallahassee, Fla., the marriage to take place June 25. The Druid Hills Baptist church will be the scene on July 21 of Miss Harper's marriage to John Jordan Poole. The engagement is announced today by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Clemons Harper. Photographs of Miss Hunt and Miss Harper by Elliott's Peachtree studio; photo of Miss McPhaul by Thurston Hatcher.

Miss Shirley McPhaul To Wed Randolph Whitfield June 25

CHARLOTTE, N. C., June 6.—Carrying wide social importance throughout the southern states is the announcement made by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur Ashley McPhaul, of Charlotte, of the engagement of their daughter, Shirley Brown, to Randolph Whitfield, of Tallahassee, Fla. The wedding will be brilliantly solemnized in the Meyers Park Presbyterian church in Charlotte Thursday, June 25, at 6:30 o'clock.

During the past four years Miss McPhaul has been a popular member of the college set, having received her bachelor of arts degree from Agnes Scott College last Tuesday. While in college she was a prominent figure in varied school activities, being editor of the Silhouette, the college year book, and a participant in many major roles of the dramatic productions of the school. Dr. McPhaul, the bride-elect's father, is head of the board of health of Charlotte and active in community work.

Mr. Whitfield this year completes his fourth year as a student of the co-operative mechanical engineering department of the Georgia School of Technology. He has taken a prominent part in school activities, being business manager of the 1931 Blue Print, the college annual, and recipient of a gold T for scholarship, a member of O. D. K. and is outstanding in many other phases of college life. He is a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity. His father is presiding justice of the supreme court of the state of Florida and is most active in civic affairs of the state.

The marriage will unite families that have long been identified with southern history and have held positions of influence in the social, cultural and civic life. Mr. Whitfield and his bride will reside, following their marriage, at 29 Peachtree place, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Ames To Lead Conference Forum.

Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames will lead a daily forum on race relations at the annual student conference of the Y. W. C. A. at Blue Ridge, N. E., June 6 to 16. Mrs. Ames is director of women's activities of the commission on inter-racial activities, with central offices in Atlanta. Before coming to Georgia, Mrs. Ames was president of the Texas State League of Women Voters, state president of the Association of University Women and state chairman of the Texas Inter-racial Committee.

Bride-Elect Feted.

Miss Kathryn Ficken, lovely bride-elect of this month, was honored at the bridge-shower given yesterday afternoon at Love' tea room in West End by Miss Lois Barwick. The guests included Misses Frances Beeland, Evelyn Hallman, Dorothy McKibben, Dorothy Chiles, Elizabeth Chiles, Sarah Smith, Clifford Greer, Marcelette Dolive, Helen Huff, Sarah Redwine, Ruth Cocking, Amy Witherspoon, Helen Witherspoon, Kathryn Ficken and Mrs. Ficken, mother of the bride-elect. The honor guest was presented a set of Rosemere china.

Pupils in Recital.

Miss Florence E. Shearer presents pupils from her piano class in a musical Monday evening, June 8, at 8 o'clock in her studio at 18 Peachtree place, N. E. Mary Alice Sheldon, violinist, pupil of Miss Mary Douglas, will be on the program. An interesting feature of the evening will be the recitations by each pupil of appropriate poems for the selected piano numbers. Those taking part on the program include Marjorie Paris, Jean Chafin, William Holdbrook, Norma Grobli, Margaret Davidson, Vivian Sinatt, Betsy Rich and Lillian Carr.

Miss Margaret Hunt Will Wed Mr. Rankin in June Ceremony

Of cordial interest to friends throughout the state is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. John James Hunt Jr. of the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Mather, to James King Rankin, the wedding to be an event of June.

Miss Hunt is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hunt and a sister of Mrs. Robert Watson Roane, of Chattanooga, Tenn. She is a graduate of Girls' High school. As a member of the younger set she has enjoyed wide popularity and has been a much admired visitor in Florida east coast resorts where she has spent the past three winters.

Miss Hunt is a member of prominent and representative southern families. Her maternal grandparents were the late William Dudley Bush and Elizabeth Aderhold Bush, and she is the great-granddaughter of Captain William Floyd Bush, all of Calhoun county, Alabama. Her mother was formerly Miss Harriet Beall Bush, of Anniston, Ala. On her paternal side she is the great-granddaughter of the Rev. William H. Hunt, beloved Episcopal minister, and she is the granddaughter of Judge John J. Hunt, of Griffin, and the late Julia Morrow Hunt. Judge Hunt has for a number of years been a leader in civic and political affairs of the state. He is state pension commissioner-elect and commander-in-chief of the Georgia division, United Confederate Veterans.

Miss Hunt, on the occasion of the Confederate reunion at Charlotte, N. C., had the honor of attending as sponsor of her grandfather's division. She is a direct descendant of Cotton Mather of early colonial days, her paternal great-grandmother having been Ellen Mather, of Hartford, Connecticut.

Mr. Rankin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vance Olney Rankin, who have been influential citizens of Atlanta for a number of years. He has two sisters, Veone and Susie May, and two brothers, Vance Olney Jr. and William Rankin.

On his maternal side the bridegroom-elect is descended from Lewis Flemister, a member of the commander-in-chief's guards, having participated in the major battles of the Revolutionary War. He is connected with the Wilson, Chism and King families of Virginia, his mother being the former Miss Johnnie King, a prominent member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and Daughters of the American Revolution.

On his paternal side Mr. Rankin is descended from the Rasburys, Benhams, Warrens and Moores, of North Carolina and Tennessee. His uncles are M. S. Rankin, J. O. Rankin, of Atlanta.

Mr. Rankin is a graduate of Emory University and the Lamar School of Law, Emory University, and of the Atlanta Law School. He holds membership in the Sigma Chi fraternity and the Delta Theta Phi law fraternity, and is connected in business with the firm of Little, Powell, Reid and Goldstein.

Dorcas Bible Class Gives Garden Party.

Young ladies of the Dorcas Bible class of Morningside Presbyterian church and their escorts were entertained at a supper and garden party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Watkins, 660 Cumberland road, last Friday evening.

In a recent six-week attendance contest, in which points were given for Sunday school attendance, church attendance, punctuality, new members and visits made, the class was divided into two groups, calling themselves "Blue Birds" for happiness, and "Red Birds" for success. The Red Birds won by 89 points and were the guests of the Blue Birds at this garden party. Among the games played were tenpins, miniature bowling and miniature golf. There were 78 present.

Harper-Poole Engagement Is of Wide Social Interest

An announcement of interest to hosts of friends is that made by Mr. and Mrs. Norman Clemons Harper of the engagement of their daughter, Jeannette Lucile, to John Jordan Poole. The ceremony will be solemnized July 21 at 8:30 o'clock at the Druid Hills Baptist church. The Rev. Wallace Rogers, pastor of the Glenn Memorial church, will read the marriage service.

The lovely bride-elect is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harper. She is the niece of Senator John W. Watson, of Miami, Fla., and of former Congressman W. J. Sears and Mrs. Sears, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Miss Sue Watson, of Kissimmee, Fla.

Miss Harper graduated from the Girls' High school and the Atlanta Normal Training school. She has also studied at Emory University. Since her graduation she has held a position as teacher in the Atlanta public schools.

Mr. Poole is the son of J. S. Poole Sr. and the late Mrs. Etta Porter Poole. He is the grandson of Mrs. J. J. L. Poole, of Atlanta.

The bridegroom-elect graduated from the Fulton High school and Emory University, receiving his Ph. B. and LL. B. degrees. Since his graduation he has been a prominent young lawyer of this city.

Wedding Plans.

A beautiful musical program has been arranged for the wedding by Mrs. John Felder, organist of the Druid Hills Baptist church. Mrs. Thomas M. Campbell will sing "O Perfect Love" and Miss Blanche Walden will sing "At Dawning."

Miss Harper has chosen as her matron of honor her mother, Mrs. Norman C. Harper, and Miss Lois Chandler will act as maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Elizabeth Poole, sister of the bridegroom-to-be; Mrs. Robert Dudley Robinson, Miss Mary McCallum, Miss Mary Sentell, Miss Theressa Edwards and Miss Thelma Edwards, of Forest Park, Ga.

Bridal Attendants.

Norman C. Harper will give his daughter in marriage. Mr. Poole will be attended by Euchee H. Skinner as best man and the groomsmen will include Houston White, Joseph Sears, cousin of the bride-elect; Edwin McPearce Jr., C. L. Mason, of Madison, Ga.; Boyce L. Graham and J. S. Heard, Jr. Little Miss Jane Withers will serve as flower girl.

Immediately following the church ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Harper, parents of the bride-elect, will entertain at a reception at their home on Oakdale road, Druid Hills, honoring the members of the bridal party, the out-of-town guests, relatives and close friends.

Beeks-Sutton Rites.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thomas Sutton, of Rochelle, Ga., announce the marriage of their daughter, Sudie, to Edwin Albert Beeks, of Huntington, Ind., Thursday, June 4, at the First Baptist church, Valdosta, Ga.

Mr., Mrs. Huddleston, Of California, Feted During Visit Here

Mr. and Mrs. William Carter Huddleston, of Los Angeles, accompanied by their little daughter, Betty Jeanne, have been visiting relatives and friends in the city for the past few weeks, and will return to California today.

Mrs. Press Huddleston, assisted by her daughter, Miss Louise Huddleston, entertained for her son and daughter and for Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Ewing, another son and daughter, at a bridge supper Thursday evening at her home on Drewry street.

The invited friends were Mrs. Charles Gerald, of Columbia, S. C.; Mrs. Lawrence Kinard, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Cannon, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Cridér, Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Talley, Mr. and Mrs. L. Leonard and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Tate.

Carter Huddleston is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Press Huddleston, and immediately after the close of the World War in which he saw active service throughout the entire period, he went to California to reside. This visit of Mrs. Huddleston and her little daughter was the first they have made to meet friends and relatives in Atlanta. Among relatives the couple have been visiting in Atlanta, in addition to their parents, are Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Cannon and Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Sheldon, Jr. A number of bridge and theater parties were given in their honor by their friends while visiting Atlanta.

Woman's Club Pool Is Proving Popular For Summer Season

The official opening Monday, June 1, of the swimming pool at the Atlanta Woman's Club assembled a number of members, children, and attractive representatives of the younger set. Mrs. A. Q. Smith, chairman of the pool for this year, and her co-chairman, Mrs. Rogers Toy, were in charge of arrangements for the occasion. Under the able chairmanship of Mrs. Smith many improvements have been made since last season and the pool has been expertly repaired within the past few weeks. Among other attractions for the summer season is the booth which has been arranged for the sale of soft drinks and ice cream.

The club has employed two life guards who will be on duty during alternate hours of the day. This was done to insure the attendance of a life guard at the pool the entire time that it is open. The swimming hours are from 8 a. m. to 7 p. m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and from 8 a.m. to 9 p. m. on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Members of the club and their guests are cordially urged to avail themselves of the privilege of the pool during the summer.

Miss Mize Feted At Bridge Party

Miss Eloise Mize, one of the attractive seniors of the 1931 class of Girls' High school, was entertained at a surprise bridge party Saturday afternoon by Miss Thelma Rowden at her home on Atlanta avenue. The color scheme of green and pink was employed in the decorative motif. Miss Mize was honored with a shower of beautiful handkerchiefs. The hostess presented prizes to Mrs. J. Lester Preston, winning top score; Miss Honor Fleming, consolation, and Miss Inez Wilson, low score. A gift was presented by Miss Rowden to Miss Mize as honor guest.

The invited guests were Misses Eloise Mize, Frances Nall, Inez Wilson, Lotty Keaton, Lucile Hymer, Leona Clopton, Mattie Lou Mize, Honor Fleming, Mesdames J. A. Cooley, L. C. Mize, O. K. Griffeth, J. Lester Preston and T. E. Rowden Jr. Miss Rowden was assisted in entertaining by her sister, Mrs. Clara Lanford, and Miss Mattie Lou Mize, sister of the honor guest.

Miss Thompson Honored at Dance.

Georgia W.C.T.U. Leader Speaks At Convention in Toronto, Canada

BY M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

The program at the fourteenth triennial convention of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union in session in Toronto, Canada, will have as a special feature this evening an address on prohibition by a distinguished national temperance leader and speaker, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Georgia.

Few W. C. T. U. speakers are held in as high esteem in other countries as Mrs. Armor. She has traveled and lectured for the W. C. T. U. in Cuba, Canada, Mexico, New Zealand, England and Scotland, and she has been a favorite speaker at the last six triennial conventions of the organization, in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1910; Brooklyn, U. S. A., in 1913; London, England, in 1920; in Philadelphia, U. S. A., in 1922; in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1925; and in Lausanne, Switzerland, in 1928.

Speaks in Indiana and Ohio.

Mrs. Armor had been making speeches in Indiana and Ohio for several weeks before going to Toronto. In a recent letter she said: "I wish you could have been in some of the great prohibition meetings that I have participated in since I left Georgia. Notably the meeting of the State Anti-Saloon League of Ohio in Columbus, Ohio, when I spoke to 2,000 royally enthusiastic and determined drys. The next morning by arrangement of the Columbus W. C. T. U. I broadcast a message which found a wonderful response as letters sent to me through that station abundantly testify.

"Then at Ann Arbor we had an audience of 1,500, and at Xenia, Ohio, a great church crowded to the doors—at least a thousand in that audience. Have had some wonderful meetings in Pennsylvania, too. Especially on Mother's Day at Waynesboro, and later at one of the large churches in Philadelphia, Tioga Presbyterian. Then one night at 'The Friendly Church,' a Lutheran church in Philadelphia, presided over by Dr. Stover, the famous pastor who has such big crowds at his midweek prayer meetings that often the main auditorium of the church is filled and also the lecture room downstairs so that he has to hold two services to satisfy the people. I greatly enjoyed speaking to a packed house at his church. Wonderful enthusiasm."

The Gifted Lady.

Newspaper reports stressed what Mrs. Armor said, the Evening Bulletin, of Philadelphia, in a column of quotations stated: "There are multiplied thousands of people in the United States who are not making themselves heard, who are not making speeches nor writing to the newspapers, who are determined that prohibition shall have its chance since the liquor traffic had its day and cannot show one good thing to its credit. The drys, for all the years that the liquor traffic was protected by law, obeyed the laws and told the truth and after almost a hundred years of education and agitation they won the victory.

"Now they demand that the wets obey the law and tell the truth," continued Mrs. Armor. "After they have done that as faithfully as the drys did for the same length of time, if prohibition has not done any more good than the liquor traffic did, the drys will consider a change.

"Every program the liquor people have offered is a liquor selling program. They do not seem to comprehend that the public knows all the plans they are offering have been tried and the wets never obeyed any laws of restriction, regulation, or anything else. The public knows that it is not how liquor is sold but the liquor itself that is responsible for the trouble."

A special writer in the Rochester (Ind.) News-Sentinel describes Mrs. Armor as "having the characteristic Georgia accent, Mrs. Armor was a bit difficult for Hoosier understanding, but it was pleasing as the ripple of a mountain brook, punctuated with poetry, beautiful sentiment, clinched with truth, dignified with honor and graced with modesty. She disguised no statement, but made a front fight against the 'wets', condemned propagandists for their unholy attempts to nullify the eighteenth amendment and their sinful waste of millions of dollars to bring about its repeal."

W. C. T. U. Program.

The program of the World's W. C. T. U. convention which culminates with Mrs. Armor's address this evening, begins with a sunrise prayer meeting this morning, led by Miss Mary Campbell, of India, singing in charge of Mrs. Frances W. Graham, United States America. Delegates will attend services in churches of their choice. Many W. C. T. U. leaders will be pulpit guests and will participate in the morning church services. This afternoon at 3 o'clock Dr. Harvey Robb, of Toronto, will give an organ recital, followed by a prayer led by Mrs. Maskew Miller, South Africa, and a solo by Mrs. Isabell Wray Jenkins, of Canada, and an address by Miss Maria Sandstrom, president Sweden W. C. T. U. Hon. Ralph O. Brewster, former governor of Maine, United States America, will end the afternoon service with an address.

Miss Flora E. Strout, world W. C. T. U. organizer, has a fascinating bit of history of temperance progress in Brazil to give, from her experience of seven years in South America's largest republic. She will speak in the evening just before Mrs. Armor.

Social Courtesies.

A train letter written by Mrs. Ellison R. Cook, of West Point, en route says: "We are having a good trip. Saw Mammoth cave. The name expresses it." She listed the names of those going with her by train as Mrs. Marvin Williams, Marietta; Mrs. Wilbur Brown, Griffin; Mrs. A. W. Voight, Macon; Mrs. Louis Wade and Mrs. F. M. Shore, Quitman; Mrs. J. H. Steckley, Decatur; Mrs. J. Q. Smith, Cairo, and Mrs. Lamar Smith and Mrs. J. M. Chadwick, of Gadsden, Ala. Others going from Georgia by rail or motor are Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Taylor, Atlanta; Mrs. F. A. Smith and daughter, East Point, and Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Dean, of Macon.

The important social event of the week was the garden party given at the government house, by Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Ross in celebration of his majesty, King George. All registered delegates and visitors to the world's W. C. T. U. convention were among those invited to this affair.

An international banquet will be given for those attending the convention tomorrow evening, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, first vice president world's W. C. T. U., president U. S. A., W. C. T. U., will be toastmistress; two addresses will be given, the first by the Right Hon. Sir George E. Foster, G. C. M. G., D. C. L., LL.D., senator, known as "the grand old man" of Canada, a life-time champion of prohibition of the liquor business, and the other address by Dr. H. M. Tory, D. S. C., LL.D., F. R. S. C. Greetings will be brought by representatives from many lands.

Tuesday evening Miss Graccio Lego Houlder, of Australia, will be the speaker, then two-minute speeches will be made by delegates from all countries, some in their native tongue. They will be dressed in the costumes of their homelands.

Automobile rides over Toronto and to points of interest nearby, a boat ride and a civic reception are among the entertainment features.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor will return to her home in Greenville in time for a brief rest before leaving for a tour of the Holy Land, returning through Europe.

Children of Confederacy Make Plans for Conference June 18-19

By Ada Ramp Walden, Editor, Georgia Division, U. D. C.

The coming week will be a red-letter one for the Children of the Confederacy, since they will meet in conference in Decatur, where a number of good things are in store for their pleasure. One of these is a picnic dinner which they will enjoy with the venerable residents of the Soldiers' Home. Mrs. A. J. Woodruff, president of the hostess chapter, the Agnes Lee, will entertain with a reception to delegates and visitors Thursday evening, and as a happy climax the young folks will be taken to visit the cyclorama in Grant park.

Mrs. John Montgomery, who will welcome the visitors, will give a brief history of the first chapter of the institution, which was in Decatur, long before there was a division. This makes it all the more fitting that the mother chapter serve as host.

Now it is very necessary that all who attend communicate with Mrs. Guy Hudson and Mrs. W. A. Ozmer, chairmen of homes, since the dates, June 18 and 19, are not far off. It is hoped, too, that as many Daughters as possible lend their inspiration by being present at the sessions, at one of which an interesting declamation contest will be featured.

Mrs. Joseph T. Vason, chairman essay committee, announces the following prize-winners in recent contest, "Stratford" the subject: Girls' High school, Georgia Clay Sharman, West Point; honorable mention, second, Nelle Louise Kurtz, Atlanta; third, Ethel Mae Beavers, Atlanta.

Boys' High school, Fred Perrin, Clarkston; honorable mention, second, Harry Baxter, Ashburn; third, Edmund Brannen, Millen.

Girls' grammar grade, Margaret Woodall, Woodland; second, Mary Winn Greer, Valdosta. Boys' grammar grade, Floyd Newton, Madison; honorable mention, J. B. Sims Jr., Barnesville. Which means that Georgia Clay Sharman and Fred Perrin will enjoy a delightful season at Dixie camps, thanks to the donor, A. A. Jameson, owner of these camps at which many a boy and girl anticipates a stay as the very great event of his or her life. The grammar school winners will be presented a gold medal at the U. D. C. convention to be held in Dublin in October.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wohlwender were hosts Saturday at their home in Columbus at a delightful dinner, given in honor of the Confederate veterans at Camp Benning, which is an annual event sponsored by the Lizzie Rutherford chapter. In the yard and on the spacious veranda, where tables had been placed for the guests, there floated huge Confederate flags, the patriotic colors evidenced in the floral adornments of blue corn flowers, white phlox and red poppies. Miss Anna Benning, beloved president of the chapter, presided, and presented the guests, E. R. Wells, George Burrus, Alex Harris, Sam Kaul, James Deaton, John Wallace, Henry Fortson and Judge George Palmer, the latter the speaker of the day.

Mr. Harris delighted those present by his rendition of a number of old-time songs.

Mrs. W. A. Rucker was elected president of the Jefferson Davis chapter, Elberton, at its last meeting; Mrs. L. D. Hewell, first vice president; Mrs. S. S. Brewer, second; Miss Sarah Anne Wright, recording secretary; Mrs. Clois Brown, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. E. Webb, treasurer; Miss Nora Jones, historian; Mrs. R. L. Rice, assistant historian; Mrs. H. S. Bell, leader C. of C.; Mrs. J. T. Dennis, assistant leader; Miss Ada Almond, custodian scrap book; Mrs. D. C. Hudson, recorder of crosses; Mrs. G. F. Cleveland, registrar; Miss Mary Lizzie Wright, reporter. An interesting program, prepared by Mrs. S. S. Brewer was enjoyed, the contributors being Mrs. R. E. Hudgens, Miss Elizabeth Brewer, Mrs. Clois Brown and Mrs. D. J. Thornton.

The May and June meetings of Oglethorpe chapter were held jointly Friday at the home of Mrs. Minnie Crawford, in Lexington. The chapter made plans for the meeting of July 16, when the birthday of the late Miss Mildred Rutherford will be observed. "Jefferson Davis" and "Women of the South in War Times" featured the program, to which Mrs. W. H. Reynolds and Miss Anne Crawford contributed.

Woodland chapter was honored in having three of its members to be named as maids of honor for the recent reunion, Misses Willie Clark, Fannie Mae Webster and Lucy Clark, they having been appointed by General W. R. Jackson, of the Mississippi division. An impromptu program was presented at the last meeting over which Mrs. J. E. Peeler presided. One of its most interesting features was the reading of a letter by Mrs. R. C. Fryer Jr. that had been taken from the scrap book of the late Miss Mary Hall, of Augusta, for years an honorary member of Camp 435, Confederate Veterans, and who marched in all processions, at reunions, with the camp.

Mrs. E. J. Reagan was re-elected president of the Charles T. Zachry chapter, McDonough, at the annual business meeting. Other officers elected were Mrs. J. B. Newman, first vice president; Mrs. Charlie Kimbell, second vice president; Miss Mattie McDonald, third vice president; Mrs. J. R. Turner, recording secretary; Mrs. Edna Stroud, treasurer; Mrs. W. G. Copeland, corresponding secretary; Miss Bess Fouche, registrar; Mrs. H. B. Carmichael, custodian; Mrs. J. M. Carmichael, historian.

Book Reviews in Tabloid

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART.

Mary Roberts Rinehart, perhaps the most popular of modern American women writers, has written her autobiography. It is published under the title "My Story," by Farrar & Rinehart, Inc. It is, in many respects, a fascinating volume, packed full of the incidents and observations that have come to a very clever clubwoman who has been in the midst of many of the outstanding events of her time. A woman who has lived and observed life as it has been lived at the beginning quarter of the twentieth century and the shank end of the nineteenth.

There is, at present, a huge demand for biography. It almost seems as though the transcripts of real lives are threatening the supremacy of the novel for best-selling honors. Coming at such a time, this book may, quite possibly, even outsell the most popular novels this brilliant woman has written.

To many readers, especially the older ones, that portion of the book dealing with the author's childhood will prove the most fascinating. The clue to this portion is found on page 4, in the words, "There never was any money in those days. But we were of Covenanter blood, and on the Sabbath, as we called it, the house died. The old square piano was closed and my grandmother and such of the family as she could muster, went to church."

There is an equal interest in the later chapters. Those that tell of the early struggles and first successes of the coming famous author and those that tell of her experiences in France while the World War raged. She met many of the greatest figures of that conflict as well as contacting hundreds of the rank and file and the things she saw and thought are an important contribution to the record of that time.

There is a warm pleasure in reading of her family, of her husband and sons and their travels and vacations together. In fact it is, par excellence, a book of warm human likeableness, a book that tells of the story of a life, perhaps more prominent and more successful than most, but a life that is, nevertheless, typical of the best that existence has to offer mortals in these wonderful times. Near the end, promising more and more things to come, Mrs. Rinehart says:

"I am not through. I am still going on. This look backward has been indeed but to refresh the eye, for its prime function of looking forward. I am still strong, very active." The hundreds of thousands of admirers of Mrs. Rinehart and her work will not only delight in this opened window into the private places of her life, but will rejoice in the promise contained in those words.

RUSSIA'S MAN OF STEEL.

Stalin. By Isaac Don Levine. Bruce Hopper in the Atlantic Monthly says: This book, long hoped for by students of soviet puzzles, revolutionizes the study of revolution—a triumph in a field hitherto dark."

The subject of this sketch is Joseph Stalin, secretary general of the communist party. It is said that not by virtue of his office does he dominate Russia but by virtue of his own personality.

The author of this volume came to this country in 1911 from Russia. In 1919 he was sent to Europe as foreign correspondent for the Chicago Daily News. He was in Russia during the terrible years of the bolshevik revolution, and being a native of Russia, understanding the Russian character and the revolution, he has written interesting study of "Russia's Man of Steel." (Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Murder in the News Room. A Dutton prize story by Henry Charlton Beck. This is an interesting story, full of excitement and thrills, and there is not a newspaperman or woman who will not find it of special interest in its new style.

Mr. Beck is the music editor and state editor the The Evening Courier, Camden, N. J. The story is filled with dramatic force and there is no question about its authenticity. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

No Surrender. A sequest to "The Rebel Generations." By Mrs. Jo Van Ammers-Kuller, an author who caused a great deal of interest in her former story which was termed by great critics as a masterly spokesman for modern woman in her fight for freedom. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

Kitty Frew. By Jane Abbott. Author of Beggerman. The author, a charming woman, has written a story on modern marriage, the greatest problem that is being faced today. (Lippincott's Book.)

Torture Garden. By Octave Mirbeau. This brilliant translation is the first English version of this celebrated French classic. It is being widely read in Europe, the translation being by Alvah C. Bessie, with foreword by James Huneker, and illustrations by Jeanette Seelhoff. It is a story of adventure in the orient. (Published by Claude Kendall, New York.)

Call Her Savage. By Tiffany Thayer. Author of "Thirteen Men." Illustrated by Lloyd Coe. (Claude Kendal, publisher.)

Village Virgin. By Dean Fales. With jacket in colors by Beth Krebs Morris. "The author has written a new Main Street—though a much shorter one." (The Dial Press, New York.)

Desert Dancer. By John Hamlin. Jacket in colors by Carroll Snell. The author is well known in literary circles for his short magazine stories. This, his first novel, is the story of the "revolt of youth against the tyranny of narrowness and selfishness." (The Dial Press, New York.)

Nor Time Nor Space. By Dalls Reed. A story, like most stories, in which Ambition, Romance, Adventure and then Disillusion play the leading arts. (Dorrance & Co., Philadelphia.)

POETRY—DRAMA.

Dust of Dreams. By Marcia Lewis Leach. The writer is not unknown as her prose and poetry have been published in the popular magazines for several years. The friends she made then through her magazine work has added to the interest in her book of poems.

How musical and inspiring is her first poem entitled "May in Seville!" This is followed by verse on "Springtime," that was not inspired, but is a simple fact of life in the springtime, and these are followed by other poems, original, musical, lovely in thought and message. (The American Guild.)

If This Be Wisdom. By Alice E. Modes, of which the following is a well-merited description:

"Suddenly out of silence, and seemingly out of depthless space, we hear a song, a bird's song—clear, resonant, undeniable, singing half of joy, half of sorrow, in a blend so magical as to carry the fortunate listener into a world outside his own."

She is a young writer of verse but success lies just beyond. (Henry Harrison.)

Out of Peony and Blade. Poems by Antoinette. This collection of poems are so beautiful in thought and so full of melody that the reader will not overlook reading even the last one entitled "Fugen Bosatsu," the last lines being—

"It is done—the flowers in the bowl
Have flourished their little while,
Have woven fantastic webs
Of a wistful ancient beauty.
They are shapeless and sodden now,
We may gather them up and throw them away
But they should not be quite forgotten."

Miss Scudder's interpretation of the oriental thought is well done and her inspiration of Japanese legends not only carried charm but a personal touch that adds originality. She is another young writer who has received much praise:

"The writer has treated stories of a surprising allegorical depth of a color which has slipped from her oriental palette and with all the ease and delicate variety one would expect of a screen or a print." (Henry Harrison, publisher, New York.)

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

In Mary Roberts Rinehart's interesting story of "My Life," she says: "I took to studying Roget's 'Thesaurus,' and I wore out one copy entirely, and had to buy another." We presume of course that she uses the Crowell "International Edition!"

Miss Mole, by E. H. Young, has just been awarded the James Tait Black prize for 1930 in England. "A Passage to India," by E. M. Forster, won this same prize in 1925.

Percy Waxman, editor of the Pictorial Review and author of "The Black Napoleon," the recent biography of Toussaint Louverture, has gone to Havanah for a month's vacation.

Anne Douglas Sedgwick's recent novel, "Dark Hester," has been dramatized by Walter Ferris and had its London opening on April 27, with an all-star cast consisting of Sybil Thorndike, Jeon Forbes-Robertson, Alan Napier and Maurice Evans.

Doris Peel, author of two novels, "Children of the Wind" and "Five on Parade," has gone to England after writing and selling four short stories to magazines.

Claude G. Bowers, author of "The Tragic Era," "Jefferson and Hamilton" and "Party Battles of the Jackson Period," delivered the centennial oration at the University of Alabama on May 11.

George Goodchild, the English detective story writer, has a new novel, "The Emperor of Hallelujah Island." Film rights of his book, "The Splendid Crime," published a year ago, have been acquired by R. K. O., and early production is expected.

Valentine Williams is the first writer of mystery stories to turn his attention to the technique of radio drama. In the intervals of putting the finishing touches to his new crime novel he has written a series of half-hour "thrillers" for the National Broadcasting Company of New York. Three of these—"Moon Maiden," "The King's Messenger" and "Mata Hari the Spy"—have already been presented through the Station WEAF and have created the widest interest throuhout the eastern states. Valentine Williams is appearing personally in these sketches supporting his wife, Miss Alice Crawford, the well-known London actress.

Stalin is by Isaac Don Levin, a newspaper correspondent in Russia. Mr. Levine gave out the "Willy-Nicky Letters" and "The Letters of the Czar to the Czarina." He is the author of "A History of the Russian Revolution" and a "Life of Lenin." Mr. Levine's book is the first biography of Stalin to be published in England.

Thomasville chapter, Miss Elizabeth Hopkins, historian, is distributing a most interesting pamphlet, "Abraham Lincoln, Strategist—Opportunist," by Dr. T. M. McIntosh, of Thomasville, which is a veritable treasure-house of information, and which should be in every southern library.

Friends of Mrs. Harry A. Craig, post registrar and past recording secretary of the division, will learn with sincere regret of the illness of her young son, Harry Jr., which has necessitated a trip to Rochester, Minn., where he will receive treatment at St. Mary's hospital. Mrs. Craig accompanied him to Rochester last week.

Chapter A. Augusta, with Mrs. Elizabeth McAllister, chairman, sold small Confederate flags on the birthday of President Davis, from which the sum of $122 was realized. This money will be used in meeting the chapter's obligation of $1,000, pledged the Jefferson Davis Memorial bridge.

Mrs. J. J. Harris, division president, spent Wednesday of the past week in Atlanta, where she presented a Cross of Service to her father, Major Rogers, at the birthday exercises in honor of President Davis. She left Wednesday for the reunion in Montgomery, as a member of the staff of Judge Peter Meldrim, state commander of veterans, and General Lynnes, inspector general. This week she will be present at the state convention of Spanish-American War Veterans and auxiliaries, in Savannah, where she will present a Cross of Service to Captain Stephen Harris and the same to Mrs. Mildred Rhodes, which comes to her through her father, the late Captain Von DerLeith, of Athens. Here, too, she will place a wreath at the boulder that is to be unveiled in honor of the Spanish War heroes. The next day she will be guest of honor in Madison where the U. D. C. chapter will entertain for her.

MADDOX CLASS SERVES SPONSORS BREAKFAST

The High 8 economics class served a breakfast to the class sponsors Tuesday morning. This was "open house" day. We also had many of our parents visit us during the day.

The monitors were given a wiener roast Monday afternoon at Mosley Park. Besides the monitors, there were present Miss Wright, sponsor; Miss Conoley and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert and children. Mr. Herbert organized the monitorial system last year, when the school was first organized.

The final assembly was held Friday. The school letters were given out at that time. The students received these awards by being of service to the school. They were the monitors, cafeteria girls, baseball, football, basketball and track teams.

We are looking forward to a pleasant vacation. We all want to carry on the summer activities that have been planned for us. We have had a great improvement in all respects over last year and are hoping to have a greater improvement next year.

KEY GRADES HOLD PARTIES AT END OF SCHOOL YEAR

The pupils of High Kindergarten were entertained one day last week at Ragolda Jacobs' house.

The pupils of High 1-1, High 1-2, and High Kindergarten had a party last Friday. They had punch and cake for refreshments. They played games, sang and danced.

Low 1 had a picnic at Grant park last Friday. They enjoyed it very much.

High 2-1 were delighted to have a visit from their sponsor, Mr. Dudley Cowles. They hope he will come often to see them.

High 3-1 went on a picnic last Tuesday.

The children of High 3-2 have taken a trip to Holland. They enjoyed it very much.

High 4-1 had their Viking play Tuesday. They invited High 6-1 to their play. They made report-card holders. They had a class picnic last Wednesday.

John D. Wood, of the observation class, was promoted to junior high.

High 5 enjoyed their excursion to Grant park. They had a picnic lunch. They appreciated Mrs. Lay's and Mrs. Hammett's help.

High 6-2 enjoyed their perfect-teeth holiday. They are proud of their garden book and are selecting the best garden to award the garden prize.

High 6-1 was sorry that George Brimer had to miss several days on account of an injured foot. They hope for him a speedy recovery. They enjoyed their class picnic Thursday. They presented their principal, clerk and class chairman with small tokens of appreciation.

KIRKWOOD GIVES GEORGIA PROGRAM FOR GRADUATION

The sixth grades graduated with 63 children in the class Thursday at 10 o'clock in the morning. The boys were dressed in white ducks and shirts and the girls in white pique sport dresses. The program was in connection with the semester's work in High 6 about Georgia. There were interesting talks and poems on our state, and several songs.

A banquet given by the mothers of both sixth grades was thoroughly enjoyed by the children of these classes. The mothers served a delicious menu, and everyone enjoyed it very much.

All the children of High 6 were promoted and are looking forward with great pleasure to junior high school in the fall, but regret that they have to leave "dear old Kirkwood."

All children in High 6-1, High 6-2 and Low 6 received penmanship certificates from Zaney-Blosser Co.; 134 received reading certificates; 55 children received Sutton buttons; 53 received athletic buttons and 10 girls received badges for learning to swim across the pool at Y. W. C. A.

FOUR STUDENTS TALK AT BROWN EXERCISES

The seniors at Joe Brown graduated last Thursday in the school auditorium. Wade Turner, the senior president, presided over the occasion. The speakers were William Clarke, Mary Farmer, Ellington Beavers and Mae Smith.

The Low Ninth grade pupils, who will graduate next February, are electing their senior president. The pupils representing the Low Ninth grade classes were Margaret Wilder, Low 9-1; Sam Smith, Low 9-II; Katherine Stevens, Low 9-III; Billy Mims, Low 9-IV, and Tom Brewer, Low 9-V. Sam Smith and Billy Mims received the most votes and will be voted on to see which gets the honor.

The senior edition of the school paper was published by the members of the special senior staff with pictures of the seniors and the senior student activities.

The seniors were honored with a garden party last Thursday afternoon after the graduation which took place in the morning.

Mr. A. M. Falkinburg, who is the sponsor for Low 9-I, visited it, accompanied by his friend, Mr. Traylor. Mr. Traylor played the piano and accordion while Mr. Falkinburg was the old-time patent medicine man, who gathered large crowds around him on the corner. Mr. Falkinburg was presented with an iron candlestick made by the boys.

ENGLISH AVENUE PUPILS CONDUCT GARDEN NORMAL

English Avenue school had the pleasure of entertaining the sixth grade teachers with a garden normal Wednesday, May 27. We were glad to have Miss Rhodes, Miss Pew and Miss Wesley, principals, and Miss May Walker, Miss Slocumb and Miss Rainwater, elementary supervisors, with us. The program follows:

Introduction was by Eddie Lee.

"History of Our Garden, Some Problems and How They Were Solved," Vera Whitaker, Ray Nix, Ruby Hallman, Dorothy Smith, all of High 6-1.

"Contributions of School Garden to Community in Plants, Cuttings and Seeds," Mary Shelton.

"Visible Influence of the Garden in Community Shown by Increase of Garden Interest," Evelyn Hall, of High 6-2.

"Our Rock Garden," Mary Jarrard.

Conclusion, Eddie Lee.

Garden play, High 1-1 pupils.

Processional to garden.

The first and second grades were delighted to have their sponsors visit them Wednesday. Some of them could not come out at that time. Those present were: A. N. Pattam, W. G. Poole, J. O. Partam, E. W. Sturdivant, Sam Leoy, Thornton Mayre, John Adams, Dr. Parks, and Dr. A. W. Long.

The children of Ungraded D were so glad to have their sponsor, V. F. Todd visit them on Tuesday. He enjoyed his visit and gave each one a little box containing needles, thread and thimble.

High 6 enjoyed the picnic that the Low 6 grades gave them Tuesday, May 26. They are busy now on the promotion program. The subject is "Cotton." The girls' dresses are all going to be cotton.

MILLICAN SPEAKS AT LUCKIE SCHOOL CLASS EXERCISES

The sixth grade of Luckie Street school had graduation exercises Wednesday, June 3. The boys and girls looked very neat, dressed in white. They enjoyed the talk which Mr. Everette Millican, mayor pro tem., a former pupil of Luckie, gave them. The P.-T. A. gave them a party which they enjoyed very much. Sixty Sutton buttons were presented at the graduation exercises.

The Kindergarten planted some seeds last spring and are glad to see them coming up so soon.

Low 2 enjoyed a visit from their sponsor, Mrs. Holland, who is connected with the Girl Scouts.

Low 5 received a visit from Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, who presented them with two lovely books.

High 1 was visited by Mrs. Miller.

Mr. Bell, of the visual education department, came out and made a picture of the High 2 Hopi Indian dolls. The picture came out Monday and Miss Thrasher and the children are very delighted over it because it is such a good one, almost better than the dolls themselves.

Low 4 is making a Greek chariot to give to Mrs. Thomas. Evelyn Gibson is leading the class in spelling.

The garden visiting committee of High 4 selected Curtis Holcomb's, Majorie Crowe's and Audrey Mower's as the best vegetable gardens, and Evelyn Johnson's and Robert Lawson's as the best flower gardens. Betty Melton's bird play was placed in the English book.

High 5-2 and Low 4 enjoyed a picnic last Tuesday, June 2, at Piedmont park.

Low 6 was very glad to have Mary Hudson, one of their old members, visit them for the last week of school. They also enjoyed a visit from Benjamin Dobbs, of Tech High, who taught them a few sentences in Spanish.

LEE SCHOOL UNVEILS PRINCIPAL'S PICTURE

Promotion exercises held at Lee Street school Tuesday, June 2, were marked by the unveiling of a picture of the principal of the school, Miss Rusha Wesley. The picture, a gift of the school from the departing sixth grade class, was presented by Elizabeth Duncan after it was unveiled by Miss Wesley's niece, Barbara Ann Yost.

The picture was accepted for the school by Mrs. F. A. Johnson, member of the Lee Street faculty. Others speaking in appreciation of Miss Wesley were Mrs. G. C. Barrow, president of the Parent-Teacher Association of the school; Mrs. W. H. Cates, who represented the mothers, and A. P. Stewart, who spoke for the daddies.

Among the school officials present at the unveiling and paying tribute to Lee Street school and Miss Wesley were Dr. Willis A. Sutton, H. Reid Hunter, Miss Mary W. Postell, Dr. H. H. Bixler, Miss Josie Slocumb, Miss Ethel Massengale, Miss Charlotte Smith, Miss Hattie Rainwater, Miss Gertrude Pollard and W. W. Gaines, president of the Atlanta board of education.

The promotion exercises this year were in the form of a seated tea given for the sixth grade, their parents, teachers and supervisors, in the school auditorium.

The exercises were opened by the song: "Happy Days Are Here Again." As a Bible reading, the class recited the parable of the talents. Mr. Gaines was introduced by Robert Head. Then followed the various toasts offered by members of the sixth grade. A song, "Our Lee," was the next thing on the program. A very attractive feature of the program was an address by Beatrice Shamos: "Our Past and a Forward Look." The class history was read by Richard Boone; the class poem by Marguerite Herron.

Athletic buttons were awarded by Miss Wesley. Dr. Sutton awarded the Sutton buttons. Miss Pollard delivered the penmanship certificates. Class prizes were presented by Mrs. Geraldine MacGuigan and Miss Marinelle Garner.

In the absence of Dr. Noah Baird, the board member of the ward, the certificates were delivered by Mr. Hunter.

Preceding the unveiling of the picture, two sixth grade pupils, Sumner Warner and Louise Standridge, sang "I Love You Truly." The picture was brought to the stage by Elizabeth Wiley and James Marks.

HOME PARK CLASS GIVEN LUNCHEON AFTER PROMOTION

The pupils of Home Park are looking forward to a long and pleasant vacation. They have all worked hard and feel that they have earned a rest. They are planning to take at least one "Book Tour" during the summer months, and hope that many will receive reading certificates in September.

High 6 are working hard on their program for their promotion exercises. They are having a character progam. They are very much pleased to have M. T. G. Douglas, their sponsor, with them on this occasion. Mr. Douglas will present their promotion certificates. After the exercises High 6 will be entertained at a luncheon prepared by their mothers.

High 6 wish to bid each of their readers a farewell. They hope that you will hear more about them and their work when they go to O'Keefe Junior High.

Miss Fox and Mr. Jones Are Wed At Beautiful Home Ceremony

Impressive and beautiful was the wedding of Miss Aurie Fox and Trenton K. Jones, which was solemnized at 2 o'clock Saturday at 1269 Pelham road in Morningside. Rev. Louie D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the family and intimate friends of the couple.

The lower floor of the home was decorated with palms, ferns and bowls of sweetpeas. Large white floor baskets holding pink roses and tied with bows of white and nile green tulle formed the aisle to the altar which was flanked on either side by white tapers placed in seven-branched candelabra. Preceding the ceremony the candles were lighted by Miss Elaine Fox.

William McFall sang "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly." The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by Miss Hilma Ogle.

The bride chose as her only attendant her sister, Miss Grethel Fox, who was gowned in buttercup yellow crepe embroidered in pink with which she wore a pink hat and pink slippers. Her corsage bouquet was of pink rosebuds. The bridegroom had as his best man R. T. Dozier.

The bride was becomingly attired in a modish frock of blue silk crepe with accessories to match. Her flowers were a graceful bouquet of gardenias.

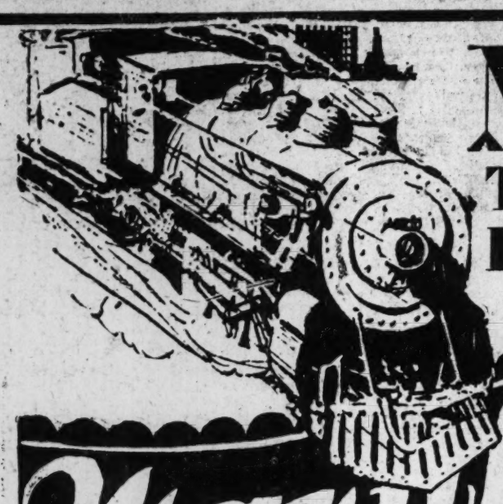

An informal reception was held following the ceremony. Punch was served from a beautifully appointed table by Miss Elaine Fox and Kathryn Ogle. Miss Patsy Miller kept the bride's book.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones left by plane for Chattanooga. After a short wedding trip they will be at home on Piedmont avenue, N. E.

Crawford-Whittle Rites

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Etheridge announce the marriage of their sister, Mrs. Luella Crawford, to William A. Whittle, of Thomaston, Ga. The marriage was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Etheridge in West End Tuesday evening, June 2. Dr. L. R. Christie, pastor of Ponce de Leon Baptist church, performed the ceremony. Mrs. Whittle is a popular teacher in the high school in Thomaston and has many friends both in Thomaston and in Atlanta. Mr. Whittle is a prominent businessman of Thomaston. Following a wedding trip in North Carolina they will reside in Thomaston, Ga.

Miss Donaldson and Mr. Lane Wed at North Avenue Church

North Avenue Presbyterian church provided a beautiful setting for the wedding of Miss Margaret Donaldson and Thomas Gantt Lane, which took place yesterday at the sunset hour with Dr. Richard Orme Flinn officiating. The church was effectively decorated with palms, ferns and Easter lilies, with a graceful basket of the lilies forming the central decoration. On either side it was flanked by smaller containers holding lilies which alternated with seven-branched candelabra holding burning tapers. Bouquets of lilies marked the pews occupied by members of the immediate families. Miss Emilie Parmalee had charge of the music and played the following organ program: "Venetian Love Song," Nevin; "Still As the Night," Boehm; "To the Rising Sun," Torgusson; "Cantilene Nuptiale," DuBois; "With You," Moret. Exactly at 5 o'clock the chimes sounded the hour, and the wedding party entered to the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin. Liebstraume, by Liszt, was played during the ceremony and the recessional by Mendelssohn was used.

Miss Jeannette Blackstock, the lovely maid of honor, wore a Vionnet model of peach silk lace and net, made with a bolero jacket featuring a deep cape collar and brief sleeves. The high waist and fitted lines flared to a graceful full skirt which was finished with a wide band of net at the bottom. Completing her costume were long white gloves, slippers dyed to match, and a large transparent hat of horsehair, having as its only trimming a narrow band of velvet ribbon. Her flowers were Ophelia roses and delphinium tied with a broad blue ribbon.

Mr. Lane had as his best man W. J. Clements. The ushers included: Freeman Hiscox, Will Cobb Wallace, Alvin Lindstrom and J. R. Whitman.

Lovely Bride.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Mark J. Donaldson, wore a Mainbocher model of pale flesh chiffon becoming to her blonde beauty. The soft material was tightly fitted at the high waistline and the waist was diagonally draped with a similated scarf caught at the right shoulder and at the left of the waistline with two hand-made petal flowers. Other attractive features were the short bolero jacket with brief sleeves and circular cuffs. She wore a picture hat of transparent shell pink horsehair with bands of lacy straw inset around the brim and a single pink gardenia placed under the brim next to the face formed the only trimming. Her slippers and gloves were of matching shades and she carried a shower bouquet of Joanna Hill roses showered with lilies of the valley tied with tiny silk ribbons and finished with a large bow of pink ribbon.

Following the wedding ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Mark J. Donaldson, parents of the bride-elect, entertained at a small reception at their home on Lakeview avenue. The guests included the bridal party, members of the immediate families and out-of-town guests. The hosts were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lane, of Macon, Ga., parents of the bridegroom.

Smart Costumes.

Mrs. Donaldson, mother of the bride, was becomingly gowned in blue chiffon over flesh, with elbow sleeves and a blue horsehair hat. Her shoulder spray was of pink roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Lane, mother of the bridegroom, wore a model of powder blue chiffon and blue lace with a blue hat and matching accessories. She also wore a shoulder bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hiscox and the Rev. L. Judson Donaldson, grandparents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. James Gantt, of Macon, grandparents of the bridegroom, assisted in entertaining. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Tharpe, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Wing, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Williams and Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Smith, all of Macon.

Mrs. Donaldson's traveling costume was a Patou model of dark blue sweet pea crepe with a blouse of ecru lace and her hat was an Agnes model of matching straw with a nose veil. She wore accessories of the same tones and a shoulder corsage of pink rosebuds and valley lilies. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson left for Savannah and will sail from there for New York, where they will spend two weeks. On their return they will be at home at the corner of North Highland avenue and Morningside drive.

Officers Elected by McLendon P.-T. A.

C. J. McLendon P.-T. A. met Tuesday with Mrs. B. F. Hedges, president, presiding. Yearly reports of the vice presidents and chairmen were given. Mrs. Hedges expressed her appreciation to the teachers and members of the organization for their loyalty and co-operation during the past year. The nominating committee, Mrs. Huckeby, chairman, gave its report, and it was accepted. The following officers were introduced: Mrs. Hedges, re-elected president; Mrs. L. W. Flowers, first vice president; Mrs. Charles Bright, second vice president; Mrs. C. D. Layton, third vice president; Mrs. Arthur Cates, fourth vice president; Mrs. J. C. Slade, fifth vice president; Mrs. W. E. Camp, secretary, and Mrs. J. N. Thomas, treasurer.

Mary Ellen and Dorothy May Bright gave a piano and violin duet. The teachers' chorus and kitchen orchestra, composed of several mothers, presented several numbers. A grade count was taken, the prizes being given the second grade. Miss Pearl Acree, teacher. The following chairmen are announced for the forthcoming year: Mrs. M. B. McKeithen, hospitality; Mrs. George Fielding, pre-school; Mrs. A. H. Rossman, publicity; Miss Ira Jarrell, program; Mrs. B. H. Scogin, finance; Mrs. L. E. Tolbert, juvenile protection; Mrs. J. B. Hucheby, citizenship; Mrs. A. L. Nickelson, safety and recreation; Mrs. A. C. Day, thrift; Mrs. F. R. McWaters, home classes; Mrs. C. L. Wood, health; Mrs. W. L. Simmons, music and radio; Mrs. E. R. Sweat, reading; Mrs. William H. Russell, magazines; Mrs. A. A. Williams, standard of excellence, and Mrs. R. Sellers, parent education.

St. Philip's Dance.

St. Philip's Cathedral Church School P.-T. A. will give another of its dances Wednesday evening, June 10, at 8:30 o'clock at the chapter house of the cathedral, 11 Hunter street, S. W. An orchestra will render dance music. Admission 35 cents each at the door. The proceeds of this occasion will be devoted to the teacher-pupil training fund to send members of the faculty to the training school at Sewanee this summer. The general public is invited to attend.

Library Benefit.

Northside Library Association will sponsor a benefit bridge party Wednesday, June 10, at 3 o'clock, in the Masonic hall at Buckhead.

This party is being given for the purpose of adding new books to the library. Any one desiring table reservations please call Mrs. J. T. Stephenson, Piedmont road, Cherokee 2270-J.

Reservations Are Announced For Brookhaven Club Opening

Three hundred members of the Brookhaven Country Club, with a large number of visitors, will assemble next Thursday evening at this attractive club for the dinner-dance that will inaugurate the informal summer opening of this popular club. Dinner will be served at tables arranged on the spacious terrace, where dancing will be enjoyed between courses, the music to be furnished by a well known orchestra.

Among those who have made reservations for the opening are Mr. and Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris Jr., Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cates, Mr. and Mrs. Donald McIver, Mr. and Mrs. Mell Wilkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woodruff, Dr. and Mrs. F. M. Barfield, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Porter, Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Toler, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Long, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Burnett, Mr. and Mrs. Howard McCall, Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Goodloe Yancey, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Heinz, Mr. and Mrs. Everett N. Brown, Judge and Mrs. Luther Rosser, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Brooks and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Lewis.

Brookhaven club will be the scene of innumerable social gayeties throughout the summer season, including luncheons, teas, suppers and dinners.

A number of midday dinner parties are planned for today at Brookhaven. Among the parties planned is the family dinner that will be given for Mrs. Harry Toulmin and her small daughter, Aubrey, of Dayton, Ohio, who are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Morgan. Covers will be placed for Mrs. Toulmin, Miss Aubrey Toulmin, Mrs. George McCarty, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Rucker McCarty, Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Morgan, Ottley McCarty, George McCarty III, Mrs. W. P. Crenshaw and Miss Margaret Douglas Burke. Mrs. Toulmin was honor guest yesterday at the luncheon party given by Mrs. Joel Hurt Jr. at Brookhaven, the guests including six close friends.

Ladies' day, celebrated every Wednesday at Brookhaven, is proving popular with fashionable young matrons and belles, who assemble on the club terrace for a game of bridge preceded or followed by luncheon and tea. A number of reservations have been made for next Wednesday with early summer visitors and brides-elect to be honor guests in parties. Miss Elizabeth Dodd, popular June bride-elect, will be the central figure in the luncheon party to be given at the club Wednesday.

Middle Georgia College Closes Season With Annual Debate

COCHRAN, Ga., June 6.—Commencement at Middle Georgia College closed last Tuesday evening. The baccalaureate sermon was delivered Sunday by Dr. W. H. Budd, of the First Methodist church of Hawkinsville. The Demosthenean and Ciceronean literary societies presented the annual debate Tuesday. The subject of the debate was, "Resolved, That the Discount of the W. & A. Rentals Provides the Most Practical Method of the Payment of the State of Georgia." The affirmative side was presented by the Demosthenean society with Eugene Yawn and Elbert Brown as debaters. The negative was given by the Ciceronean society with Willard Ellis and Eldon Lindsey presenting the arguments. Milton Carlton won the declamation contest; Miss Mildred Witherington won the piano, and Miss Mildred Riner was awarded the prize in the reading. The home economics department, under the direction of Miss Merle Eubanks, presented a fashion show in which the students modeled garments made during the year.

Honorable Hugh Peterson, state senator-elect from the fifteenth district, delivered an address on "How to Succeed." Honorable T. L. Bailey, of Cochran, memorialized the splendid achievements of the late Dr. T. D. Walker, chairman of the board of trustees of Middle Georgia College. Walton Walker, the grandson of Dr. Walker, unveiled an oil painting of Dr. Walker. Colonel H. McWorther, representative-elect of Bleckley county, and a member of the board of trustees of the college, presented the diplomas to the 80 graduates. Mrs. L. A. Whipple presented Miss Virginia Redmond with first prize for the best essay in a recent W. C. T. U. contest. Misses Louise Bolin and Edna Smith tied for second place and Willard Ellis and Joe C. Burch for third.

American War Mothers Organize.

Mrs. Charles H. Baker, organizing president of the American War Mothers, invites all mothers of the World War to meet her in pine room of the Ansley hotel Tuesday, May 9, at 3:30. An election of officers will be held and the first chapter of the American War Mothers in Georgia will be installed.

gandy with wide-brimmed hats and slippers to match. Mrs. Lorini's gown was of canary yellow and Mrs. O'Rourke wore shell pink. Graceful bouquets of gardenias completed the lovely costumes. Miss Joan Whiting Lorini, niece of the bride, acted as flower girl. Yellow organdy fashioned her gown and her flowers were an armful of garden flowers.

Frank Ogden Walsh, of Atlanta, acted as best man for his brother. The ushers were George Goodwin Walsh, another brother of the bride-groom; Cyril White, brother of the bride, and Osmun Whiting Lorini.

Mr. and Mrs. Walsh sailed at 3 o'clock this afternoon for a month's honeymoon in Bermuda. On their return they will reside in Pelham, N. Y.

Mr. Walsh was graduated in 1926 from Oglethorpe University, where he played end on the varsity football teams of 1924, '25 and 1926. He is a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and is associated with the First National and Old Colony bank, of Boston, Mass.

The bride was graduated from Sacred Heart convent at Maplehurst, N. Y., and attended the Merici school here. Her father is a private banker and an important figure in eastern financial circles.

ATLANTANS GO TO SEA ISLAND

flight from Atlanta, Latimer Collier and his son, Henry Collier, landed today in their monocoupe plane at the Sea Island Beach airport to spend the week-end with Mrs. Henry L. Collier at the Hotel Cloister. The brilliant yellow wings and coal black body of the plane were visible to the eye several hundred feet before Mr. Collier made a perfect landing beside the red plane owned by James T. Williams, who is making daily flights from the airport.

Colonel and Mrs. Wilkes Are Hosts.

Colonel and Mrs. Sam W. Wilkes have returned from Montgomery, Ala., where they attended the Confederate reunion and were among the popular guests honored at the attendant social festivities. Following is an excerpt from the Montgomery Advertiser of June 5 relative to a luncheon at which Colonel and Mrs. Wilkes were hosts during their visit:

"Colonel and Mrs. Sam Wilkes, of Atlanta, entertained on Wednesday at a luncheon at the Jefferson Davis hotel, given in honor of Mrs. Charles A. Wickersham, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Jennie Capers, of Moultrie, Ga.

"Mrs. Wickersham, who is the wife of the president of the Atlanta & West Point railway, has many social connections in Montgomery.

"Mrs. Capers is widely known in Confederate patriotic circles, and has attended many reunions of the Confederate veterans. Her appearance is the signal in any gathering for applause. Mrs. Capers is of the old school. She is of brilliant mentality and has been the subject of appreciative comment in the press of the country."

Wishing Well Centers Table.

Admiring exclamations from all the guests greeted the unique and attractive table decorations arranged by Mrs. Carl Lewis at the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Friday evening in honor of Miss Elizabeth Catherine Johnson and Thomas Roberts, whose marriage will be an event of social interest taking place Saturday, June 13. The dining table was overlaid with an imported lace cloth and was centered by an ingeniously arranged wishing well which held gifts for the bride-elect and bridegroom-to-be and prizes for the top scores in a bridge game which followed the dinner. The well was fashioned of material similating rough shingle wood and consisted of a peaked roof held by four tiny posts over the circular well. A dainty arrangement of small wax-like flowers encircled the center decoration, and four white satin ribbons were stretched from the well to an equal number of white swans placed at the corners of the table. The waxy white of the miniature lilies was repeated in the flowers which filled the swan vase and two tall crystal epergnes holding Madonna lilies, white larkspur and ferns graced either end of the table and completed a picture of loveliness, attesting the artistic flare for which Mrs. Lewis is noted.

Miss Lokey In Athens Wedding.

Atlanta's charming belles are much in demand as attendants in the weddings of their out-of-town friends and there is small wonder when they are as attractive as Miss Boyce Lokey, who will go to Athens this week to take part in the wedding of Miss Sarah Morris and Albert Mobley Jr., which will be an interesting social event of June 11 at the home of the bride-elect's parents. Miss Lokey will be one of six close friends of the bride-elect who will act as ribbon bearers, marking the aisle for the wedding party. She will make an attractive picture wearing a summery model of white organdy, featuring pastel shaded embroidery, and a sash of ciel blue, which will be most becoming to her brunet beauty.

The next day after the wedding Miss Lokey, accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Hall, will go to Cleveland, Ohio, where they will be the guests of Miss Mary Lou Gillies, who is a niece of Mrs. Sam Hewlett and has visited her aunt in Atlanta. This trio will spend a month at the cottage of Miss Gillies on a popular lake near Cleveland and will form an interesting part of the younger contingent at this resort. In addition to other intriguing plans, Miss Lokey hopes to be able to go to Kent, Ohio, to attend the wedding of Miss Laura Smith to Henry Pointer Bemis, of Kent, but formerly of Atlanta. Miss Lokey will return the early part of July to resume her place in Atlanta's coterie of acknowledged belles.

Oakhurst P.-T. A. Closes Successful Year.

Oakhurst P.-T. A. closes a most successful year. For the second time Oakhurst has attained the standard of a superior association. This honor was won for the first time in the history of the association last year under the administration of Mrs. W. O. Welch, president, and again this year under the second administration of Mrs. Welch. This signal honor sets a precedent for the association to follow in future years. This year the Oakhurst scrapbook, Mrs. L. D. Jolly, chairman, was sent to the national conference at Hot Springs, Ark., as it is one of six selected from the whole state of Georgia for this honor. This scrapbook was the only one sent from Decatur.

The May meeting of the daddies was well attended. The reports for the year were read and proved interesting. Mrs. Vernon Frank, newly-elected president, entertained the association with a bridge-tea at her home, Fairview, on East Lake drive. The Oakhurst P.-T. A. has carried on every phase of the work this year and has held up the work of every department. Mrs. Scott, health chairman, has just held the summer roundup of the pre-school children. The physical examinations proved very helpful to the children. The dental examinations will be held at a later date.

Tenth Street School Holds Debate.

Annual debate was held at Tenth Street school last Friday by High 6-II. The subject for debate was, "Resolved, That Paved Highways Are More Profitable to Our Country Than Railroads." The speakers for the affirmative side were Lad Creighton, Dorothy See and James Rimer. Those on the negative side were Sarah Brown, Robert Cliett and Ruth Sisk. The judges awarded the decision to the negative side and the medals to Sarah Brown and James Rimer as the best speakers. These medals were donated by the P.-T. A. of Tenth Street school. The judges were Mrs. Herbert Alden, past president of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. Ira Farmer, who has taken a prominent part in educational and civic work since 1913, and George Acford, representative to the Georgia state legislature. The medals were presented by Mr. Acford, who was introduced by Mrs. J. A. Beall, president of the Tenth Street School P.-T. A.

Fulton High P.-T. A. Has Final Meet.

North Fulton High P.-T. A. met Monday for the final meeting of the year with Mrs. Moreton Rolleston presiding. A special feature was the dramatization of Mary Cushman's home economics essay which had been chosen as the best one from North Fulton High school for the state contest. A fashion review was of interest since each garment had been made by the girls of the club.

Nominating committee composed of Mrs. Alton Irby, Mrs. Doyle Butler and Mrs. Walter C. Goodpasture, recommended the following as officers for the coming year: Mrs. David C. Shepherd, president; William F. Dykes, first vice president; Mrs. Thomas Strickland, second vice president; Mrs. Stephen Burney Naff, recording secretary; Mrs. Donald Brown, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Hayden Jones, treasurer. The slate was accepted as a whole. Mrs. Strickland, in behalf of the executive board, presented Mrs. Rolleston with a pair of Royal Doulton china pitchers in appreciation of her constructive work in the new high school. Tea was served with the Home Economics Club girls as hostesses.

Does College Pay?

By Albert Edward Wiggam

Author of "The Marks of an Educated Man," "The New Decalogue of Science," "The Fruit of the Family Tree," Etc.

"DON'T go to college if you would succeed in business!"

This is the advice which many big businessmen, relying mainly upon their own experience as a source, occasionally pass along to the youth of America.

Such advice is merely another illustration of the tendency of a fairly large group of industrial leaders both to belittle higher education as a pathway to business success, and to show an amazing ignorance of the broad and impartial investigations that have been made both as to the effect of higher scholarship and of higher education, both high school and college, upon success in business.

During the next few weeks some 40,000 students will be graduated by the colleges of the country and many of them will begin their business careers. So this is a particularly appropriate time to study this type of advice and to determine how valuable it is and how much truth it holds.

Since I feel strongly that such remarks as the one I have quoted do grave injustice to American education and may do irreparable damage to the life careers of many young men who believe that all utterances coming from such sources must be 100 per cent true, I shall endeavor to show that they are at least 75 per cent untrue.

In order to do this I shall set forth investigations in three fields of education and business: First, the effect of high scholarships on business success. Second, the comparative effects of eighth-grade, high school and college graduation upon business success. Third, the effect of both high scholarship and other college successes upon business success.

I think I can best introduce the first investigation by a simple but dramatic story.

One day, not long since, a college professor and a committee of "Old Grads" were going over the records of 1,800 of the graduates of one of our great universities in order to find how the "old boys" were succeeding in life. They wished especially to learn whether the high-mark men in college were making the high marks in life, or whether the low-mark men were the ones who had in the main achieved worldly fame and fortune. By and by they came to one man who gave as his occupation "selling chicken wire fence in a small town." This is certainly a respectable occupation, but not one usually contemplated as the chief objective of a college curriculum. At this point one member of the Old Grad committee, who evidently had not lost his sporting blood, offered to bet 100 to 1 that if they would look up this man's college grades they would find them to average below 87. Neither the professor nor any member of the committee would take the bet. Yet I am certain that ninety-nine businessmen out of a hundred throughout the United States would have taken the bet, not only at 100 to 1 but at 1 to 1. If they had they would have lost at any odds, because when they looked up this man's grades they found them to average below 83.

Now the reason why I say businessmen generally would have taken this bet without hesitation is because there is an almost universal belief among the business public that the brilliant scholar in college is usually a failure in the business world. He is believed to be "impractical, "a dreamer," a man with his head full of theories and highfaluting ideas, and almost certain to be a failure as a high-power salesman, a production manager, a judge of securities or as any type of executive.

I know this personally from having lectured to hundreds of chambers of commerce, executive clubs and salesmen's conventions and the like throughout the country. Moreover, we see this opinion constantly and confidently voiced by many of America's leading businessmen. We see also the opposite opinion just as confidently expressed—namely, that the men who are low or who fail in their college studies but who are leaders in college riots and daredevil pranks or in athletics, or are among the champion dancers and ladies' men of the campus, and who bluff their way over the prostrate forms of the professors and deans are the ones whom we usually find in after life fighting the big legal battles of holding down important jobs as presidents of big corporations and managers of the country's general destinies.

On the other hand, the reason why no member of this committee would risk his money on the foregoing bet, even at 100 to 1, was because he knew too much about it. It was because this committee and this professor, Rr. Hugh A. Smith, now of the University of Wisconsin, had been engaged upon a two-year research to find just how the good, bad and mediocre students in this list of 1,800 had really turned out. I must confess that while all my own studies have confirmed my belief that high scholarship, high intelligence, high character, high personal qualities and high purpose in life all seem to go together, the results of this study in all these respects are truly astounding. A great deal of the data has not been published, but Mr. Smith has given me, from a technical monograph, some of his main conclusions. To use the common parlance, they knock into a cocked hat the notion that the college prodigy and the brilliant student are likely to fail in practical life and that the dull student is likely to succeed.

What Professor Smith did was to take all the graduates of this university, numbering 1,800, who had been out in life from 15 to 45 years, study their worldly success and then compare this with their college records. In order to be fair in deciding what should be called "success," Dr. Smith asked the committees of the various classes of bygone years to give their frank opinions on the post-college careers of their old classmates. He also secured the opinions with these men's careers.

Doubtless some of the judges laid emphasis on intellectual or literary or professional achievement, some on eminence as a citizen and some on money and other things. As a result, therefore, a composite, well-balanced judgment of the success of each man was reached. They then compared these rankings of worldly success with the rankings that their college teachers had given them all the way from 15 to 45 years ago. How did the two gradings—the college grading and the worldly grading—agree?

The agreement was almost unbelievable. As Professor Smith says. "If a man was high in one list, he was almost invariably high in the other; and if low in one, low in the other. This situation was repeated with such monotony that the temptation became strong when one factor was known to accept it as a certain indication of the other. If, for example, the college record of student No. 500 happened to be misplaced, but the information showed that he had clearly won no distinction in life, it hardly seemed worth while to search for the missing record. Experience with hundreds of others made it sure he would be classed with 99 per cent of certainty in the group with low marks. On the other hand, if a man had had a grade in college of 93 or better, it seemed almost superfluous to consult records and write letters in order to learn that he held a position of importance or eminence."

As an example of this, in one class of 54 graduates nine were judged by this jury of their fellow men to have achieved true worldly success. Six of these men had grades above 91 and two had 89. Only the remaining one had a grade as low as 85. In another class of 75 members 11 were nominated for high worldly rank. Ten of the 11 had been the first ten in scholarship in college. The 11th had a mark of only 85, being one of the few exceptions to the rule. And it is rather discouraging for America's future to find that this man and also most of the other low grade men who did attain eminence were politicians! As Professor Smith remarks: "It does not seem certain that a high college record is an asset in getting votes."

But the most striking thing was that a separate list was made up of the 97 who were considered "the most worthy, successful or eminent." Another list was made up of the 93 who had the highest grades. The astonishing thing is that these two lists contained 67 names in common!

Professor Smith made another comparison between college grades and election to "Who's Who in America." He took three of the earlier classes, numbering 93 members, counting both men and women, and selected the 12 with the highest college records. Nine of these 12 were in "Who's Who," while only one out of the 81 remaining members with lower records were in "Who's Who." Since few women are elected to "Who's Who," he took a list of two hundred men from the five classes about midway in age and found, among the 28 high-mark men, 18 who were in "Who's Who." Only two of the remaining 172 low-mark men were in "Who's Who." Combining the two groups just mentioned, we see that out of the 40 high-mark students 27 are listed in "Who's Who," while low-mark students only three are found in "Who's Who."

This study makes it obvious that when, over a period of four years, some 20 or 30 college professors and several deans mark a man with high grades for intellectual achievement, industry and general soundness of character—which makes a sum total of about 2,000 recorded gradings by men who are themselves men of intelligence and character—it gives a pretty clear indication of what the world may expect of that young man in the way of worldly achievement. College professors are not very different in their judgments of human nature from businessmen. As one philosopher said, "College does not make fools, it develops them." Neither does it make wise men; but it gives the fool his chance, and it gives the studious, industrious, soundhearted boy and girl their chance to show what they are made of, and the world of business by and by gives them just about the same relative chance and accepts them pretty much at their own price.

However, the foregoing is only one of a number of remarkable studies that have been published recently on the relationship between scholarship and life. It is here that I wish to present the second investigation dealing with eighth-grade, high school and college graduation and worldly success. This involves a primary question of the first importance—namely, "Does education pay at all?"

The most notable study of this question has recently been made by Dean Everett W. Lord, of Boston University. He studied the records of about 5,000 men, ranging in age from 19 to 72 years, living in all parts of the United States and including bankers and bakers, clerks and clergymen, merchant and mechanics, actors and doctors, teachers and accountants. Certainly this gives us a cross section of American business. What gives it even greater authority is that a large part of the data was collected through the Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity—a fraternity of businessmen.

There is a steady climb in income from the eighth grade graduates through the college graduates to the doctors of philosophy.

The grade school man reaches the high point of his earnings at 40 to 44 years of age, while partial high school and full high school graduates reach their peaks around 45 and carry on at about the same level to 56, then they sharply decline. But the income of the college graduates keeps on rising (with a few slight temporary declines) until he is at least 64 years old. The masters of arts and doctors of philosophy reach their peaks at 40 to 45, but Dean Lord believes this is probably because most of them go into teaching, which is not as well paid as business.

It is a temptation to detail a large number of the remarkable findings of Dean Lord's able and impartial research, but in sending me his tables and figures, the dean himself has marked a few items in red ink that I think ought to come home to the young men of America.

Some of these items are as follows: It costs about $30 a year for the state and nation to give a boy the first eight grades of schooling, but this expenditure, as nearly as can be estimated, adds about $1,000 a year to the boy's income for the next 41 years over the income earned by illiterates. It costs about $300 a year for four years to give a boy a high school education, but he earns about $500 a year more than the eighth grade boy for the next 40 years. It costs a young man about $1,000 a year for four years to secure a college education, but the college graduate earns approximately $1,800 a year more than the high school graduate for the next 40 years.

Of course, the college graduate as a rule is an abler man than either the high school or eighth grade graduate—something most businessmen overlook—yet recent surveys have shown that a large number of young men of college ability stop their schooling at the end of high school. So it is evident that a great many young people have not yet fully realized the money value of education.

One other point of great interest is that large numbers of eighth grade and high school graduates have subsequently taken correspondence courses or attended so-called "business colleges." All these show uniformly higher earnings than those who do not secure this additional training. Dean Lord also brings out the striking value of a genuine course in the newer schools of business administration which many colleges have instituted, beginning with the Wharton School of Finance of the University of Pennsylvania in 1881 and the College of Commerce of the University of California in 1898.

The earnings of the graduates from these higher institutions who received the degree of bachelor of business administration and bachelor of commercial science run far above those of the bachelors of arts and bachelors of science. Dean Lord shows that the lifetime earnings of a B.B.A. or B.B.S are now probably more than $100,000 greater than those of the average college graduate. However, as time goes on and larger numbers of young men take these courses and the competition becomes keener, some of this difference doubtless will disappear.

In fact, just at this moment Dr. Paul S. Achilles, executive secretary of the Psychological Corporation of America, has called me on the phone and sent me proofs of a new study in this field—indeed, the whole field of education in its relations to business—entitled "University Education for Business," by Dr. James H. S. Bossard, professor of sociology, and Dr. J. Frederick Dewhurst, professor of industry, at the Wharton school. It is a work of extraordinary importance to all American business life. But the feature of interest at this moment is that the median earnings of 1,659 Wharton graduates in 1930 was $3,730. This includes all ages and years of experience, and is near treble the similar figure for Dean Lord's eighth-grade men, and one and a half times greater than his high school men.

Furthermore, this able and epochmaking study discloses the fact that the median earnings of men who have been out of Wharton 15 or 16 years is $7,800, while the median earnings of those graduating in 1911-13 is $12,000. Forty per cent of the men graduating in 1917-18 are already earning over $12,000. May I ask where are the bright, ambitious office boys who started business life in 1918 or even six years earlier, compared to these men in point of income? Forty-one per cent of the 1928 graduates are already earning more than $2,000 and 21 per cent more than $3,000. It would be interesting to learn what percentage of office boys who kept their eyes and ears open during the four years these boys were in college and two years thereafter are earning more than $3,000 a year.

Coming now to the third series of investigations, again dealing with the question of whether high-mark college men earn more than low-mark men and, still further, whether success in general college and campus activities outside the courses of study indicates future business success, two remarkable investigations have been made on the men in the Bell Telephone System—one by Dr. Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and the other by Donald S. Bridgman, of the personnel department of the Bell System. President Gifford published his study in 1928, and the results have attracted wide attention. The Bell System is the greatest corporation in the world, and if it finds it worth while to pay higher salaries to brilliant college students, it certainly shatters the stubborn myth that the college prodigy peters out in business.

President Gifford studied the salary and scholarship records of 3,806 college men in the Bell System by dividing them into four grades, as to scholarship, as follows:

1. Those graduating in the first tenth of their class.
2. Those graduating in the first third but not in the first tenth.
3. Those graduating in the middle third of their class.
4. Those graduating in the lower third of that class.

How have these men fared as to salaries in the Bell System? The results are all in favor of the brilliant college scholar as a success in business. After five years of employment, the upper tenth scholars began to earn more than the other college men. As President Gifford says: "These men continued to increase their advantage little by little, until they were 25 years out of college. Then they began to go ahead still more rapidly. . . . Many individuals did better and many poorer than the medium man in the group, but the group as a whole averaged substantially higher earnings than the rest of the 3,800 men."

Taking next the 1,468 men who graduated in the middle third of their classes, after 30 years out of college their median earnings were less than two-thirds as much as the median earnings of those in the first tenth of their classes. The earnings of the 784 men in the lowest third of their classes trend in the opposite direction from those in the upper ten; that is, the longer the best students are in business the more rapidly their earnings rise, while the longer the poorer students are in business the slower their earnings rise. It must, of course, be remembered that there were individual men who were striking exceptions to these general rules.

Stimulated by the research and the enormous public interest it aroused, Mr. Bridgman made a further study of various college achievements and their relation to subsequent success with the Bell Telephone System. Mr. Bridgman's object was to see if other things besides a man's scholarship in college were related to his future business success. For this purpose he classified

AUNT HET

BY ROBERT QUILLEN

"I WASN'T much surprised when Joe an' Emily parted. They'd moved to the city where they didn't have no neighbors to be scared of, an' they didn't have nothin' to give up except each other.

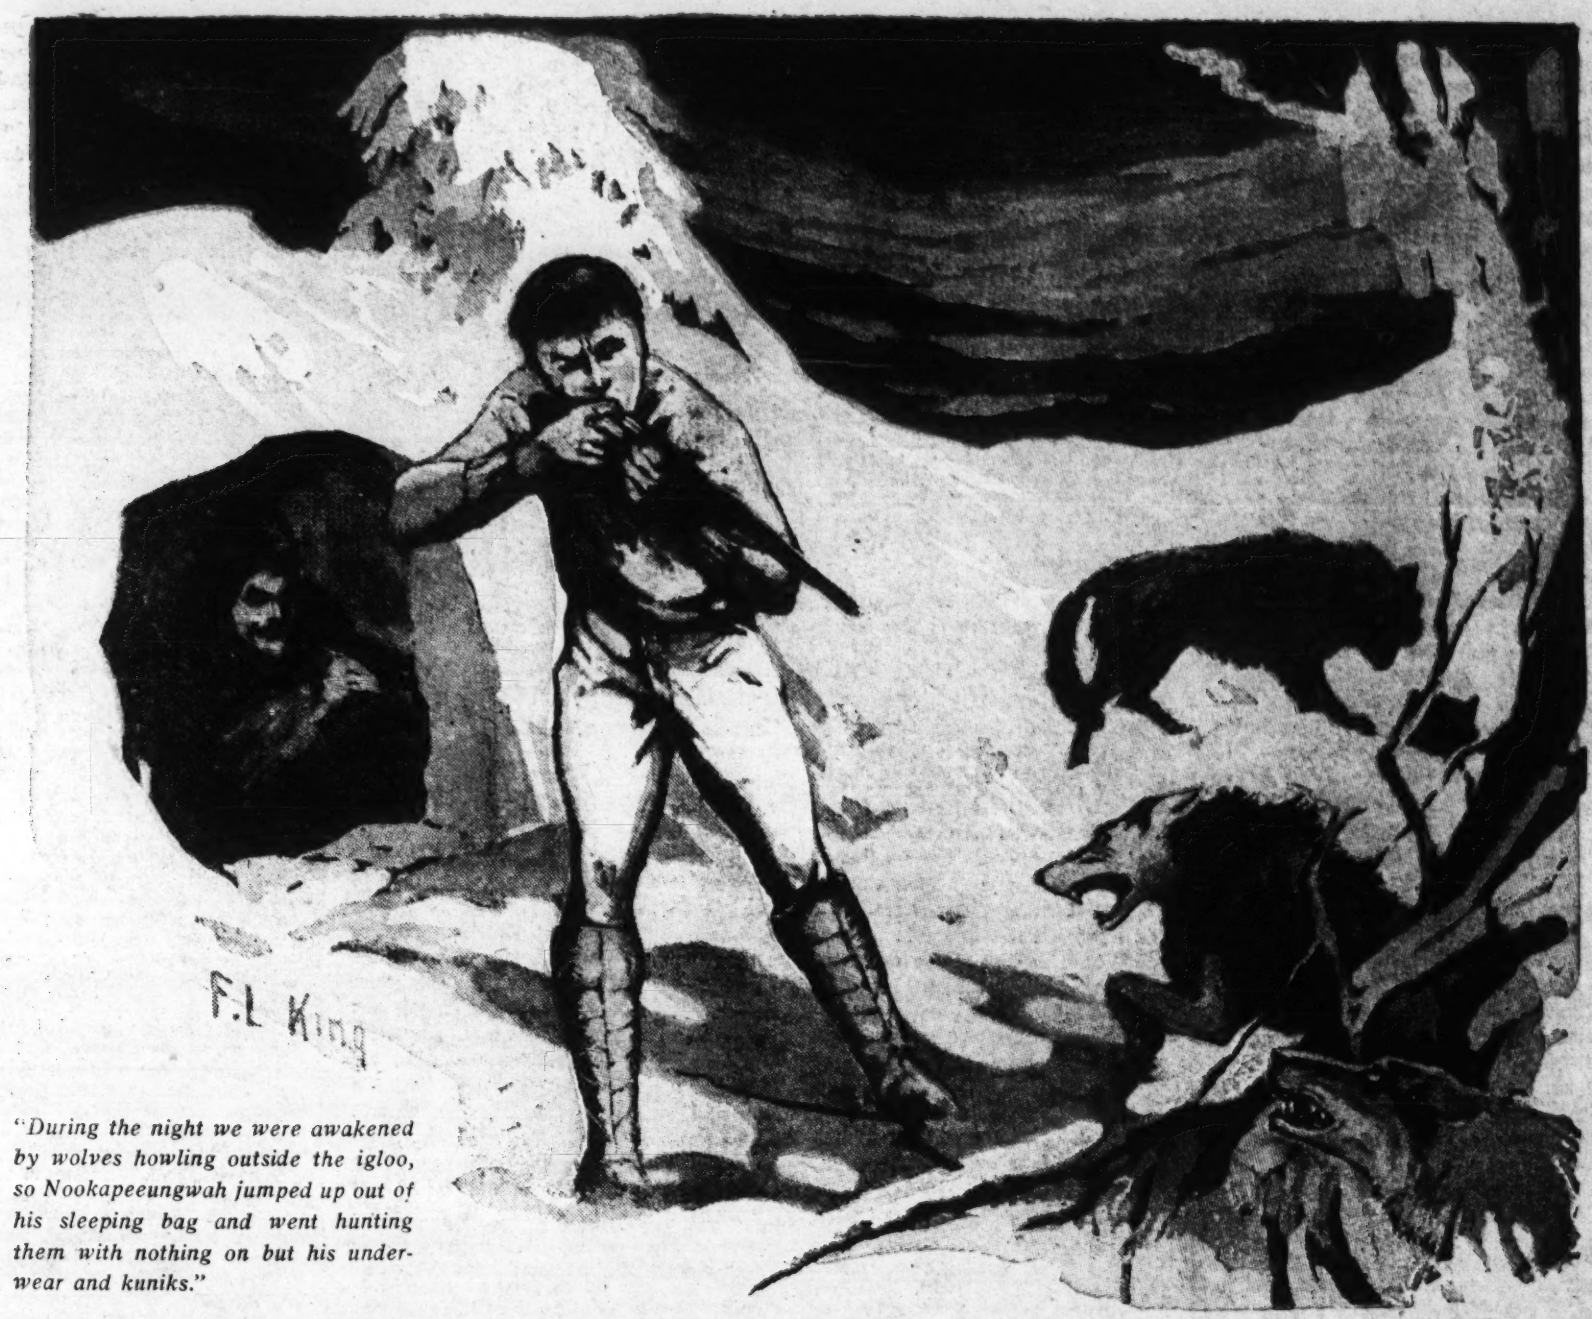

"As long as they lived in a little town, they had to get along to keep from bein' talked about. If they got to quarrelin' at one another, they didn't think about divorce. They just pulled the shades down an' fought it out, an' they dried up the minute they heard footsteps on the porch.

"They was payin' for a home too, an' no matter how mad they got at one another, neither of 'em was willin' to give up all they'd sacrificed an' slaved for.

"I told my girls when they got married, I said: 'Love will patch up your quarrels the first year, but you'd better start accumulatin' somethin' you can't divide easy. Babies is best, but a home is good, too; an' if you can't have babies or a home, you'd better start buyin' good furniture that both of you would hate to part with.'

"Next to neighbors, there ain't nothin' prevents divorce like knowin' you'd have to give up somethin' you ain't mad at."

Poker Fiends Gamble Wives

By John T. Brady

WILD games of draw poker in which men stake their wives and youthful daughters on the turn of a card when all their other worldly possessions have been lost are being played by certain natives of the far north.

Moreover, the exchanging of wives is a more or less common occurrence in these tribes, the women apparently having no say in the matter whatever.

News of the discovery that such barbarous practices are prevalent in the vicinity of Baker lake, inland from Chesterfield inlet on the western shore of Hudson bay, and of the efforts made to put an end to them has just been revealed to the world with the publication of the latest annual report on the activities of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police by Commissioner Cortland Starnes.

Deeper Into Ice Lands.

Every year the hardy and adventurous members of the world-famous mounties are extending their patrols deeper and deeper into the uncivilized arctic and sub-arctic regions of Canada. And every year they bring back from those wilds stranger and more amazing tales of real life, which would be hard to believe did they not come from such reliable sources and appear in terse, matter-of-fact official reports.

Shocking as the report of gambling for women and young girls is, it may not stir your emotions so deeply, however, as the dramatic, tragic story of how a despondent old Eskimo hunter, crippled and helpless from paralysis, prevailed upon his wife to help him commit suicide, and she stood by while he took his own life without making any physical effort to stop him. This incident, by the way, shows a peculiarity of Eskimo psychology.

Rather Hunt Than Sleep.

Then, by way of relief, comedy and evidence that the mounties who make these long and arduous patrols of the far north keep their sense of humor despite the hardships they have to endure and frequent sights of human suffering and misery, there is a most amusing story about an Eskimo who would rather hunt wolves than eat or sleep. In fact, he got up in the middle of the night and went hunting them with nothing on but his underwear, although the temperature was 40 below zero and there was much snow on the ground.

The serious results of the development of the craze for gambling among the native inlanders of the provisional district of Keewatin, to the north of Manitoba, were reported by Corporal H. G. Nichols. He spent the winter of 1929-30 at Baker lake, where a new detachment was being established, and being prevented, because of the extreme scarcity of dogs, from making any extensive patrols throughout the whole period, he employed his time to good advantage studying the natives.

Gamble Wives Away.

He visited and talked with all natives from the various camps inland when they arrived at the two trading posts to trade in their fur, and as a result of questioning them about their mode of living he states:

"I am of the opinion that natives, more especially the inlanders, spend a considerable time during the rough weather gambling. Apparently it is a more or less common event for a man to gamble his wife or daughters, apart from foxes, rifles, etc.

"One case on the settlement came to my notice during the winter. Native Soodyyailuk, a former Utkuhikhalingmiut, now employed by the Dominion Explorers, had lost, by card playing, to native Ishootmata of the Krainelmiut, his tent, rifle, ammunition, one dog, deerskins, snowknife, in fact all his worldly possessions.

"In response to my inquiries, Ishootmata produced a pack of cards and I discovered that the game played was draw poker. I had the articles mentioned returned to the former owner, and informed all natives that gambling was wrong and would therefore cease. It was at this inquiry that I heard of the more serious gambling inland.

"I am unaware whether polygamy or polyandry exists among any of the various tribes. Neither occurs amongst the Krainelmiut, though I am almost sure polygamy is practiced amongst the inlanders. The exchanging of wives is a more or less common occurrence, the women apparently having no voice in the matter whatsoever, but merely obeying the husband."

Found in Destitution.

Though the primary object of these long patrols which the mounties make into the northern Canadian wilderness is to encourage respect for law and order, they also have a humanitarian aspect, for the patrolmen often discover and take steps to relieve cases of physical suffering and destitution. A typical example of this relief work is given by Corporal Nichols.

The native Shilictuk of the Krainelmiut tribe fell sick with some obscure stomach trouble in the fall or early winter of 1929-30, and he was also somewhat handicapped by a crippled thigh.

Immediately he heard of this Corporal Nichols set out with hired natives and a team of dogs for Shilictuk's camp, about 50 miles inland, north and west of the post on Baker lake.

Upon arrival at his destination the officer found that the Shilictuk family consisted of a man, his wife and three children. None of them was able to hunt or trap, and all were in a half-starved condition. The eldest girl, about 17 years of age, had also fallen sick, apparently about Christmas, and had not left the snowhouse for weeks. She was dragging herself about on hands and knees and presented a most pitiable sight when Corporal Nichols came to the rescue.

He brought this family, with all their goods, into the post, and authorized the post manager of the Hudson's Bay Company to issue a destitute ration until the police supplies could be landed in the summer.

Strange Suicide.

In another case of hopeless illness, that wasn't brought to the attention of the mounties until it was too late to prevent a tragedy, an Eskimo in the Coronation gulf region committed suicide in a manner remarkable for the deliberation and determination shown, and for the attitude of the eyewitnesses. Reporting on this affair Sergeant E. G. Baker, in charge of the detachment at Cambridge bay, says:

"From inquiries made in this case I found that Mukhagaluk, a man of about 50 years of age, who was a cripple, having been paralyzed in spine and hips for some considerable time, and consequently unable to provide for himself and wife, had hanged himself in his snowhouse on a small island near the mouth of Kugarynak river, approximately 10 miles west of Ellice river.

"Konaikuk, his son-in-law, who had been supporting deceased and his wife, left the camp four days previously, and Mukhagaluk seemed to have the impression that he was being abandoned. This worried him to such an extent that he determined to take his own life. This he accomplished by hanging himself to a double strand of cotton backing twine made fast to a stick across the roof of the snowhouse. He had been threatening to kill himself each day since the departure of his son-in-law, had repeatedly asked his wife for a rifle to shoot himself with, and had made an attempt to choke himself with his fingers.

"On the fourth day, so insistent was he that he prevailed upon his wife, Kaiaryuk, to attach the string to the pole across the roof. He then with difficulty on account of his lameness, crawled along the snow bench and making a noose in the string, put it around his neck and hung his head therein until death occurred.

Wife Always Obeys.

"Remarkable as it may appear, this took place while other natives were present in the snow, all of whom remonstrated with him to desist, but none of them made any attempt actually to prevent him.

"In order to appreciate this attitude, it is necessary to consider the psychology of these people. It is natural among them not to interfere physically with the action of another so long as those actions effect no one other than the person himself. In regard to the action of the wife, Kaiaryuk, who tied the string to the roof pole, she would feel that she was doing so by compulsion, as the husband is always considered to be the head of the household, and his desires and orders are invariably carried out. In this case the man's persistent requests to his wife to tie the string to the pole was evidently looked upon as an order which she as his wife was in duty bound to comply with."

After an inquiry Sergeant Baker did not feel justified in charging the woman with the offense and was satisfied that the greatest amount of good could be accomplished by not doing so as she had the sympathy of all who knew of her unfortunate position.

Nemesis of Wolves.

Now it's time we had a laugh, and the making of it is found in the account of a heavy winter patrol which was made from the Bache peninsula to the west coast of Ellesmere island, across it to the east coast and then down to the southern end. This patrol was made by Constables N. McLean and W. C. Beatty, with the Eskimo hunter Nookapeeungwah, who loses no opportunity to avenge the death of Little Red Riding Hood and her grandmother even at the risk of exposure that might land him in jail here but is much more dangerous to his health in the far north.

Many wolves were encountered on this patrol especially after Bay fiord was reached. The party made camp there and Constable McLean reports:—

"During the night we were awakened by wolves howling outside the igloo, so Nookapeeungwah jumped up out of his sleeping bag and, only waiting to put on a pair of kumiks, went out. But, owing to the fact that he was just awakened, he could not get a very good sight and missed a shot at about 50 yards. But this man is such a keen wolf hunter that he immediately followed the pack, and after going about 500 yards he got another shot at one and bagged it.

"By this time he decided that it was rather cool to be out at 40 below with nothing on but a suit of underwear and a pair of kumiks, so he came back to the igloo, dressed, and left again. It was several hours before he came back, but he did not see any wolves."

Terrific Going.

Owing to a great scarcity of game due to the presence of so many wolves along the route covered by this patrol the problem of replenishing the expedition's supply of dog food became a serious one and when Bjorne peninsula was reached there was only enough meat left for a small snack for two teams. So Constable McLean let his comrades use it for their dogs and gave his own some bacon that he had for himself. This emergency ended the next day, however, when a herd of nine muskoxen were sighted and two were killed.

"While we were skinning them," Constable McLean tells us, "I happened to look up and there were four wolves about 200 yards off, but as soon as I moved to get one of the rifles, which were on the komatik, they beat it for the hills."

A good idea of the tremendous difficulties under which the mounties labor in making some of these patrols and their resourcefulness in reaching their goals regardless of the fierce antagonism of blizzards, bitter cold temperatures and other obstacles in their paths, is furnished by Constable A. M. McKellar, in his account of a patrol from Lake Harbour to Forbisher bay.

Owing to a movement in the ice the ordinary route could not be followed at the start and he had to go inland and follow the course of a river with several waterfalls from 6 to 30 feet high. He had to cut steps in the ice covering them and one day he found the going so hard that he was only able to make 10 miles from daylight to dark. Telling of his experiences that day he reports:

"December 6, broke camp early and proceeded some three miles on the river, and came to a waterfall some six feet high with a sharp turn to the left at the top where there was hardly room to turn the komitik; 20 yards ahead another waterfall 14 feet high; managed without unloading, and still another one six feet high.

"Some 100 yards further on we encountered two in succession, the first 20 feet and the second 30 feet high. Carried all loads over the first by cutting a stairway on the ice, and hauled all loads over the second by the aid of a rope. Made camp at 9 p. m. after a hard day's work. Distance 10 miles. There is no way of avoiding the falls, and once in this sort of gully there is only one way out, go right ahead, as the sides are practically perpendicular, rising to some 100 feet, and very narrow."

Try It on Your Own Telephone

Paul Donehoo, the blind coroner of Fulton county, has possibly the keenest hearing of anyone in the state. He can listen to the clicks of a dial telephone and tell what number is being called.

If anyone thinks this is an easy thing, close the eyes and try to ascertain a number when the dial whirls around. The clicks are closer together than brothers in a Kentucky feud.

This would certainly work a hardship on any young man in the coroner's office who wanted to call his girl when he should be working. It just couldn't be done. Suggestion to inventors: What about a clickless dial?

All Other Bids Were Very Much Higher

She was just an old lady, the type that may be seen in sentimental movies—all decked out in shawl and bonnet. It was toward the end of the postoffice auction of unclaimed articles. She had been sitting there all day, but had made no bid. She gazed almost steadfastly on the printed sheet where were listed the articles to be sold, and kept very quiet.

The auctioneer reached one of the final lots on the list—six dozen men's socks.

He asked for a bid. None was made. After a brief wait a man sitting next to the old lady called out, "I bid a dollar! Come on, folks—let's go."

Then the gray-haired old lady spoke up timidly. "I bid a dollar and a quarter."

The man turned a startled look at her and became silent. No one else spoke. "Sold to cash, $1.25," announced the auctioneer, and the sale went on. She had the money tightly clutched in her hand, and when she obtained her purchase she quietly left.

There's a story in this incident, but what is it? Grandsons, perhaps?

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

—By—
Edgar Wallace

"Let's stay here. Do you mind, Harry?"

INSTALLMENT I.

"DO YOU like me well enough to let me use your name?"

Garry Anson stared at the beautiful woman who put this tremendous question so casually.

"To use my name? I don't quite know what you mean, darling."

Wenda Panniford shrugged her shoulders impatiently. It was an odd little trick of hers. The beautiful gray eyes sought his for a moment, and then fell.

It was a fortnight before Ascot, and the garden of Daneham Lodge was at the height of its splendor.

They had been pacing the level, shaven lawn, talking of flowers, when the question of Willie Panniford arose. Willie was a source of worry to Garry Anson. He liked the big, blustering fool, drunk or sober; had speculated without profit for a very long time as to what Wenda could see in this husband of hers, and what charm Willie had had that had induced her to throw herself away upon an impecunious Scottish baronet.

He had taken a pride in his faith that he knew Wenda till then—she was almost a complete stranger to him at this moment.

"Honestly, I don't understand, Wenda. Do you mean, use my name—?"

"Willie is jealous of you. He is ready to believe almost anything about you. If I went to him this moment and told him"—again the jerk of her shoulder—"you know."

"You mean he would believe it? What a blackguard!"

"Don't be stupid, Garry!" Her voice was a little sharp. "Why shouldn't he? We've known each other since we were children; we've always been close friends. Willie isn't terribly mental. He believes things now without any particular reason; why shouldn't he believe—I nearly said 'the worst.'" She smiled faintly. "Would it be the worst?"

Garry Anson was still dazed. The tanned, good looking face was blank with amazement.

"You mean that I should let my name be used as co-respondent? My dear, I like you too much to allow your name to be dragged through the muck and mire of a divorce case."

She sighed, again impatiently.

"Never mind about my name, Garry—your altruism is sometimes offensive. Do you like me well enough to make that sacrifice—and all that is involved?"

He ran his hands over his crisp, brown hair.

"Of course I like you well enough. The idea is monstrous. Isn't there any way of patching up—"

"You're terribly anxious for me to go on with Willie."

There was a tremor in her voice; chagrin, pain, anger—he could not tell which; never dreamed, indeed, that he had done more than hurt her, and was panic-stricken at the thought. For Wenda Panniford was to him the one woman in the world.

"Of course, if you want it . . . I'll do anything. It would be beastly for you, but naturally I wouldn't hesitate a moment, and when it is over possibly you would care to marry me—"

He saw a look of astonishment come into her eyes, and blundered.

"You needn't, of course; that isn't obligatory—I mean, there's no reason why you should!"

"Of course I'd marry you. Why—" She checked herself. "You love me, don't you, Garry?"

He loved her very dearly, but realized at that moment with stunning force that he did not love her quite like that. They had been brother and sister all these years, close comrades ,sharing one another's secrets—at least she had shared his. Perhaps she realized the starkness of his embarrassment, for she went on quickly:

"Are you going to Hurst park today? Willie is going with us. I'll see you there—I expected you would be in Chester; it was a great relief to find you here."

"But listen, darling." He was recovering something of his balance. "Is Willie being too frightful? I know he drinks, and that he's an awful lout in some ways, but there's a lot of good in old Willie—"

"Don't let us discuss Willie," she said shortly. "We're leaving for Italy on Tuesday. When we come back I want a really serious talk with you."

And then she changed the subject, and talked about the old general who had died that week.

"Of course, that is why you didn't go to Chester. I had forgotten. Poor old man! Did he leave a lot of money, Garry?"

"Buckets full," smiled Garry Anson. "There's Molly!"

A girl was waving from the other side of the lawn.

"I'll see you at Hurst park."

In another moment she was out of sight. Garry continued his restless pacing of the lawn, his head still in a whirl. Wenda—of all people in the world! He knew things were not going too well in the Panniford household, but he had not dreamed that they were as bad as Wenda had revealed when she lifted the curtain and gave him a momentary glimpse of her mind.

As he walked slowly back to the house he caught a glimpse of Hillcott, smoking a surreptitious cigaret, on the far side of a heavily laden lilac bush; but by now he was so accustomed to Hillcott's acts of indiscipline that he never even thought of calling him to account. Indeed, Hillcott made no attempt to conceal the fact that he was taking a quiet loaf at a moment when he should have been engaged in pressing Garry's establishment; cherished a bitter loathing for all housemaids, and a profound contempt for society at large; for Hillcott had once been a burglar, had suffered a term of confinement in one of his majesty's prisons, and had come to harbor in Garry's service, as so many good men had come through the medium of a shell plastered trench in the war. He had been Garry's batman, was now almost the keeper of his conscience.

"Lady Panniford coming to breakfast?" asked Hillcott with that easy familiarity which Garry had long since ceased to chide.

"No, she isn't."

"Pity," said Hillcott. "We've got mushrooms—picked them meself."

"Which means I shall be dead before nightfall."

"You never know," was Hillcott's only retort.

Hillcott interpreted the news he had read in the morning papers, and kept up a running fire of comment on men, women and horses, and, requiring no encouragement, came unexpectedly to the subject of Sir William Panniford.

"Heard about his lordship?" he asked, setting a plate for fruit.

He invariably so referred to Sir William; whether in sarcasm or a misunderstanding of courtesy titles Garry was never sure.

"What about him?" he asked carelessly.

"Got soused down at the Boar inn last night with a lot of clodhoppers—the question is, can a gentleman get drunk on beer? I've been having an argument with a groom—"

Garry eyed him sternly.

"You'll oblige me by not discussing my friends, Hillcott," he said.

"If you don't like my style you'd better get another servant, Captain," said Hillcott stiffly. "I'm a human being and I'm entitled to me opinions."

"I doubt very much if you're human, but you're certainly not entitled to express your opinions to me about my friends," said Garry furiously, "and you can leave at the end of the month."

"That'll do me," said Hillcott.

He either gave notice or received notice regularly once a week, but little came of it. He was amiability itself when he brought out Garry's field glasses from the car, and, uninvited, placed himself by the side of the driver. Garry gave him up; he spent his life giving up Hillcott.

* * * * *

Peter Hipplewayne spotted Garry as he was crossing the course from the members' motor enclosure, and intercepted him.

"You runnin' your horse?" he asked.

Garry Anson had no great love for this lanky ex-subaltern, found it at times a little difficult to be civil to him.

"Yes; why?"

Peter fingered his weak mouth and smiled. He was terribly sure of himself, was self-consciously clever, and therefore was a little objectionable.

"Just asked you," he said laconically.

He stood for a while, gazing down the wide track.

"I thought of giving Ediphos a run," he said, "but I can't beat yours."

Garry gently released the detaining hand.

"I wonder if I can beat yours?" he asked. "On the book you have an outstanding chance, and I doubt if I shall win."

The other man looked down at him slyly.

"Then why not row in with me?" he asked. "With your horse out of the way mine is a certainty—you'll get three to one to your money, and it will be a case of putting it down and picking it up."

There was nothing sinister in a suggestion that an owner should not run his horse but should back another—if that was Peter's suggestion.

"All right—I'll not run him."

Mr. Hipplewayne closed his eyes wearily.

"Don't be silly—of course you'll run your old hair trunk. Otherwise I'll have to take rotten odds about my own."

Garry's eyes glittered. If Peter's skin had been a little thinner he would have sensed the gathering storm of wrath.

"What is the idea—that I should run mine and stop him?" he asked.

Peter nodded coolly.

"Why not? It is done every day of the week, old boy. Are you pretending you don't know that?"

Garry turned away.

"We won't discuss it," he said, and the other man caught his arm.

"What a righteous beast you are, Garry! All right! You can't get money at this game if you're too straight."

"There never was a turf crook who didn't die broke," said Garry quietly, and saw the young man frown.

"'Crook' is not a word I like," he snapped, and lagged behind.

An hour later Garry was absorbed in one of those minor problems which concern the racing man, and, momentarily, he was oblivious of the externals of life. He had watched Rataplan being saddled; now he stopped at the public entrance of the paddock to see the claret and white hoops go flying past on the way to the post.

It was not an important race; the value of the plate was less than three hundred pounds; but his commissioner had gone into the ring with instructions to put on a monkey at the best price—and five hundred pounds was a considerable bet for Garry. He assured himself uneasily that he could afford to lose five hundred—if anybody could afford to lose that amount. Yet was he not going beyond the limit and margin of safety?

Here was a line of thought, uncomfortable in itself, and yet a pleasing relief from the more pressing problem of Wenda. Phew! Every time he recalled that interview of the morning he felt a little chill—but a chill which made him hot under the collar.

Garry strolled under the veranda outside the weighing room, past the unsaddling inclosure, and was turning through the iron gates when Wenda called him, and he turned, with unaccustomed embarrassment, to meet her.

Lady Panniford was lovely, had always been lovely as long as Garry could remember her. About her there were two definite schools of opinion: those who thought she had the perfect face and those who swore by her more perfect figure. She was almost as tall as Garry, golden haired, blue eyed, flawless of skin. She had the trick of giving insignificance to even attractive women who had the misfortune to be near her. The girl who was with her at the moment was both conscious and careless of this inequality. She was doomed by relationship to appear with and to attend her sister-in-law.

"You came, then?"

Garry was conscious of the lameness and futility of the remark.

"I've come to back your horse, darling," Wenda smiled.

But there was a challenge in her smile. It said as plainly as words:

"There is one subject we will not discuss—today!"

"I've just seen Peter Hipplewayne; he told me to back Ediphos," she went on. "So dear of Peter to try to make me some money. But it is favorite, and I hate favorites."

"Then he should win," said Garry, "and if you've backed mine you are going to be disappointed. Hullo, Molly, darling!"

He became aware of Molly—as one became aware of almost every woman whose lot it was to appear in Wenda Panniford's company.

"Where's Willie?" he asked, and might have saved himself the trouble.

Willie Panniford was at the members' bar. He generally met somebody who wanted to go to the bar, a hunting man or a man of his old regiment, or somebody he had met in Cairo, or anybody else who wanted to go to the bar.

Wenda took his arm and led him down toward the rails. Molly followed obediently. She had a sense of humor and a growing consciousness of advancing age. Twenty-one is more certain of itself than eighteen. Wenda was finding it increasingly difficult to cope with Molly. Men were taking an interest in her. Some people thought she was clever. Almost everybody except Garry realized that she was passing from the stage of girlish prettiness to the maturer beauty of her years.

Wenda drew him out of the range of Molly's hearing.

"I told you we were going to Rome on Tuesday, Garry," she said, "but I forgot to ask you something this morning. Do you mind if I delay sending you a check for another week or two?"

Garry laughed and squeezed her arm.

"Wenda, darling," he said, with mock seriousness, "if I don't get my share of it now I will issue a writ. Of course I don't! I wanted you to keep the whole of the income from that little nest egg; you know that."

The blue eyes smiled gratefully at him.

"You are a brick," she said. "Two hundred and fifty pounds doesn't mean anything to you, but it means an awful lot to me just now."

She held twenty thousand pounds' worth of five per cent stock. Garry's one provident act, in a moment of financial panic, had been to make her an official trustee for this sum. His betting was a little too heavy; he knew the time would come when racing must play a less important part in his life ,and when his betting book would be locked away in a drawer. He had discussed his plan with Wenda, and she had agreed to hold the bonds against his need, and for her service receive half their revenue.

"Write to me, like an angel," she said; and then, as a thought occurred to her: "I wasn't terribly sympathetic about the general, was I?"

This was the second reference she had made to General Anson's death. He was puzzled to know why. She had known his uncle and had heartily disliked him.

"He really was a fine old soldier, and I admired him like anything. Here's your boy friend."

Henry Lascarne was coming across the lawn in search of her. He was making one of his rare visits to a race course, and had probably come under protest. Certainly nobody but Wenda would have induced this tall, correctly tailored young man to descend from his Olympian heights to the vulgarities of Hurst park.

"Are you seeing the racing down here, Wenda?"

She looked back at the crowded stands and made a little grimace. From their position on the sloping lawn they commanded a fairly good view of the course, could see the horses lining up at the gate, and were almost exactly opposite the winning post.

"Let's stay here. Do you mind, Harry?"

"I'll go on the stand," said Garry, and left them.

"Not exactly polite—" began Harry.

His nose had a queer way of wrinkling up when he was contemptuous—and he was mainly contemptuous.

"Garry's manners are deplorable," she said gaily. "We will wait here."

She was a little tense, more than a little excited, Molly noticed—Molly noticed everything.

"They say he's betting like smoke," said Lascarne.

"Who—Garry?"

Wenda put down her glasses and turned an amused face to him.

"Why shouldn't he? He's terribly rich."

"I wonder if he is."

It was the first doubt she had ever heard expressed concerning Garry's prosperity, and her eyes opened a little wider.

"Of course he is! He's probably enormously rich. Why don't you bet, Henry? It would be very human of you."

Henry Lascarne smiled.

"Racing is a fool's game, and only blind idiots engage in it," he said.

He had all the assurance of twenty-four.

"I've seen more fellows ruined on the turf than—than—"

"On the stock exchange."

It was Molly who spoke.

He did not like Molly, being well aware that his dislike was reciprocated; and he was all the more irritated because that reference to the stock exchange had struck home. There had been a big Wall Street slump, and Henry Lascarne's securities had depreciated in value by over a hundred thousand pounds. It was true that he could bear the loss, for old Lascarne had left his son the greater part of two millions, even after the death duties had been paid. But he hated losing money.

"If I may be allowed to say so—"

"Which you are," said Molly calmly.

"—it is absurd to compare legitimate investment—"

"They're off!"

Henry Lascarne was annoyed. Things were always happening on a race course which interrupted him in his more profound and imposing moments.

He took his glasses from their case and focused them reluctantly upon the field. The horses were moving swiftly along the back stretch, a compact bunch of varicolored jackets. He could not distinguish Garrys colors, and had only the dimmest idea of what they were, although he had had them described to him a dozen times.

"Which is Garry's horse? I can't see it."

Wenda's voice was impatient, trembled a little; the hands that held the glasses were trembling. Her failure to pick out any horse was understandable.

Molly was not using glasses. Her keen, gray eyes had found the claret hoops as soon as the field had settled down.

"He's on the rails, about third, I think," she said.

"And he'll finish first."

She turned quickly; Garry had come down from the stand and was behind her.

"Will he, Garry—will he?" asked Wenda eagerly.

Again her shaking hands went up and again she failed to control her race glasses.

"He's won it there," said Garry. "The only danger is Ediphos, but I don't think—"

He was suddenly silent, nor was his voice raised in the roar which greeted Rataplan as it cantered past the post two lengths ahead of its nearest opponent.

"How wonderful! How wonderful, Garry!" Wenda was shaking from head to foot, her eyes shining. "I had a hundred pounds on it. What was the price?"

Garry stared at her. Only a few minutes before she had excused herself paying him two hundred and fifty!

"A hundred pounds? But, darling, you're not betting in hundreds?"

She shook her head, a little impatiently.

"Don't be silly, Garry. Of course I hadn't a hundred to put on, but somebody did it for me. Isn't it wonderful!"

"Very!" Garry's voice was a little troubled, and she misjudged the reason.

"Don't be absurd, Garry. You backed this horse yourself; and when some nice man told me he'd put a hundred on for me—"

"I'm not worried about that; I shouldn't have won that race—I think there's going to be a devil of a lot of trouble about it."

"Trouble?" said Wenda quickly. "Do you mean there's a chance that your horse will be—"

"Disqualified? No. But Ediphos should have won. He wasn't trying. I didn't realize it till they were nearly home."

"Ediphos?" She frowned. "That was the horse Peter said would win. Of course it was trying! Peter wouldn't tell me—"

Garry nodded.

"Peter would sell his own aunt! He is rather a tricky young gentleman—who has tricked once too often. If the stewards didn't see what happened in the race they're blind—and these stewards are never blind."

He had seen Ediphos nicely placed as the field turned the bend into the straight; and then he had seen the horse drawn back and deliberately put himself behind the two leaders in such a position that he could not possibly be extricated at the crucial moment of the race.

The knowledgeable racing folk were discussing it openly as they streamed into the paddock. Garry heard one pillar of the turf say:

"I've never seen anything more disgraceful . . ."

At the entrance of the paddock he met the owner of Ediphos and, making an excuse to Wenda, he took him aside.

"There is going to be a row over this race."

"A row—what sort of a row? You won it, didn't you?" asked Peter truculently.

"You didn't win it—that's the trouble," said Garry grimly. "You'd better prepare yourself for an inquiry."

"O, rot!"

But the pink face had gone white.

"I gave the jockey orders to come away when he could . . ."

"I'm just telling you that it's absolutely certain the stewards will send for you."

"Nonsense!" said the other.

Later in the afternoon Garry met a press friend in the paddock and learned that the running of Ediphos had been the subject of inquiry, and that the matter had been referred to the stewards of the Jockey Club.

He did not see Wenda again until the last race had been run, and then he met her on the way to her car. Willie Panniford was leading the little party, a tall, fattish young man, not in the best of tempers.

"Beastly place, this," he complained loudly. "Why the devil I ever came racing I don't know. What a brute you are, Garry—to have a winner and tell nobody!"

"I told Wenda—" began Garry, when a warning glance stopped him.

"You told her what? She said you never mentioned the horse."

"Darling, your understanding is rather dull this afternoon," she said sweetly. "I told you that Garry thought his horse might win. He wasn't very definite about it—were you, Garry?"

Garry was never definite about his horses winning. He had lost all his earlier enthusiasm for communicating his good things to the world, as the result of bitter experience. When an owner confides to a friend that his horse will win, and it doesn't, he is apt to be reminded that the man to whom he imparted the information would have backed the real winner if he hadn't been "put off."

Willie was in his noisiest mood.

"Nice business, racing, I must say! Did you hear about that fellow Hipplewayne? Stopped his horse—deliberately stopped him, old boy! A disgraceful thing to happen—Hipplewayne is a cad! By Jove, they ought to warn the beggar off right away!"

"Willie, darling"—it was Wenda's urgent voice—"you're talking very loudly—and very stupidly."

He glared round at her. Willie had found the bar very companionable that afternoon.

"If I'm not allowed to express my views—"

"Not in public!" she smiled.

Willie went, grumbling, to his car, cursed the chauffeur for keeping him waiting, swore at the policeman who held him up to let the other traffic pass, and Garry imagined he could still hear his voice when the car was out of sight.

He found his little Rolls, and the voluble Hillcott discussing something vital with the chauffeur.

"Well, Hillcott, had a good day?" he asked, handing his glasses and raincoat to the man.

"Not so bad," said Hillcott. His tone was friendly, his manner more so. "I backed yours and had a saver on Ediphos—what a ramp!"

"It was very stupid," said Garry.

"I saw old Panniford—"

"When you talk of Sir William Panniford I wish you'd give him his title, Hillcott."

"How did he get it?" asked that irrepressible little man.

Garry did not argue with him. Hillcott climbed in by the side of the chauffeur, and the bonnet of the car headed for Ascot and Daneham lodge.

Great Rackets—New and Old

Bootlegging, Which Makes Thugs Into Millionaires, Today Dwarfs Other Criminal Professions. But Little Can Be Done About It Until We Bring Our Laws Into Accord With Public Opinion, Says This Former Police Chief

By Arthur Woods

Former Police Commissioner of New York City

He Was Indignant, He Stood Upon His Rights as a Free Born American Citizen

Drawn by Harry Fisk

THERE are old rackets and new rackets. But the methods are the same and involve necessarily what is tantamount to a partnership, a friendly understanding among police, politicians and crooks. In the older days these partnerships dealt in crime. Nowadays there is not much of this, the partnerships fattening off the proceeds of violations of our sumptuary laws—prohibition mainly, but also gambling and prostitution. The partnership with crime died because public opinion would not tolerate it. The partnership with all sorts of vice succeeds because public opinion does tolerate it.

Nearly a quarter of a century ago I became officially acquainted with a racket for the first time. I had just been made deputy police commissioner of New York city, and was comparatively green. We had been receiving a lot of "squeals"—as the police term complaints—from passengers riding on the Twenty-third street crosstown cars. All made the same squeal. Their pockets had been picked during the rush hours.

When these squeals came to the attention of my chief, General Bingham—a great commissioner—he sent for me.

"This is singular," he said. "We are having more squeals from people on this line than from all the others in the city put together. What do you think is wrong?"

The records showed that two particular policemen in plain clothes had for years been assigned to this line. "Let's take off the detectives now on this line and put on two new men," I suggested.

This was done. The picking of pockets on the Twenty-third street crosstown cars instantly ceased.

Did the detectives pick the pockets of the squealers? No. Who, then? The pickpockets who were paying for the privilege of working the line. And they had to quit once the detectives, with whom they had made the deal, were no longer on the line.

In those days the cream of the pickpockets were men from the west. But they were eventually driven out by our own East Side boys, who developed a technique so superior that they could pick the pockets of the western dips. A dip, it should be noted parenthetically, is a pickpocket.

General Bingham ordered that the lid be clamped down. The word went the rounds of the underworld that New York city was no longer a paradise for pickpockets and other crooks, even though the city was being administered by a mayor and other officials elected on a Tammany ticket.

In the days of Commissioner Bingham the detectives were particularly vigilant with reference to thieves whom they knew and who might be coming to New York for no good purpose. One day there was brought to headquarters by one of the old and experienced detectives, who probably knew more thieves by acquaintance and by sight than any other man in the country, a well known international thief, whom we shall call by his first name, Eddie.

Eddie was always one of the best dressed of men. It is true that he was somewhat overdressed, but the overdress was of super quality. On the occasion of this arrest—or, instead of arrest, shall we call it this invitation to visit police headquarters, for he was charged with no crime—Eddie was brought to my office.

He was clearly and volubly indignant. He stood upon his rights as a free-born American citizen to be unbothered by police interference.

Prolonged conversation with Eddie brought the confession from him that he had been in the hands of the law before but he had given up all that and didn't want to be bothered. He would agree absolutely that he would commit no crime in New York if he were allowed to stay here without being picked up on suspicion from time to time according to the time-honored police custom. He would give his word for this, the word of a gentleman which had never been broken.

This was agreed to. Eddie was, so to speak, placed on parole to do no thieving in New York and was to be allowed to go and come as he wished.

Reassured by this treatment, he expatiated somewhat on his methods. There happened to be a copy of the New York Sun lying on the desk, and Eddie remarked that he supposed few people knew that that was the best newspaper for a thief to read, because the top edge of the paper was rougher than that of other papers and could be used conveniently to slip under a gentleman's scarfpin and raise it out of his tie.

He was required to report every week, and at these weekly meetings would discuss further his sporting achievements. But I always had a feeling that Eddie was not playing fair, he was not quite able to conceive that these evil days were going to last. He was simply biding his time until the new unworkable system should break down, and he could again return to his profession under a protecting partnership agreement with the police.

No systematic form of pillage can thrive without police protection. And no form of systematized professional lawbreaking, save one, can last twenty-four hours after an honest police commissioner, not fearful of the higher-ups, assured of long tenure of office and known to be so assured, passes out the word that the lid is on and must be clamped down.

The lower East Side used to be known as one of the principal homes of the gangster, and the gangster had various ways of earning an honest living. One of the chief methods was levying tribute in addition to blackmailing shopkeepers, committing assaults upon or murdering citizens for hire—sometimes during labor troubles, sometimes on election day—or holding up citizens on the street. They frequently received tribute from shopkeepers and keepers of disorderly houses, each gang having its own domain and guaranteeing protection from other gangs within that sphere of influence. In all these forms of crime many of the gangs were highly trained and highly paid specialists. Strikers would approach gang leaders and hire them to assault men who continued to work in spite of warnings from the strikers to desist. Employers hired men of like character, attached to so-called "detective agencies," who used strong-arm methods against the strikers. In various strikes almost every conceivable crime has been committed by guerrillas hired by one side or the other, including robbery, extortion, assault, arson, riot and murder.

One famous gang leader, who, by the way, is now "going straight," approached a tradesman, demanding that he be employed to beat up certain employes who were on strike and were forcibly preventing others from taking their places. When the tradesman refused to deal with him he proceeded independently and had several strikers assaulted by his thugs. He then demanded $500 for services rendered. The tradesman could not pay. He was given two weeks to come to his senses, and the gang leader made the meaning of a continued refusal clear to him by putting his revolver to the tradesman's stomach and explaining in his own way what would happen. He was in a panic and paid $150, but could not raise any more, and appealed to a friend, who immediately brought him to see me.

That afternoon at 5 o'clock a $50 installment was due, and a trap was laid. By the use of marked money and clever detective methods the detective in charge arrested the gang leader in the act of blackmail after obtaining such evidence as led to the conviction of the leader.

That is what is known as a racket. But it was a racket that failed, because a racket cannot be successfully carried out when the police do not connive.

In the old days, before the advent of the Great Racket, the unholy alliances between the police and the underworld, through which the denizens of this realm of darkness were permitted to ply their professions for a price, might be grouped under four heads:

1. The vice racket, where poor unfortunate women were the victims and where the profits went to the police and higher-ups.

2. The gambling racket, under the terms

What Has Happened to Justice?

A Rural Tragedy Takes Three Lives and Leaves An Eerie, Mystic Riddle

BY PETER LEVINS.

DESPITE all the prominence accorded our metropolitan homicides, let us not forget that the big cities by no means have any monopoly on murder melodramas. Such extravaganzas as the Lingle assassination, the Vivian Gordon thriller, and the lurid tragedy of Two-Gun Crowley are typical of the modern, racket-ridden metropolis, but when it comes to horror and mystery the rural sections have contributed cases that are classics.

Some of these country murders seem to follow more closely than the usual city killing the pattern of fiction mysteries. The setting, the cast of characters, and the plot unite to give the narrative power; there is a stark simplicity about the whole thing that even the most celebrated big city tragedy does not attain. There is something about an isolated farm, for instance, or a hut in the woods, that brings to the story the eeriness of true melodrama. One might cite many examples.

Eight years ago a rural section of Kansas contributed one of these strange riddles. The scene was a farm seven miles from Meriden, a town of but a few hundred inhabitants, where lived Thomas Hurley, a retired farmer of 80; his daughter, Genevieve, 35, and his son, Ernest, 30.

The daughter was a college graduate. She had taught for several years in various cities and had returned to keep house for her aged father and her brother. She and Ernest were planning to marry shortly, she within a few days and he some time later. The father had promised to turn the farm over to Ernest on his marriage.

Genevieve's fiance was Alonzo Myers, a well-to-do farmer living about ten miles from the Hurley place. Myers was no dashing Romeo, by any means, but Genevieve Hurley had reached the period of spinsterhood when one cannot be over-particular.

IF WE BUT KNEW THE WHOLE STORY.

We would like to know how she felt about Myers. We would like to know much more than we do of Miss Hurley's story, particularly how she felt about living and toiling on this isolated farm, and how she felt about her father's plan to give the place to Ernest. So much that is mystery might be cleared up if we but knew the complete story of this woman's life and character.

The tragedy occurred at 6 p. m., May 16, 1923. It was a cold, stormy night, with sleet falling part of the time. Darkness had settled over the countryside.

An explosion occurred. Edward Reed, a farmer, crossing a field about a quarter of a mile away, heard the noise and saw the Hurley home almost immediately enveloped in flames. He rushed toward the place but due to the muddy ground could not travel rapidly. It required about five minutes for him to reach the homestead, which was now burning fiercely.

Reed perceived that all the windows had been blown out by the force of the explosion. He was unable to approach close to the house because of the great heat.

Other men arrived until there were about 50 milling around. They stood helpless as the house quickly burned to the ground. Within 40 minutes of the explosion the dwelling was a mass of fiery timbers.

No trace could be found of the Hurleys. They had all, apparently, died in the flames.

Farmer Reed recalled that he had seen Ernest Hurley driving the cows in from pasture about 5 o'clock, whistling gayly as he walked along in the mud behind his cattle. No one else had seen any of the family after that time. The nearest neighbor was half a mile away. Darkness had fallen at about 5 o'clock and, as we have indicated, there were no moon or stars out.

As the flames from the burning building reached the ground a most extraordinary thing happened——

The spectators saw the flames begin to travel away from the house, licking their way in a narrow trail. Farther and farther the blue fire crept along. When it reached a point about 75 feet from the house the blaze suddenly leaped higher.

Some one shouted a warning. They all fell back.

Then a gasoline barrel exploded, showering fragments in every direction.

The assembled farmers leaped at once to the explanation of this queer manifestation—some one must have carried bucket after bucket of gasoline from the barrel to the house. Much of the gasoline had been spilled. The flames had naturally followed the track out to the barrel.

The men looked at each other in amazement. What horror was this? They resolved that as soon as possible they would examine the ruins. Something fiendish had happened here. That blue finger of flame had pointed the way.

BODIES UNDER SPIRALS OF SMOKE.

But the ruins were too hot to be examined for some time. The men waited. They saw, among the embers, three tiny spirals of smoke eddying up from three different parts of the ruins.

They decided that under each of these wavering spirals of smoke they would find a body.

By midnight they were able to do something. The sheriff, coroner, and village undertaker had arrived in the meantime. Under the sheriff's direction, the men fitted improvised hooks to long boards and with these they probed the three suspicious spots in the smoking embers. In a little while they got results.

Three portions of burned flesh were recovered at exactly the places the men had expected.

The body of Thomas Hurley was identifiable. It had been near the north wall and had been partially protected by the wind from the north.

He had been shot through the head with a shotgun.

According to the coroner, Hurley had been slain before the fire.

But as for Genevieve and Ernest, their bodies had been burned beyond recognition. All that appeared to be left were the torsos, and they had been so completely consumed the undertaker admitted he could not determine for sure that they were even parts of bodies. What appeared to be the body of Genevieve might, in fact, have been the stomach of a calf.

Had they, too, been killed before the fire and their clothing soaked with gasoline?

Presently dawn broke over that desolate scene. And the investigation got under way.

First, the cause of the explosion. The officers concluded that after the house was saturated with gasoline and the match applied the whole thing must have exploded at once, due to the fumes inside. Some thought that the gasoline light plant in the basement had exploded.

Second, the perpetrator. It was determined, in this connection, that one member of the family had slain the other two, soaked the house with gasoline, and died in the too-sudden fire.

The officials eliminated the father. After all, the man's brain had been blown out by a charge of buckshot.

They eliminated the son. The officers decided that Ernest could not have had time to do the deed after he was seen driving the cows tunefully to the barn. Besides, they felt they knew Ernest Hurley too well to believe that he could have committed the crime. Particularly if he was in whistling mood.

So they narrowed it down to Genevieve.

The people of the region didn't know her as well as they knew the brother. She had not been one to mix much with them. Her education and experience in the cities had alienated her somewhat. But they did know that she had a fiery temper and that she had not been the slightest bit pleased at the prospect of Ernest getting the farm.

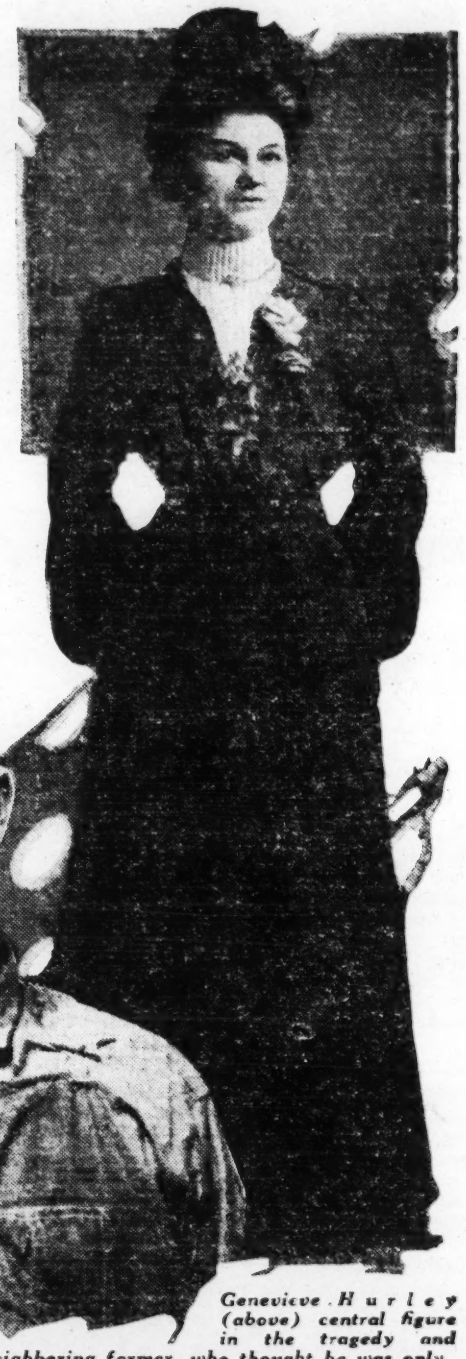

They decided that Genevieve shot her father in the afternoon, soaked the house with gasoline, waited until Ernest came from the barn to the house at about 6 o'clock, shot him, and then completed her dreadful work of destruction.

As to whether she planned to escape or to die with them in the flames—that could not be decided. Apparently she had died there, even though it was impossible to identify her body.

Officers said they found caked blood underneath the spot where Ernest's head might have lain. This circumstance, they pointed out, lent strength to the theory that he, too, had been shot.

Lizzie Borden, whose case was similar in certain aspects to Genevieve Hurley's

Genevieve Hurley (above) central figure in the tragedy and (left) Alonzo Myers, neighboring farmer, who thought he was only man in her life—until after the disaster. Then quite a few "fiances" came into view.

Had he and Miss Hurley quarreled lately about anything? Well, she had asked him for a $1,000 diamond ring and had become angry when he did not buy one for her. He said she showed him a bag containing eight or ten diamond rings which various suitors had given her.

Two days after the tragedy a small package arrived at the Meriden postoffice, addressed to Genevieve Hurley. It came from Des Moines, Iowa, and contained a diamond ring! The name of the sender was not on the package.

Presently, however, a man named Samuel Young appeared in Meriden and said he was the sender. He said he and Miss Hurley had been engaged; that they had met while she was teaching school in Iowa. He had been to see her in Meriden about ten days before the tragedy. They had discussed wedding plans and she had asked him to keep the engagement secret from her father and brother. He had done so.

Now another strange thing happened on the Hurley farm—

Within a few days of the fire all the chickens died of poisoning. The investigators decided that an attempt had been made to kill members of the family with poisoned food and that when this proved too slow the murderer resorted to gun and flame.

Myers said that on his last visit to the farmhouse he had seen a shotgun, loaded, standing behind the kitchen door. Officers found the barrel of a shotgun in what had been the bedroom, and in which was found the body, or portion of the body, of Genevieve Hurley. What was believed to have been Ernest's body had been found in the ruins of the kitchen.

ANOTHER RING FROM KANSAS CITY.

Next, the authorities learned that Miss Hurley had received an engagement ring from a man in Kansas City.

Relatives of the Hurley family held to the belief that all three had perished in the fire. Neighbors, gossiping in town, played with the thought that the daughter had killed the two men, faked a third body, and escaped, possibly with one of her several sweethearts. They pointed out that it was much too dark on the night of the 16th to have seen any one leave the house and the region.

No trace of diamond rings was found in the ruins. According to the authorities, every bit of debris was searched carefully. They decided that some one must have removed the rings from the house.

The inquest was held and the coroner's jury decided that Genevieve Hurley in a fit of anger slew her father and brother, saturated the house with gasoline, and herself died in the flames. A post-mortem examination of the bodies was made to determine if any one or more of the Hurleys had been poisoned but the state of the bodies was such that no information could be obtained.

Five days after the funeral, in which all three bodies were buried in one grave in Meriden cemetery, a farmer living one mile from the Hurley home came to town and informed the sheriff that he had heard an automobile chugging along the road toward the Hurley place between 2 and 3 o'clock one morning two or three days before the fire. He said he particularly remembered the incident because the roads at the time were almost impassable.

The authorities decided that the car must have gone to the Hurley farm. The road in question was a side road, serving only a few houses. Other residents on the road said the machine had not come to their homes.

Had this visitor been the woman's accomplice?

Young was questioned again. He said he and Miss Hurley had agreed on all their plans for the wedding. He said she had seemed in good spirits. She had explained his visit to her father and brother, by saying that Mr. Young had come in an effort to induce her to return to Des Moines as a teacher.

It was impossible to determine how many

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

The Story of a Girl Who Burst Out of a Chrysalis of Timidity, Fear and Inhibitions and Tried Her Wings For the First Time.

"She isn't my mother!" He looked at her then more closely, but she could see that he did not know her from Adam—or should we say from Eve?

EUNICE had always supposed that she would fall in love some time, but she had rather vague ideas about how it would change her life. Aunt Geraldine had kept her so close until a year ago. Then she had died suddenly, leaving a will which gave Eunice all her money outright. At twenty-one! Aunt Geraldine must have expected to live a long time. They say that old maids do, there in Philadelphia.

Eunice had spent a whole year now in being afraid she would do the wrong thing. Lose some of the money. Take the wrong person's advice. Afraid of this, afraid of that. Trying so hard to do what was expected of her. But this summer afternoon she sat alone in Aunt Sue Wimberley's library in Marmon and never once thought of the bank or investments or anything. Only of him. Goofy about a young man without knowing what goofy meant, for she had not been sent to college, where one gets a vocabulary.

Her Cousin Stella was playing tennis somewhere, her Aunt Sue had gone to a bridge party, and Eunice was free to relive those hours of the dance at the country club last night. It had been literally "at first sight" when Stella had introduced Dr. Fred Clynes to her. Nobody knows why one tall, blond young man and no other should suddenly wake all the sleeping wonder in a girl, but the miracle happens. Eunice was scared when she realized what was the matter with her, so scared—they were dancing together then—that she lost step for a moment.

He smiled down at her. "Slipper too tight?"

"No." She smiled tremulously up into kind and laughing blue eyes.

Stella had mentioned in introducing him that he had some connection, she couldn't remember now just what, with the Marmon hospital. He had danced only once with Eunice, but she had not seen him dancing twice with any other girl, and he had disappeared rather early.

That was all. The rest had been only dreams and youth and heart flutterings as she had caught sight of him here and there in the clubhouse last night, and thought of him afterward all the time. His eyes. The way his honey-colored hair grew round his temples. And his voice. He had a very distinctive voice, mellow and low, which did something queer to her heart.

Sitting there in the library now she recognized that voice when her Cousin Stella and a man came up the veranda steps together and sat down in the two wicker chairs just outside the open library window. She did not think about listening to what they said. It was the nearness of him that thrilled her, the neighborly dropping in, with its promise of future meetings.

"Speaking of queer types, Dr. Fred," Stella burst out in the blunt way she had, "what would you say of a girl twenty-two years old who won't walk out two steps alone after dark for fear of meeting a drunken man, who looks in the closet for burglars before she goes to bed, who's afraid to spend any money—she's got plenty of it—a girl who nearly fainted away at the sight of a few drops of blood when I cut my finger; a girl who can't drive a car and is scared inside one."

Eunice was hardly breathing. Everything Stella was saying applied to herself, and Stella had cut her finger, and she had scoffed at her only last night about nervousness in a car. She heard the man laugh outside the window. "'Fraid cats," he said, "don't interest me. I have no use whatever for that sort of girl."

You can imagine how Eunice felt. Stepped on. Done for.

The next thing she heard was the scraping noise of a chair pushed back on the veranda.

"I'd forgotten," the doctor was saying. "I have to be on duty for outcalls today at 6 o'clock. I've just time to get to the hospital. Thanks for the tennis game. Good-by, Stella."

"Good-by, Dr. Fred."

The veranda steps creaked as he lightly ran down them. Then Stella came through the open door into the library with her great free stride. "Why, Eunice Lewton!" she screamed. "You said you were going down to the village."

"I changed my mind." Her voice sounded strange to herself.

Stella came and stood over her, a dark, tousled-haired giantess in a crumpled white linen sports dress. Formidable. Fearless.

"You heard what I said to the doctor!"

"I—I couldn't very well help it."

With an explosive breath, Stella turned and threw herself down in a chair.

"Well! I've put my foot in it this time! I'm a beast, Eunice. What are you going to do to me?"

"W-why—nothing, of course. You didn't know I was sitting here."

"Heavens, no!" She pulled out a red-bordered handkerchief and mopped her forehead. "But he doesn't know who I meant. Dr. Fred doesn't. There is a limit, you know, to my beastliness. But you are, Eunice, the most amazing——"

"Are you so tired of me, Stella? Do you want me to go back to Philadelphia?"

"No, no, no, no! What? After a week? With Aunt Geraldine's house sold—I mean your house—and . . . But mother would never hear of such a thing as your leaving us now. Nor father. Why, the very idea! I guess you'll have to forgive me."

The big girl was still half defiant.

"Am I," said Eunice faintly, "so utterly impossible?"

"Impossible?" Stella echoed. "Certainly not. Why, you know I like you."

"I thought you did." She was still for a moment, her heart beating so fast it was choking her.

"Stella. You know it's—it's such a—surprise. I didn't know that I was all wrong. What's the matter with me?" Her hands were trembling, but she managed to keep the tears back.

Stella sucked at her under lip, in the odd way she had when much puzzled. "H-m-m." Then she drew a long breath and burst out again. "Aunt Geraldine is the matter. The way she brought you up. As a companion for herself, I mean, and letting you see so few young people."

"But I was dependent."

"Yes, I know. Tied hand and foot to that little old maid, afraid of her own shadow."

"I think," Eunice said, "that I shall probably be an old maid myself." (She could only have thought so during the last few minutes.)

"You? Nonsense. A pretty creature like you? Why, you're perfectly lovely, Eunice! But you don't know your onions. You're all tied up inside. You haven't a bit of pep. Why don't you let yourself go? Limber up? Blow the lid off? You do belong to the young generation. You're one of us, but you don't even know it. You've simply got left at the post. Why, you've been here a week, and not a single young man in Marmon has shown the least interest in you. It's perfectly amazing. Look here, now. I'm telling you this for your own good."

"Yes. Yes, Stella. Yes, I know."

Stella said, "I don't believe you ever kissed a man in your life. Come, now."

"W-why, no."

Stella laughed. Took hold of her arms. Shook her gently.

"Break it up, Eunice. Go out and do the most grotesque thing you can think of. Pick up a strange man—anything. Bring him home if you want to, for dinner. I'll stand by you."

She gave her a rough kiss on the top of her head, then a gentle push toward the door. Why, she really meant it!

Eunice left her and went out into the hall. She stood there a moment, looking into vacancy. Then slowly she went to the hat rack, took down the little white chip which she wore with the yellow linen dress she had on and held it in her hand.

Slowly she put on the hat, only half conscious of what she was doing, pulled it over her chestnut hair. She picked up her white gloves and drew them on slowly. She was only going down to the village, as she had told Stella an hour ago—before she had changed her mind. She had several unimportant errands to do.

Her bag was there on the table and she took it up, then turned and walked out of the house and along the country road. But she did not go to the village. After a few rods she turned into a side road to the left, where she had seen a large, flat rock in the sunshine which invited her to sit down and think. She was feeling a little dazed.

Looks in the closet for burglars. She and Aunt Geraldine had done that every night of their lives. Afraid to spend money. Yes—yes, maybe she was. And the sight of blood—no, she didn't like to see hurt places, they made her all queer.

Never kissed a man in your life. But unless a girl cared. . . .

Though Aunt Geraldine and other timid ladies had given her most of her education, she had read wild stories about girls of her own age and much younger.

Stella had fascinated her from the first day of this visit. Since childhood the two girls had only met at long intervals.

A big car came flying around the corner now and passed her in a cloud of dust. The thought of driving such a machine made her tremble and cling to the rock. Yet Stella did it. After dark, too, and at an appalling speed. And so did most girls of that young generation Eunice belonged to.

"I've got to make myself over. I've got to make myself over." She repeated it like a ritual.

She refused even to think now of Dr. Fred Clynes, who had no use whatever for the sort of girl she was. That hurt was deep. Of course, he had danced with her out of politeness.

A lump came in her throat, but she paid no attention to it. Invited to stay here all summer at the Wimberleys' country place—no, she couldn't get away very well. In the autumn she could take an apartment somewhere, get back the old housekeeper who had gone to stay with relations after the house was sold.

She got up from the warm rock and walked slowly along that side road. Break it up, Eunice. Go out and do the most grotesque thing you can think of. Pick up a strange man. . . .

There was a strange man leaning on the fence beside the road a little farther on. What was he doing, with his head down on his arms like that? Queer. As she drew nearer she could see that he was not very well dressed. Some young workman, probably. She was now within ten feet of him. Why, the man was crying! His shoulders were shaking with sobs and he was making low sounds like a big child in pain.

Eunice was not afraid of workmen. She had directed so many of them about the old place in Philadelphia. To speak to a workman in trouble—why, Aunt Geraldine herself would have done that. She walked over to the fence where the young man was leaning.

"Is something the matter? Can I do anything?"

He had simply turned his face sideways along his arm and was looking at her with wet gray eyes. Why he was only a boy—not more than 16 or 17.

"Is something the matter?" Eunice repeated.

He nodded his head, gulped, wiped the tears from his eyes with his coat sleeve.

"Uh-huh. It's ma." He was bareheaded and very gawky.

"Your mother?"

"Uh-huh. She's just fell downstairs and broke her leg."

Eunice gasped. "Where is she? Is any one with her?"

He pointed to a small unpainted, old tumbledown house a little way off. "Home. Over there. Yes, Millie's with her."

"Millie?"

"My sister."

"How old is she?"

"Nine, I guess."

"And there's nobobdy else?"

He shook his head. "S'pose I must be getting back." He turned away with a sigh.

"I'll come with you," she said, as a matter of course, and she walked along beside him. Let yourself go. To visit the sick and afflicted—one could make a beginning by doing good, couldn't one?

The boy did not look at her as they went

Timidity in Contract Bidding Is Not Conservatism, but Waste of Opportunity

By Shepard Barclay

Author of "The Contract Bridge Guide."

SOME contract players seem to have deathly fear of being defeated in a contract, and therefore are consistent under-bidders. They consider that this is conservatism.

Commander Winfield Liggett Jr., one of the greatest players of this game, as he was of auction, related an incident recently in which a player had boasted that, after keeping track of every hand he had played for some time, found that he made 80 per cent of the contracts he bid.

"Then you have not been bidding enough," declared the commander.

Just what did he mean by this?

Perhaps the answer will be clearer in the form of an illustration. Suppose there deals of approximately equal strength in the partnership hands should come up at different times during an evening. On two of these it is possible to make three-odd in spades, and on the third four-odd can be made. Is it better to bid three spades on all of them or four spades?

If only three-odd are bid, the player would get 90 each on the two hands with which three-odd are made, and 120 on the one which produced four-odd giving him a total of 300 points. Game is known to be worth, on an average, 500 points, so if the player bid four-odd every time his side would score 500 plus 120 for tricks on the game hand and would be penalized only 100 points each for this two defeats, even if his side were vulnerable. Thus his plus of 620 minus his loss of 200 would give him a net of 420 points for the three hands. He would be 120 points better off for bidding game when he had only one chance out of three to make it.

Kenneth R. Pyatt writes in to say: "Better far to be ultra-conservative in bidding than otherwise." With this no expert will agree. But when he adds, "The best bridge player I ever knew never bid unless he had the cards," he will find plenty concurring with the idea. Trying to bid them to their full justified value is important to successful contract, but bidding without the cards is also expensive—in fact, generally more expensive than the contrary. For the average player, it is well to endeavor to value the cards accurately and usually try to bid them accurately.

A Law a Week.

What is the revoke penalty in progressive contract and tournament duplicate contract?

In progressive contract it is exactly the same as in rubber contract—two tricks for the first revoke by any player, scored exactly as if made in play; 100 points in the honor score for each subsequent revoke by the same player; 100 points for any trick which the revoker's side is unable to pay because of not having taken enough.

In tournament duplicate contests between teams in which each hand is scored as either a win, loss or tie, the revoking side loses the hand. In a pair contest scored on the board-a-match basis, the North-South and East-West pairs getting a match point for each team excelled, the hand is first scored exactly as played and then the number of match points recorded is reduced by subtracting from it a number equal to 25 per cent of the match points possible if top had been scored on the hand.

If it is the usual tournament duplicate contest, with half the pairs playing North-South all evening and the others East-West, total net cumulative contract points to decide, the non-revoking side is entitled to all the tricks it normally would have taken if there had been no revoke, and in addition 100 points for each revoke; if it gained any extra tricks because of the revoke, it is also entitled to them; if the players at the table are unable to agree as to the normal outcome of the play, those in charge of the competition shall decide the question.

The penalties given are those provided by the official laws of the American Bridge League.

In duplicate contests, is a re-deal allowed at the first table if all four players pass the hand, or must that deal stand, to be played then at the other tables?

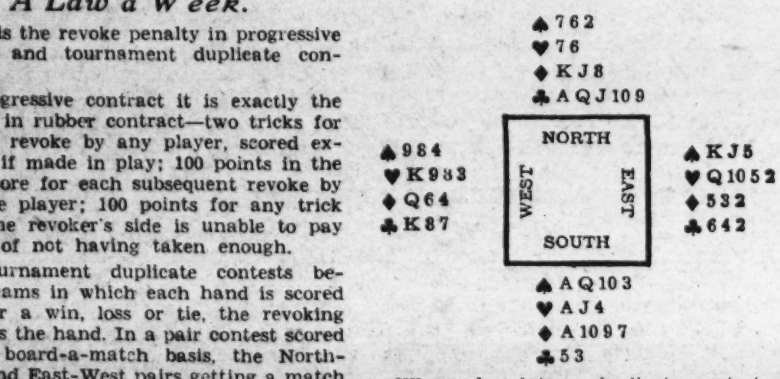

Contract Systems.

How would you bid and play the following hand, South being the dealer, with neither side vulnerable?

The Monarch

We all have thought of lions
As beasts that the jungle rule,
And kids regard their teachers
As despots within the school;
The moon may reign at night time
And so may the sun at day,
But bridgers know a sultan
Who governs with firmer sway;
Though each may seem a monarch,
The sheen of their glamour slumps,
They're all a bunch of pikers
Compared to the ace of trumps

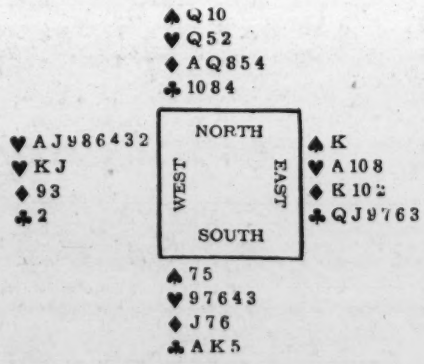

When played in a duplicate contest recently, this hand was opened with one spade at every table end, after West's pass, North bid two clubs. At most of the tables, South now called three no trump, which closed the contracting. At one, though, Charles Simon, a brilliant young player, bid three diamonds, a forcing takeout. This bid involved the principle that a suit which was not quite good enough to bid originally is worth showing after your partner has made a voluntary bid of some sort, particularly when the hand is strong enough generally to justify a forcing takeout.

In this case, North considered himself strong enough to respond with a raise to five diamonds, whereupon Simon made a somewhat daring raise to six. West doubled it, and led a spade, expecting to wait for declarer's leads up to his guarded cards in the other suits. Simon read the lead perfectly and counted on East to hold the missing high spades and West to have the outstanding high diamonds and clubs. So he finessed these suits by leads from his own hand and played the double finesse in spades to catch East's honors, so that he took every trick.

The combination of the double followed by the spade lead made the hand a certain slam for the clever card reader, whereas otherwise it was headed for sure defeat, if finesses were taken the wrong way.

How would you bid and play the following hand, neither side being vulnerable and South the dealer?

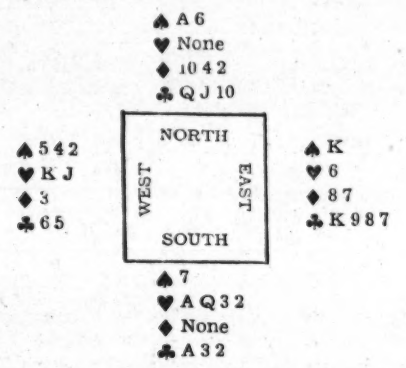

Considerable Total

J. D. E. wonders what is the score for making a diamond grand slam, vulnerable, doubled, holding 100 honors. Slam premium is 1,500, rubber bonus 500, premium for making the contract 100, seven tricks at 40 each add 280, and the 100 honors bring the grand total up to 2,480.

Problems of Play

With spades trumps, South having the lead, how can North and South take seven of the eight tricks in this hand against any defense?

South must lead the ace of hearts and discard a club. On another heart, covered by the king, North must trump with the ace of spades. East's discard is immaterial, but normally would be a diamond. To the third trick, North leads the diamond ten, East and West following; South must discard a heart. North leads the queen of clubs. On this East has two choices, and the mode of play the rest of the way is governed by what he does.

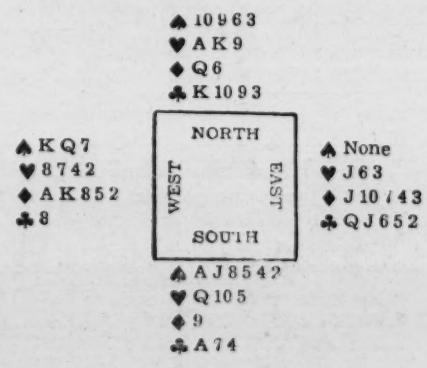

If East plays the seven of clubs, South plays the deuce and West the five. North now leads his last club, South playing the ace whether East covers or not, West following suit. South offers the last club of his hand, which West must trump because he has only trumps, and North over-ruffs with the six. Now a diamond is led from North. If East, with only the kings of spades and clubs, should ruff, South discards his heart queen; if East discards his club king, South ruffs, so that his only trick lost is to the spade king.

If East plays the king of clubs on the fourth trick, South covers with the ace and leads back a club to North. The latter now leads a diamond. If East ruffs with his spade king, declarer cross-ruffs the last two tricks. If instead he discards a club, South wins the trick with his spade seven and returns the last club, ruffed with the six, on which East must follow suit. Poor West, with three trumps for the last three tricks, loses all of them. This, according to Frederick Ley, who sent in this "hors d'oeuvre" as he calls it, "makes West very sore, and he gives up bridge for the rest of his life." Mr. Ley, by the way, has the soul of a real bridger, for his letter submitting the problem said: "In case you have something better to do for the next five minutes, I am enclosing the solution on another sheet, but think it only fair you should not use it, since I have spent so much time on your problems."

P. S.—If anyone can do this problem in five minutes, he's a better man than most are, Gunga Din.

The New Problem

West having bid his diamonds and having led the king of his suit, how would you play to make a four spade contract on the North and South cards of this deal?

PHILIPPINE FARMERS LIVE IN VILLAGES—MANILA DELIGHTFUL IN DECEMBER

By R. P. Brooks

Dean, Department of Commerce, the University of Georgia

FOR the purposes of my travel the Philippine Islands was not one of the countries of importance. I was able to allow only ten days to them; and it need scarcely be said that in so brief a time no extensive knowledge of conditions could be acquired. My time was passed principally in Manila and its neighborhood, though I managed to get in short visits to Los Banos, the seat of the College of Agriculture, Pagsanhan and Baguio.

At the season of my visit (early December) Manila is a delightful place. The downtown sections are hot in midday and it is just as well for the traveler to keep indoors. The early mornings and the evenings are fine. The government-owned Manila hotel, with the magnificent view of the bay, is as excellent a hostelry as the east affords. This is high praise, as there are many first-class hotels west of San Francisco.

The abundance of tropical fruits (of which I like the papaya best), excellent coffee, and food prepared in the American style were not the least of the delights of Manila. The flowers were gorgeous, hibiacus, bourganvillia, poinsettia and frangipani all over the city. A nine-hole golf course extends about the hotel and adds to the beauty of the scene; and of course the bay itself, with its scores of men-of-war and merchantmen, is a rare sight. I was in Manila just at the time when our Asiatic fleet put in for the winter. The coming of the fleet opens the social season; the hotels and clubs were full of naval officers and their ladies.

The economic life of the Philippines centers about the production of a few agricultural commodities—rice, the principal foodstuff, and abaca (hemp), sugar cane, coconut products and tobacco, for export. Quantities of corn are also grown. In 1929 the areas given to these crops, the amount and value of the product were as follows:

Crop—	Area in Hectares (Hectare: 2½ acres)	Quantity in 1,000 Kilos	Value in Pesos (Peso: 50c)
Rice	1,175,460	2,170,687	193,431,510
Sugar Cane	257,710	847,248	119,915,120
Coconut Products.	531,040	480,191	89,093,620
Copra Oil		1,517
Abaca	484,850	213,393	54,814,360
Corn	515,040	356,218	24,431,600
Tobacco	82,620	47,409	10,463,050

On the map the Philippine Islands look insignificant in size, but in fact they cover some 114,000 square miles, or about the area of Georgia. They extend in a north and south line about a thousand miles, or roughly the distance from Georgia to New York. Furthermore, considerable differences in elevation and climate occur. These facts account for a certain measure of localization of the several agricultural interests.

In the Manila neighborhood, for example, one sees no tobacco or hemp and little corn, but this is the center of the coconut industry. Manila is located in the lower part of Luzon, the largest of the 7,000 islands, and the northernmost of the important ones. Abaca centers in Mindanao, the second in size and the southernmost of the larger islands, and in Leyte, another southern island. Sugar cane is grown in all the islands, but negroes in the south produce more than half the total output. The center of tobacco production is in northern Luzon. Cebu, a small southern island, accounts for about one-third of the corn.

Of the total land area of the Philippines only 12.5 per cent is cultivated, though it is commonly said that 50 per cent of the soil is cultivable. The latest available statistics date from 1918. At that time there were 1,955,276 farms, giving less than six acres as the average size of the holdings. More than 400,000, or 22 per cent, of the farmers are tenants. It is an odd circumstance that with such great quantities of land available the Filipinos do not take advantage of the opportunity to become landowners. Eighty-eight per cent of the public domain remains unclaimed, and the homestead laws are notably liberal.

The explanation of this situation is that the Filipino lacks the pioneering spirit. He is a gregarious being and loves his native village too well to remove to a distance, where larger holdings on a freehold basis are to be had at the price of comparative isolation. Hence it is that some of the provinces have a population density as high as 450 per square mile and others have only 10 to 25.

The occupation of the public domain has been somewhat impeded by the poor administration of the land title system. On this point Governor General Wood said in 1922: "Surveys are backward and the people are clamoring for titles to their land. Tens of thousands of cases are awaiting adjustment. The land office needs a thorough reorganization."

In the Philippines, as in China and the east generally, one rarely comes upon an isolated farmstead. The farmers instead live in more or less compact village communities and lose much time in going to and from the fields (though I doubt if that is much of a consideration to the native). In the course of a 50-mile drive out of Manila one passes through numerous villages which are typical of the islands. The dwellings are flimsy affairs, amounting to four posts stuck into the earth and enclosed with split bamboo. The flooring is also of bamboo, the splits being laid with space between so as to allow free circulation of the air. The roof is of thatch. Invariably the houses are raised from three to six feet above ground. In this way the Filipino keeps his residence above water during the wet season, provides for plenty of air, and has a convenient place for his farming implements and his domestic animals and fowls.

These houses with the land on which they stand have an average value of about $60. The surroundings of the Filipino dwellings are unattractive, though coconut palms and banana plants sometimes impart a sort of beauty to the place.

The carabao or water buffalo is the mainstay of the farmers. He pulls the plough and the harrow in preparing the soil, is used in the threshing, is the principal factor in transportation, and the source of the milk supply. Except for the use of the carabao in the ways mentioned, all the farming operations, at least in rice growing, are done by hand.

The tools consist of a rude home-made plough, entirely of wood, except the point, which is a rough piece of iron; a primitive harrow, made by driving wooden pegs through two or more crossbars, and a supply of knives. The Filipino's conveyance is a cart with solid wooden wheels, the outfit being home-made, except the axle.

Since from time immemorial rice has been the leading foodstuff of the Filipinos, and since the production of this cereal is by far the most important concern of the natives today, it should be of interest to consider some of the conditions prevailing in the industry. Some ten years ago a survey of certain rice-growing areas was conducted by the department of rural economics of the Philippine College of Agriculture. The investigators were primarily interested in the matter of tenancy. The inquiry covered eight typical areas in which rice production overshadowed all other interests. Of the effective area 91.8 per cent was planted to rice. The total area canvassed was about 5,000 acres.

The report appears not to state the number of landlords in the eight areas. There were 830 tenants with an average holding of six acres, all of which was used for rice. The prevailing type of tenancy was the share system, the landlord supplying only the land, the tenant furnishing both the labor and the capital goods (a carabao and a few tools). The crop was divided half and half. Forty-three per cent of the tenants worked under complete supervision of the landlord, 35 per cent under intermittent control, and the rest were allowed to pursue their own devices. The tenants' share of the farm income averaged $40 per year per hectare, or about $100 for the average farm of six acres.

In more than half the cases this income was supplemented by the profits of home industries, such as embroideries and hat-making. Furthermore, since the farm labor occupied only a small percentage of the farmers' time, most of them (79 per cent) engaged in secondary occupations, such as fishing for the market and carpentering. These non-agricultural activities materially increased the family income, only 60 per cent of which, indeed, came from the land. Most of the tenants owned their own dwellings in the farm village. The average length of the tenancies was seven years. Thirty-four per cent of the older generation were literate and 54 per cent of the younger.

Tenancy in the United States is commonly regarded as an intermediate stage in the progress of the agricultural worker from the status of laborer to landowner. The authors of the survey point out that this concept of an "agricultural ladder" has no place in Philippine tenancy. "Philippine rice tenants are a definite stratum, a stable class in the rural life of the islands, and there is very little rising from that status to a better agrarian one." Most of the tenants studied were in debt, were victimized by usurers, and were little above the status of peons.

Though enormous quantities of rice are produced in nearly every province of the islands, yet since 1854 the Philippines have been a rice-importing country; and there appears no likelihood of the deficiency being made up. Coconuts, abaca and sugar cane compete with rice for the soil, and these other crops under the stimulation of foreign demand (more particularly in wartimes) tend to become bonanza crops. Capital turns to them; rice lands are diverted to more profitable uses.

Now, while it is easy to convert rice fields into coconut groves or abaca or sugar cane plantations, it is very difficult, except in the case of sugar cane, to restore the land to rice culture. Furthermore we are told by the most competent student of Philippine economics, E. D. Hester, now United States trade commissioner, that the conditions prevailing among the rice tenants are so bad that they are never inclined to expand the production of that cereal.

Yet rice must be had. Some two and a half billion pounds are annually required. The deficit runs from 150 to 200 million pounds. The imported rice comes from Indo-China, and the trade is controlled by a powerful Chinese group. These Chinese own steamship lines and warehouses. Chinese brokers import the rice, the business is financed by Chinese bankers, and the rice is distributed through Chinese merchants in the numerous Filipino towns.

Battles Around Atlanta, Ho

"We Were Powerful Close to the Yanks," Said Daniel M. Clower, of Gwinnett County, as He Recently Studied the Picture of the Battle Contained in Cyclorama Canvas

By Ben Cooper

ONE by one the comrades have answered the last roll call, and today, so far as their information goes, there are but two men left of the gallant company of Confederates pictured in the defense of the Hurt House on the gigantic Cyclorama at Grant Park.

These two men, in whose hearts a view of the Cyclorama always strikes especially responsive chords, are Francis Maryland Mills, 95, of Doraville, and his nephew, Daniel Morgan Clower, 86, of Gwinnett county.

In the hottest part of the attack and counter-attack at the Hurt House, Mr. Mills and Mr. Clower did their part to stem the advancing tide of Sherman's horde, but were forced to withdraw with their company when the Yankees obtained heavy reinforcements.

Both veterans agree heartily that the Cyclorama, painted by Lohr, Lorenz & Heine, of Leipzig, Germany, in 1889, is a faithful reproduction of the Battle of Atlanta in the Moreland avenue-Georgia railroad section. Shown a photograph of the Hurt House section of the canvas, they recalled immediately the use of cotton bales for breastworks.

"We were powerful close to the Yanks," Mr. Clower commented, studying the picture of Hurt House.

"It's a wonder that we were not all killed. If modern guns had been used instead of the old muzzle loaders, I suppose that few would have escaped to tell the tale," Mr. Clower said. "A couple of machine guns at close quarters would have wiped out everybody, but the old muzzle loaders were so slow that few soldiers got hit by bullets.

"The scene on the Cyclorama is about as it happened. We whipped the Yanks when they first came at us, and they withdrew. The Yanks got heavy reinforcements and came back. When they did we had to get out of the way, and we left the field gracefully but hastily, because the enemy was too strong for a handful of men to hold them back.

"The cotton bales shown in the Cyclorama did good work. They were as effective as a dirt wall in stopping bullets. Mr. Mills and I were in the action at the rear of the house, and the distance between us and the Yanks was a little more than it appears on the canvas. We were within hot fighting distance, though."

Mr. Mills was in a number of battles, but the action at the Hurt House was about the hottest part of the war, the Doraville veteran said. "It was one of the worst battles I fought in," Mr. Mills said. "We fought all over the place. Points were captured, lost, recaptured and lost again until we could not keep count. Our regiment took 13 guns from the enemy. We fought as long as we could, and finally had to give the place up to the Yanks when they came back with more men."

* * * *

Mr. Clower and Mr. Mills were members of Company B, 42d Georgia regiment. So far as they know, they are the only survivors of their company. There are a number of living veterans who fought in the Battle of Atlanta, but those in the Hurt House sector have passed away with the exception of Messrs. Mills and Clower and possibly others with whom they have not been able to maintain contact.

Both veterans are active in spite of their heavy burden of years. Mr. Mills chops kindling for his daughter, Mrs. R. W. McElroy, with whom he lives at Doraville. He keeps his health by moderate exercise, walking and doing chores around home. He loves to walk, but is not able to go very fast, and his activities are becoming constricted because of dimming sight. He feels fine, and says that his years rest lightly on his shoulders.

The great hobby of Mr. Mills was horseback riding in the days before his joints became too stiff for a morning gallop. He is fond of fine horses, and at various times owned excellent mounts. His favorite sports are hunting and fishing, especially the latter. He admits to a liking for automobile rides, but has been to few picture shows and does not think much of the radio. Mr. Mills says the radio worries a person too much.

"How about airplanes?" Mr. Mills was asked.

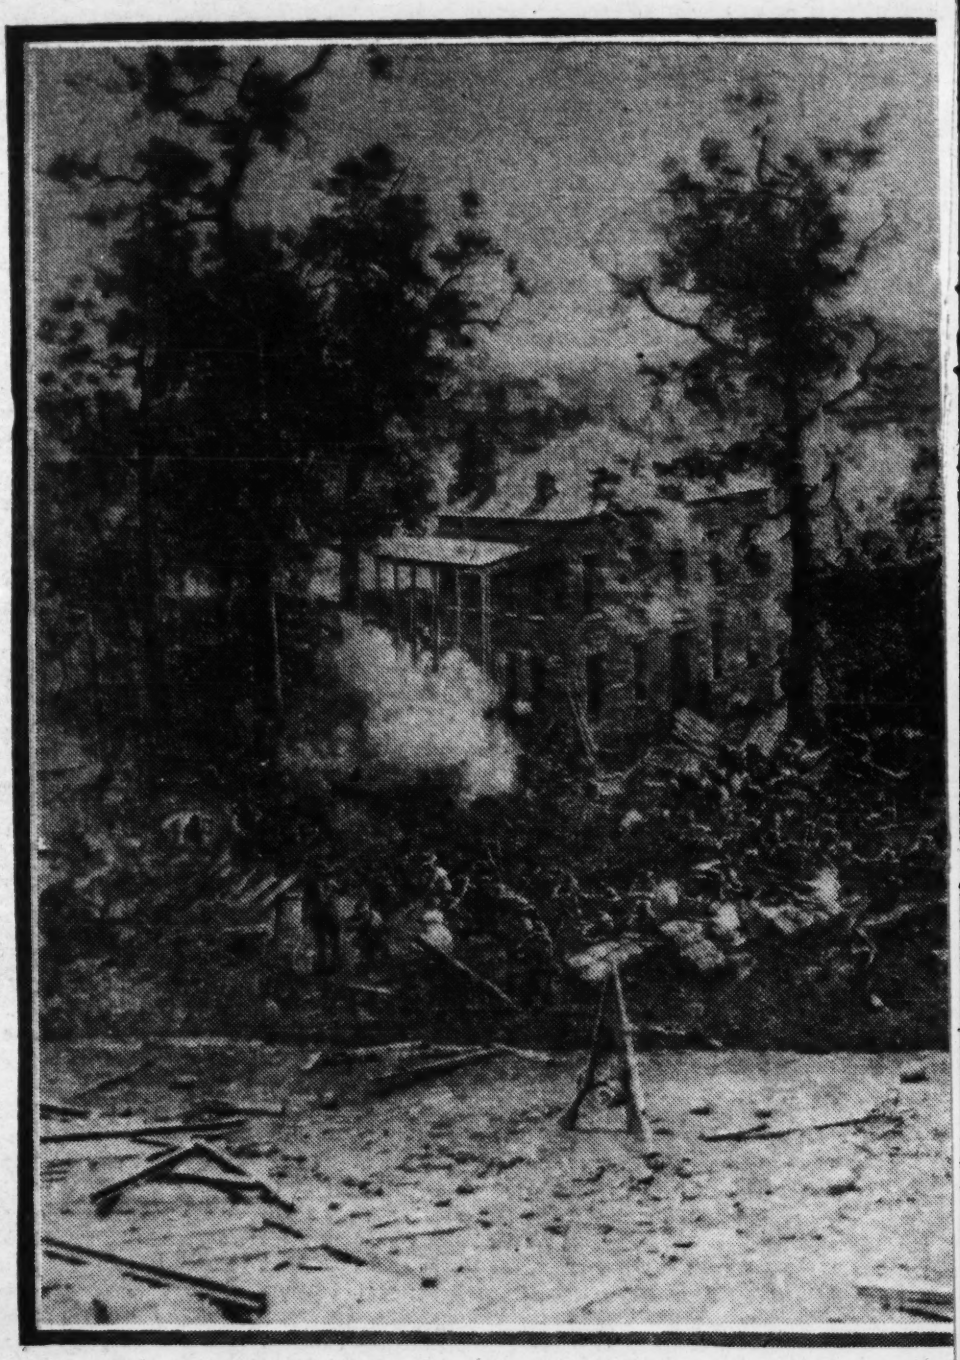

"No, sir. You'll never get me up in one of those things," he said. "I'll take my chances on the ground, thank you."

* * * *

Mr. Mills remembers days that make the present "depression" seem like the horn of plenty. "There was little to eat during the war," he said. "Our menu generally consisted of a few grains of parched corn, some pea-bread, and stuff like that, and lots of times we were lucky to get anything at all. I remember one time when it was my turn to guard the rations. After the command was fed it was my turn to eat. Everything was gone except three little pieces of syrup cane.

"Clothing was as scarce as food. Many of the boys were barefooted, but fortunately I always managed to keep my feet in boots. We sometimes woke up covered with snow. It was warm enough, though damp, until we got up, and then we nearly froze."

Mr. Mills fought under Generals Johnston, Hood and Gordon, taking part in the engagements at Vicksburg, Miss., Sweetwater, Tenn., Lexington, Ky., Corinth, Miss., and Atlanta. Practically all of the distance between these points was covered by him on foot, railroad transportation of the day being more or less inadequate for military needs.

Mr. Mills attributes his ripe old age to right living and moderation. He smoked a pipe for 75 years, and quit two years ago. He never smoked very much, and when he decided that it was a thing he should stop, he just laid down his pipe and has not smoked since, Mr. Mills said. He never worries, and eats anything he desires, without over-eating. He drinks coffee, but has left liquor strictly alone all of his life, he said.

"We were in Stevenson's division, Stovall's brigade," Mr. Clower said. "Captain Weaver was our commander at first, and was succeeded by Captain Thomas. I went all through the war without being touched by lead, only to be wounded at Jonesboro by some heavy limbs that fell from a tree when cannon knocked off the top of the tree. I was injured in the leg and shoulder, and had to leave the company for a time. When I got well my company was far away, and I could not locate the command, so I was put into another outfit and was sent to Athens, Tenn., where we cut the railroad in two."

Mr. Clower was in the battles of Peachtree Creek and Sandtown Road, as well as the Hurt House conflict. His hobby is hunting. He does not have many opportunities of enjoying a hunt these days, but his aim is good and he bangs away at squirrels with as much vim as he shot at Yanks near the Hurt House. He possesses an ancient fowling piece of the muzzle loading type, but nowadays uses a modern gun for hunting.

Both veterans have large families. Mr. Mills has two daughters, Mrs. McElroy and Mrs. R. W. Duncan, of 24 Crog street, five grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandchildren. His sister Mrs. William Wilson, 80, lives in Gainesville. Mr. Clower is the father of three children, Mrs. Elizabeth Moore, Mrs. Ada A. Davis, of College Park, and G. W. Clower, of Lawrenceville. He has 19 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The Hurt House pictured on the Cyclorama was one of two Hurt houses in that section of Atlanta. One was the Augustus F. Hurt home on what is now called Copenhill; the other was the George Troup Hurt home on the site of the East Atlanta Primitive Baptist church on DeGress avenue, according to records of Wilbur G. Kurtz, whose stirring Civil War pictures and stories have appeared in The Constitution magazine. Placement of the Troup Hurt house in the Cyclorama is wrong as to location with respect to the railroad, Mr. Kurtz said.

The Cyclorama was painted from sketches made by the German artists from a tall observation tower erected in the middle of the battleground. It was presented to the city after being used as a feature of the Cotton States Exposition. The canvas was housed in a wooden building for a number of years until the city moved it into the present splendid structure.

The Cyclorama building also houses the engine "Texas," which pursued and overtook the "General" following the latter's capture by Andrews' raiders. The "General" was seized by the Yankees at Big Shanty, now Kennesaw, and was recaptured at Ringgold after a chase that became an important part of Georgia's war-time history. The "General" is on view at the N., C. & St. L. depot in Chattanooga.

In connection with the war-time Western & Atlantic railroad, H. G. Bradley, Fulton county deputy sheriff, who spent his younger days as a wood-passer on the "Texas" and a conductor on a train pulled by the "General," recently received a letter from F. A. Ragsdale, 86, of Lithonia, a local preacher for 50 years, who recalls hauling wounded soldiers to Dalton for hospital service after the Battle of Missionary Ridge.

"When the Battle of Missionary Ridge was fought, the wounded were brought to a woodyard on the road, and I went up one trip to bring the wounded to Dalton for hospital service," Mr. Ragsdale says. "We just put them in freight cars in the nighttime without lights or ringing of bells or blowing of whistles."

Mr. Ragsdale recalls that the road had two other engines of the same make as the "Texas" and "General." These were the "Dispatch" and the "Gazelle."

* * * *

The Battle of Atlanta found a southern force of some 50,000 men facing an invading army of 106,070. Both north and south had been hard hit by the exhausting years of war, and the situation in Georgia, a state which was just beginning to feel the real effects of war at close quarters, was desperate.

Hounded by Sherman's troops, the Confederates were preparing to make a vigorous fight in defense of Atlanta when General Johnston was displaced and command given to Hood. News of the change touched the morale of the defenders. Hood, an aggressive scrapper where Johnston was a genius at defensive warfare, took the initiative and issued orders that resulted in the Battle of Peachtree Creek July 20, 1864.

Great Rackets—New and Old

of which keepers of poker clubs and more pretentious gambling dens fleeced the unwary with the connivance of the police.

3. The crime racket, which protected thieves for a share of the profits. This form of racket was much more difficult to maintain than the others, for public opinion which would wink at violations of the sumptuary laws would take an entirely different attitude about crime.

4. The saloon racket, which enabled sellers of liquor to serve drinks on Sundays and during other restricted hours.

This last is our immediate concern; and, of course, when I say saloon, I mean the forerunner of the speakeasy of prohibition days.

Two or three years before prohibition was written upon the law books of the land I gave a lecture on crime prevention at Princeton University. I spoke from knowledge acquired first-hand. I had had the opportunities given to me to see the ravages of drink and its effect on crime. I had been a reporter on a metropolitan journal; had studied crime abroad; had served for two years as a deputy police commissioner of New York city, and subsequently I had been in charge of the department for four years, less a few weeks.

In the lecture at Princeton I said:

"It is not my province here to go into a discussion of prohibition, although from a police point of view it would be a godsend to any community."

After giving this conception, which was shared generally by policemen in the country in the years before prohibition, I continued: "As a cause of crime the habit of drink takes high rank. As a cause of want and misery and despair it ranks equally high. From the police point of view it is not germane to discuss what may be the best means of attaining temperance. We can say emphatically, however, that if intemperance in the use of hard liquors could be prevented the police courts would lose very much of their business. At a meeting of the police inspectors in New York, when the subject of discussion was the causes of crime, one experienced inspector gave it as his judgment, which seemed to be generally concurred in, that drink was the biggest single cause of crime."

I have not changed my views. They have only been strengthened by the lapse of years. But I want to make it clear that what I had in mind was temperance, which I hoped would be achieved by a system of prohibition.

We have not achieved temperance, and we apparently are learning that we cannot achieve it through prohibition. To our sorrow we have learned further that prohibition has given birth to the Great Racket, a racket of undreamed proportions, a racket that has given wealth to the low elements of our communities, making a thug into a millionaire almost overnight, and enabling a lowly policeman to bank several hundred thousand dollars in the course of a few months. The recent police graft disclosures prove all this.

In order to understand the failure of prohibition we must go back to the days when the Volstead act and the 18th amendment were things that only visionaries dreamed. This will bring us to a discussion of the saloon, which was a blot upon our civilization and an institution of evil that all sane men hoped to see eradicated. The saloon is gone. But let us return to the days when it was with us.

In those days we had in the district attorney's office Mr. Charles A. Perkins, a hard-headed man of the best reformer type—not the impractical, uncompromising, self-righteous sort. For more than ten years he was head of the indictment bureau of the office of the district attorney of New York county.

He gave me figures covering a period of a few years while he was in charge of the preparation of cases for the grand jury. In this period he submitted more than 1,000 cases of violations against the state law prohibiting the sale of liquor on Sunday. These were copper-riveted cases, every one. I have forgotten the number of indictments, but they were unbelievably few, as is shown by the following fact, which is impressed on my memory and is supported by notes of a series of lectures I delivered at Yale University in April, 1918, on the relations between the policeman and the public.

Out of these thousand-odd cases there were but three convictions by juries.

Why were there only three convictions out of more than a thousand conclusive cases? The reason was that Sunday closing in the city of New York was not supported by public opinion. Probably the same situation existed in most other large centers of population.

A law that is not supported by public opinion is not a law. This is not just an opinion of mine, but an authoritative legal conclusion. A law of this sort is unenforceable by methods which can be tolerated among a free people. And all unenforceable laws are sources of corruption.

One of these grand juries before whom my friend appeared asked the policeman who made the arrest in a given case: "You and a brother officer arrested this man for selling liquor on a Sunday?"

"Yes, and we tasted the whisky and had it analyzed, and here is the chemical analysis."

"That saloon was on a corner?"

"Yes."

"There are four corners where those streets cross?"

"Yes."

"And how many other saloons are there, if any, on the three other corners?"

"Three saloons."

"And you arrested the bartender in only one saloon?"

"Yes."

"Why didn't you arrest the three others?"

The truthful answer would have been: "Because they paid up."

And the grand jury failed to indict.

The policeman was merely carrying out orders according to custom. He was to blame only in a minor way.

I do not recall the number of licensed saloons in New York city at that time, but there were, roughly, 10,000. The custom was for each precinct to make two arrests each Sunday, so that when a cry was set up that the Sunday law was being flouted the captains in command of precincts could point to these arrests—two to each precinct. It did not matter that the convictions averaged less than three to a thousand. That was not the fault of the commander of the precinct: it was the fault of the juries!

The truth was that it was not the fault of any one in particular. It was the fault of a system that wrote and kept these unenforceable statutes on the books of New York and other states, thus making it easy for corrupt members of the police to wax rich by permitting saloonkeepers to satisfy the demands of the people, which were unlawful and yet not unlawful. Here let me observe, for the information of those unacquainted with the police, that they are probably just as honest a group as are others of similar background in private life.

We could not stop the old saloon racket, because public opinion would not support the authorities in their efforts to enforce Sunday closing. And public opinion had a very definite and decisive method of expressing its opinion: through the action of its juries.

But the vice racket, and the gambling racket, we could and did stop. In these matters the public conscience was with us because it was opposed to gambling and vice. The average man—and, after all, it is what he wants that a state must eventually give if it is to survive—is opposed to vice and gambling.

When we had the saloon the proprietors of these places annually paid the state of New York $26,000,000 for licenses. Millions more were paid to the federal government every year.

But those millions that used to lighten the burdens of taxpayers, helping them to maintain their police forces and other agencies of government, now go into the pockets of beer barons and heads of whisky rings and their political allies. Nowhere have the evil effects been more marked than in the republican-controlled city of Chicago. New York city, normally democratic, has not had the overlords of the underworld actually ruling the city, as has seemed to be the case, on occasions at least, in Chicago. But a stronger hold must be taken of conditions in this metropolis and in other communities where the practices born of prohibition are slowly sapping the body politic, if they do not wish the fate of Chicago to befall them.

The National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement, appointed by President Hoover, showed that the illegal sale of intoxicating beverages now amounts to at least $3,000,000,000 a year. It is the biggest industry in the land.

In other words, it means that if the sales were divided up evenly every man, woman and child in the country would pay some $25 a year to the bootlegging industry.

Is it any wonder that the industry not only defies the government but sets up a government of its own, whose laws are enforced by murder?

The army of the bootleggers maims and kills civilians and police alike, either when the police are honest and trying to enforce the law, or when they have betrayed them; or when civilians, either members of the rings or law-abiding members of the community, fall afoul of them. The deeds of this army are so atrocious that a decade or so ago they could have been imagined only in a troubled sleep.

The licensed saloons of ten or more years ago paid hundreds of millions of dollars annually to the states and the nation. These places, permitted by law, although a blot upon our civilization, numbered 180,000. Their owners conducted a lawful business; they were not lawbreakers, nor were their patrons. Today the number of speakeasies is estimated at a half to three-quarters of a million, their patrons are said to be more numerous than the frequenters of saloons, and all, owners and patrons, are lawbreakers.

These are the figures of the Wickersham commission, officially known as the national commission on law observance and enforcement. Let me quote from an article by James J. Forrester, research expert of the Wickersham commission, in "Current History," March, 1931.

"The estimated number of speakeasies is three times the number of saloons before prohibition, and in some large centers of population the proportion is even greater. No reliable estimate is obtainable from the investigators (of the Wickersham commission) as to the number of people who are drinking as compared to those who drank before prohibition, but there is abundant evidence showing the increase in the classes of those who are drinking and the character of drinking." . . .

This fertile field for graft has produced a crop of murderous gangsters that challenge our free institutions. If this kind of business is not stopped it will grow. No businessman will be safe from the levy of tribute.

One of the greatest policemen I have ever known, who rose from the ranks and knows every twist and turn of a great law enforcement agency, who is as honest as the day is long, said to me recently:

"The police cannot cope with the beer gangs and rumrunners, even if they tried to. It is only a question of time when the murderous assaults of the bootleggers will call for the declaration of martial law in many of our large cities."

Let us examine the personnel of this Great Racket.

The flotsam and jetsam of the underworld has been washed into it. The racketeer in the Great Racket is the "cadet" and the "lighthouse" of the vice racket of two or three or ten years ago. Sometimes he is of a higher grade, a former thief or thug, or ward heeler. Occasionally some are of still higher type, for their ranks are also recruited from the fringes of Society with a capital S.

In a recent noted libel suit a detective of national reputation was engaged by the plaintiff, a newspaper of international repute, to obtain affidavits or statements from a dozen or so persons possessing important information bearing on the defense. Several were racketeers. Let the detective tell the story:

"One of the men I had to see was the president of a trading corporation with a head office in New York's financial district. Somehow I could never find him in. I began to suspect things. So I went to an old underworld acquaintance for assistance, one who had often helped me. I knew that he had relations with some of this man's associates. He told me where the man I sought lived. I drove out to his home, which turned out to be one of the loveliest country homes I have ever seen in a suburb so close to the city. It was summer. Rare plants spotted his well-kept lawn and a garage housed three cars. There was room for two or three more machines.

"When I rang the bell a butler, of the English type, such as you see in high society plays on the stage, opened the door, I told him I wanted to see Mr. X.

"'The master is not at home, sir.'

"I waited until the master came home. A high-powered car of foreign make drove up, a liveried flunky threw open the door, and out stepped my old friend X, a cheap crook I had known in pre-prohibition days. He and his kind, when I or my men arrested them not so many years ago, lived in East Side hovels, and if they were lucky their friends were able to get $500 or $1,000 together in ten or twelve days so as to get them out on bail while awaiting trial. But today, when these buckos are arrested, some of the highest priced lawyers drive down to the courts in their client's car and with a handful of Liberty bonds or $1,000 bills put up security for the bootleggers. It is a Great Racket."

Since the advent of prohibition many policemen think more of getting the bootleggers' tribute than of detecting crime, or, more important still, preventing crime. This is a situation not commonly understood, and one that is full of menace. For the power the police have to profit like parasites off this trade is debauching the very men we depend on for the maintenance of law and order, the protection of life and property.

It is not my intention in this article to consider the question of how temperance ought to be achieved or what should be done about the present prohibition laws. The aim here is to limit the consideration of this matter to the criminal side of it. In this respect we must always remember that these prohibition laws are sumptuary laws. They are laws that govern our manners and customs, about which opinions vary. The public generally puts them in quite a different category from the law against pillage, robbery, burglary, etc.

What should be done about it all? There is no royal road that I know of which is smooth to travel on and leads to a happy solution. It is not so simple as that. Not much improvement can be hoped for in the liquor traffic unless the laws are in accord with the opinions of a large majority of the people whose manners and customs they govern. This being so, either public opinion must support the present laws or the laws must be amended so as to bring them into harmony with public opinion.

Then with honest city officials, our troubles along these lines would be mostly over. The Great Racket would be past history.

along together, but he was muttering. "You mean well, miss, but I dunno."

She heard groaning noises before they turned in at the tumbledown gateway.

As she followed her guide through the open door of the house they were met in the entry by a scared looking little girl in a torn gingham dress, a thin child with a very pale face and irregular teeth, who stared at Eunice and made no reply to her polite greeting.

The groans came from a room on the right. Stiffening her spine, which was growing a little weak, Eunice still followed the tall boy.

The room she went into was a scene of devastation. A broken chair lay on its back in the middle of the bare, unpainted floor. Smashed crockery was scattered about, and there was a large wet stain on the floor that was smeary with coffee grounds. On an untidy bed in the far corner lay a tall, rawboned woman with a quilt over her legs. Her eyes were closed, her face was red and swollen, and there was an ugly bruise on her forehead. Ugh! There was blood on it, too.

Stepping around the wet coffee grounds, Eunice went over to the bed and touched the woman's hand with her gloved hand. "I'm so sorry," she said.

The groaning stopped with a snort of surprise. The eyes opened wide—bloodshot eyes that were bleary and out of focus. Why, the woman was drunk!

After smashing the chair and the crockery she had probably made for the stairs and fallen headlong. That big boy must have had an awful time getting her where she was.

"The doctor'll be here in a few minutes, ma," he was saying now from the foot of the bed where he stood looking down at her anxiously.

She fixed her bleary eyes on his face, ignoring Eunice. "Jim Jones!" Her voice was thick. "Who zhish girl you got here?"

Quickly Eunice told the woman her name and that she was a niece of the Wimberleys.

"I heard of your accident," she explained with dignity, "and I came to ask if there wasn't something that I could do. To help you, I mean."

"Now whadya shink o' that!" The woman was leering at her. "Shure there izh. You c'n git a bash'n o' wa'm wa'er an' wash my fache an' 'ands.'

It was a challenge, intended as such, and Eunice took it up. She began to remove her white gloves.

"Get some warm water, Millie," Jim commanded, and the thin little girl scurried out of the room.

The invalid groaned, "O, my leg!" Then she looked up at Eunice again and there was no leer in her eyes now. "An' I mean t'shay—if you wanna be a reel shport, you c'n gimme shome victuals—f'r my shril'ren an' me. Jim'sh out o' work, an' I can' do no cleanin' f'm housh t' housh wi' broken leg."

"O, yes. Yes. Of course I will."

"There izhn't a morshel in th'housh. I shpent my lash shent f'r tha' good go'l o' bootleg shin——" her voice trailed off and her eyes closed. She groaned again.

Eunice opened her bag, took out a twenty dollar bill and held it out to Jim.

"It's for your mother. Is there a grocery and a butcher shop near here? Do you know what to buy? Spend all the money, of course."

He blushed, but he took it without any hesitation.

"Yes, miss. Thank you, miss."

"I'll stay with her until you get back," Eunice told him.

When he was gone she picked up that broken chair and stood it against the wall in one corner.

The child returned with a tin basin of warm water, a piece of strong yellow kitchen soap and a very disgraceful towel.

"Thank you, Millie. Now hadn't you better pick up those broken dishes, and wipe up those coffee grounds on the floor?"

"Yes'm," the child whispered.

Eunice was washing the woman's face and hands—it was quite a job notwithstanding the strength of that soap—when she heard a motor stop in the road before the house. A doctor, probably.

At the sound of a step in the room behind her she straightened herself from her labors of purification, turned around——

"You!" she gasped, involuntarily, and the wet soap fell to the floor with a plop.

Dr. Fred Clynes stood there grinning down at her. Her reception of him was really funny.

"Am I too young?" he inquired. "Won't I do? It's a broken leg, isn't it? If your mother——"

"She isn't my mother!"

He looked at her then more closely, but she could see that he did not know her from Adam—or should we say from Eve? A hat makes such a difference, a sports dress instead of pale blue chiffon, environment most of all.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I should have known——"

"It's no matter."

Of course, as soon as she spoke four words in succession he saw the absurdity of what he had thoughtlessly taken for granted, but this was no time for profuse apologies. He was a crack surgeon, and he stripped off his coat and went to his job.

"Tut, tut," he muttered to Eunice as he examined the fracture. "I'll attend to the washing here, though, and the disinfecting. That splintered bone has cut through the skin. Look."

And she looked. Gritting her teeth, she looked.

The patient meanwhile had not been silent, but her remarks when he touched her leg can be simply passed over. Left out. The doctor unrolled something which Eunice supposed were splints, opened his little black bag, took out some rolls of linen, a bottle and other things. He asked for a basin of warm water, which the little girl again ran to get.

"Of course I am ready to help you," Eunice heard herself saying, "in any way that I can."

"Thanks. Thanks very much."

If he was puzzled by her he gave no sign now. He was on duty. Eunice never forgot the next few minutes. They were trying minutes, for the doctor had accepted her offer for service, and the patient was intractable and unpleasantly noisy.

The skill of that slim waisted young man in shirtsleeves was something to admire—the skill and the gentleness.

When the leg was finally in splints and the doctor stood up, he said to Eunice, "You're pretty white. Put your hand in my right hip pocket. There's a flask of brandy there. Take a good nip of it."

"But I don't want——"

"Do as I tell you."

She obeyed him. One does when a doctor speaks in that tone of quiet certainty.

"Yes, use the top as a cup. A little more now—there, that's right. Now, swallow it down."

They went out to the kitchen together to wash their hands. There was no tap, but a pail of cold water stood on the deal table, and there was a steaming kettle on the rusty old stove.

The doctor waved a hand at the wash basin, then bowed from the waist.

"Ladies first." He was smiling, and his blue eyes were almost caressing.

When they went back to the patient's room, Eunice said, "won't she need some one to take care of her? I'm—willing to pay——"

"That's not necessary. One of our visiting nurses will run in from time to time. There's not an unoccupied bed in our charity ward this week or we'd have taken her down to the hospital."

Eunice said in a low tone, "I'll leave an order for groceries and things."

"But not for the bootlegger!"

She glanced nervously round at the patient, who seemed to be quite oblivious. Perhaps the doctor had attended to that in his cool efficient way.

She looked up at him and smiled. She couldn't help it.

"Who are you, anyway?" he asked, suddenly grave.

She hesitated a moment. It seemed an enormous concession to tell him who she was.

Then the boy,, Jim, came into the house with his arms and hands full of packages. Food of all sorts, twenty dollars' worth, probably. From something he said to Eunice before he went through to the kitchen, the doctor inferred where the money had come from to feed this unfortunate brood.

"Have you had any dinner yourself?" he asked her, with a glance at his wrist watch. "It's after eight o'clock."

"W-why, no. I'd forgotten about dinner. They must be wondering where I am."

"Who?"

"Aunt Sue and Stella. And Uncle Rex Wimberley."

He fell back a step. "Great Scot! Weren't you at the club dance last night?"

"Yes, I was. You danced with me."

He turned and pickedup his coat, shrugged into it. Picked up his bag. He came and stood quite close to her.

He said, "You're the pluckiest girl I ever met—the pluckiest girl of your kind, I mean. Why, you—you're too good to be true. I—I don't believe it. I'm seeing things. You're not real. You can't be."

Then he asked, "May I take you home?"

"But it's only a step."

"I can make it longer.'

A strange inner excitement was having its way with Eunice. Of course, she was too pretty not to have seen admiration before in the eyes of men, but Dr. Fred Clynes had a dominant way with him. Personality. A center of his own.

Jim ambled into the room, and the doctor took him back to the kitchen for a few final instructions. When they reappeared the doctor said "Come" to Eunice, and she turned and bade Jim good night. The little girl was nowhere to be seen.

They walked down the path together to where his car waited. As he opened the door and helped her in his touch on her arm was electrical. Then he went around and slipped into the seat beside her, behind the wheel.

Straight along that side road he drove, not toward the Wimberleys' place. Half a mile he drove without a word, but the silence between them was saying something breathless and wonderful. As they turned on to the Marmon highroad he stopped the car before a small wayside lunchroom, got out, said, "Excuse me a moment, please," and went into the lunchroom, leaving Eunice sitting there in the car.

Being left alone in a car she was powerless to handle had been one of the trying events of everyday life that she could never get used to. It seemed less dreadful this time.

It was five minutes, maybe, before Dr. Fred came out to the car.

"I told the Wimberleys' butler on the phone," he said, "that you would be home by and by." He had in his hand two sandwiches wrapped in tissue paper and a big red banana.

"Better eat these. Old Jewkes says he'll leave some cold meat and salad and things on the sideboard for you. Seems to be his evening out."

Eunice thanked him, took off her gloves and attacked the sandwiches. Wolfed them.

"Are they all right?" The car was now picking up speed.

"Delicious. I must have been hungry."

He kept his eyes straight ahead. "Were you ever in Hartford?" he asked.

"Hartford?"

"Yes."

"No."

She took a bite of banana, then said with her mouth full, "Why?"

He glanced round at her for a second, then back to the road again. "I asked you because I'm thinking of practicing there. Setting up for myself. I'm comfortably off, you know, and I was just wondering if you liked—if you knew Hartford."

But she was peering at the thingumajigs on the dashboard. "Tell me, is it easy to learn to drive a car?"

"Easy enough. Why?"

"Because I'm thinking of buying one. Learning——"

"My God!" He turned the wheel sharply; he had nearly run them into a ditch. "Let me teach you to drive a car. You can have all my time when I'm off duty." There was a tone in his voice which nobody could have mistaken for anything but—well, but for what it was.

He was silent again for another mile. Then he asked: "Didn't Stella say that you came from Philadelphia?"

"Yes."

"You're not engaged to some fellow down there, are you?"

She gasped. "No. No, of course not."

"How long are you staying in Marmon?"

"As long as I like—all summer, maybe. Why?"

He laughed under his breath. "I was only wondering how much time I should have to—to teach you to drive a car."

She was thinking, is this really me? They were slowing down now, and she wondered why, for there was no other car ahead. Then he turned into a curving drive by an empty schoolhouse and stopped.

Parking!

"I just want to look at you," he explained, "for a minute or two. Have to keep your eyes on the road ahead when you're driving. That's your first lesson."

"I won't forget," she said demurely.

She glanced round at him shyly. He was devouring her with his eyes. It was still light enough—an extremely becoming soft light.

"He said, "I must have been stone blind at that dance last night. Stone blind. But I'd just been watching a perfectly beautiful operation, and I was sort of preoccupied. What did I talk about? Do you remember-"

She felt herself blushing furiously. "You asked me if my slipper was tight. I lost step——"

"Yes, I remember now. Gosh, how pretty you are! And how pretty you were in that awful shack back there, leaning over that vile bed, holding the hands of that drunken old hag while I set that bone. O, I was aware of you every minute, though you may not have thought so."

The look in his eyes made her turn her eyes away with a gay and scared little laugh.

"What is it?"

"You thought I was that woman's daughter. It was awfully funny."

"Yes. That was one on me. But you were so funny yourself when you dropped that soap and hissed, 'You!' By the way, what's your name? I didn't catch it last night."

She told him and he repeated it softly to himself, "Eunice Lewton. Eunice."

Then he glanced at the little clock, sighed, and put his hands on the wheel again. "They're expecting me at the hospital."

As the car began moving he said, "I'm going to look in on our patient at ten in the morning. Will you meet me there?"

Her heart was beating too fast. She must be careful—not let him know.

She managed to answer casually, "O, I don't think so. I'll go round in the afternoon some time."

"But how did you happen to be in that Jones house, anyway?"

Things had been happening so fast that Eunice had been carried on with the rush of them. Now everything Stella had said in the library leaped into her consciousness all at once.

"O," she said, "I was just—just passing that way.' '

She was thinking, I mustn't be hysterical, I mustn't be hysterical. So he thought he didn't like 'fraid cats! Why, he was just like a lamb in her hands. And the way he looked at her.

The car stopped at the Wimberleys' gate and he was helping her out now. As she thanked him for bringing her home, he stood there on the sidewalk a moment, unwilling to let go of her hand.

"Don't you like me the least little bit, Eunice?"

And remembering what she had overheard outside the library window, an imp entered into her.

"You don't interest me," she laughed lovingly. "I have no use whatever for the sort of man you are."

Then, with a gasp, she turned and ran up the walk and into the house. As she went through the doorway she saw Stella striding downstairs. A pink evening wrap hung from her broad shoulders.

"O, You're going out, Stella?" She was still breathless.

"Yes. Where have you been?"

The two girls went into the library together. Stella's eyes were alight with curiosity, but her tone was casual. "What have you been doing?"

"Why, I just went ahead as if I were not afraid, and then—then I wasn't."

"But what did you do? What?"

Eunice smiled up at her. Blushed. "I

Your Flower and Vegetable Garden

By W. Elbridge Freeborn

JUNE IN THE VEGETABLE GARDEN

THE early part of June is the usual accepted time for the planting of cauliflower plants, however, some successful cauliflower growers start cauliflower from seeds the first couple of weeks in June and transplant the plants to the open early in July.

In spite of the fact that cauliflower belongs more or less to the cabbage family and requires more or less the same cultivation, they grow at their best during the summer time, while cabbages are generally grown as a spring and fall crop.

Cauliflowers are the most tempting of vegetables in appearance, particularly on show tables and as displayed in markets. The snowy heads are always attractive and the production of cauliflowers of as attractive appearance as professional growers turn out is a worthy ambition for the home gardener and one he can easily accomplish.

They are no more difficult to grow than cabbage, need exactly the same conditions, the same protection from the green "worms" that speedily riddle the leaves, and the same cultivation. The extra care they demand is the protection of the "flower" or curd. When the tiny white button appears in the center of the plant the grower must begin looking after his cauliflowers if he wants to develop this miniature head into a big snowy flower. They must be protected from direct sunlight if they are to come fine and white. Exposed to the sunlight they will develop green and yellow coloring that is not attractive.

The protection consists of tying the big leaves that surround the flower by the tips so that they will shade the developing curd. These big leaves should be tied loosely so that they will not cramp or crowd the development of the head. This should have room to develop evenly and naturally.

Cauliflowers in the home garden can be placed more closely in the rows than in field culture as they will be tended by hand and will stand 18 inches apart happily under these conditions of hand cultivation. There was formerly a belief that the cauliflower was much more tender and difficult to grow than the cabbage. This is not true. It will thrive equally well with its close relative under the same conditions of good soil and culture.

CARROTS.

For the summer and fall gardens one of the favorite vegetables is the carrot, and we are illustrating today several of the more important varieties. The favorite market variety here in Atlanta is the early Chantenay, a half-long, well-shaped, well-colored variety.

There are two very important cultural directions concerning carrots. The first has to do with the shape of the root. In other words, in order that the roots may be round, well-colored and tapering slightly, the ground should be well prepared and very mellow. The reasons for this are obvious.

On the other hand if carrots are planted in very heavy clay soil, the root has a tendency to be ill-shaped, sometimes even split.

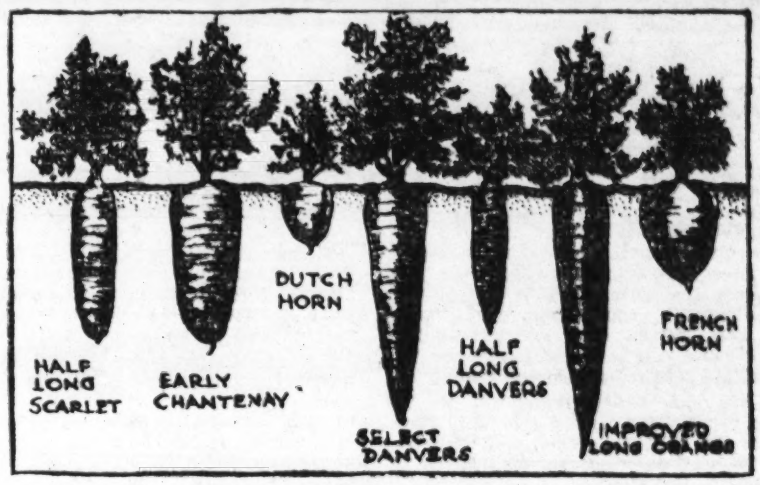

The second important cultural direction has to do with fertilization and is closely connected with the coloring of the carrot. For the carrot to be the proper orange color they should be grown rapidly, well nourished with plenty of well balanced commercial fertilizer, such as 10-6-4.

For carrots to be at their best for table use they should be grown rapidly and pulled early. For this reason it is best that a small amount of them be planted about once every ten days or two weeks. They may be planted from now until about the first or fifteenth of September in this latitude.

GOURDS.

The ornamental gourds are always very interesting and it so happens that they are very easy to grow. They will grow in almost any sort of soil, but should not be planted close to any of their cousins, the pumpkins, or the squashes. If they are planted close to them they are liable to cross and the edible vegetables will have a bitter taste.

The favorite variety is the dipper gourd. No real spring is complete without at least one gourd dipper. These same dippers are used a great deal for martin nests and are really appreciated by these birds. The nest-egg gourd is the little fellow that our grandmothers used to help in darning socks.

TYPES OF TURNIPS

These are sometimes used as nest eggs. Some of the larger sorts are often used to fashion buskets, baskets, poultry nests and water dishes for the poultry. Another sort has been used for wash cloths or dish cloths. At least the insides are used for this purpose.

But aside from the practical use of these fellows they are most interesting when used for vines and really give a change that is most effective.

PUMPKINS.

The pumpkin is always a very popular fall vegetable. The best known variety is the very large Jumbo which is used so much at Halloween. Jumbo is also very fine for baking as well as for pumpkin pies. And speaking of baking pumpkins, try to raise a few cashaws. We are a little bit south for these to grow at their best, but with a little special care they will make a delightful addition to the table.

Probably the most popular pumpkin here in the south is the sweet or sugar pumpkin. This is a medium size pumpkin 10 to 12 inches in diameter, but it is of very fine quality and its color is a deep orange, slightly ribbed, thick flesh and one of the very best edible pumpkins.

SQUASH

All varieties of squash may be planted during the month of June and early part of July. The favorite variety of all is the yellow summer crookneck. The round white patty pan and the early yellow bush are both good flat types.

TURNIPS.

The old standby anywhere in the south is the turnip. There are probably more turnips planted in the south in the fall than all of the other vegetables combined. By this we do not mean to imply that the other vegetables will not grow well in the fall. It does mean that long ago turnips were found to be very satisfactory for the fall garden—just as we are learning each year that more and more vegetables will grow well during the late summer and early fall.

The turnip is such a well-known vegetable that it seems superfluous to talk about and describe its uses other than to say that it is invaluable.

Turnips will do best planted on new ground but this is not absolutely essential. If stable manure is to be used it should be worked into the soil about two to four weeks before the actual planting of the seeds. Care should be taken that the stable manure is well rotted and thoroughly worked into the soil. Apply a liberal application of some good commercial fertilizer at the time of planting, repeating this fertilization about three weeks after the turnips have been out of the ground. If the turnips grow fast the greens are much more tender and palatable. Use about one ounce of seed for each one hundred feet of row.

The best turnip for the earliest planting—that is, for planting in June and early July, is our old-fashioned rutabaga. No fall garden is at all complete without this addition. In fact no vegetable dinner served in the fall is complete without the presence of a dish of mashed rutabagas.

The standard variety of turnip used in North Georgia almost to the exclusion of the other varieties, is the purple top globe. It is a white, globe-shaped variety with a purple or red top. It makes a fairly good amount of greens and at the same time makes these most delicious turnips.

There is a new variety that is meeting with much success throughout the south, a recent introduction from Japan. This variety makes an unusual amount of very fine greens, and at the same time produces excellent roots. The root is pure white, about the size of purple top globe, and its greatest plea for mention in the hall of fame is that it is louse resistant. This is hard to believe—yet there have been cases of lice destroying purple top globe and not touching this Japanese turnip, where they were planted in the same field. For a good early variety of turnip, plant a few Flat Dutch, for a yellow variety, use yellow globe, and for the stock or chickens use cowhorn.

For real pleasure in the fall and summer vegetable garden, I would like to make a suggestion. Plant some of the vegetables that were planted only once in the early spring and see how well they will grow during the middle of the summer.

One of the vegetables that grows particularly well in the fall is the old-fashioned spud—plain Irish potatoes. These are generally planted any time after the 15th of June until the 15th of August. The favorite varieties for fall planting are Peachblow, Lookout Mountain and Green Mountain. For best results be sure to insist on Irish potatoes that are grown in the state of Maine. The northern grown potatoes will grow off much quicker and the yield will be greater, in fact, so much greater that there is no comparison, than the locally raised potatoes.

OVER THE GARDEN WALL

BY LADY GAYE

Diary of a Dirt Digger.

MONDAY:

As Mistress Samuel Pepys might have confided to her Garden Diary: Up betimes and softly out to the dew-drenched garden, there to ferret out what manner of sly pests have been snipping off the heads of the pansy plants. With the first trowel-ful of earth came two pasty, fat fellows—villains from the looks of them—and, thus encouraged, for an hour or more the search went on.

Surely of the whole tribe of garden pests the most under-handed is the cutworm. I remember only one occasion when I have been able to go the grub one better. Summer before last it was, on an early morning inspection tour of the garden that a young Newport pink hollyhock was discovered, hanging by a hair—another cutworm casualty. But this time the plant was tied carefully to a splint; the break mended, and the hollyhock went right on growing, and eventually bloomed.

Strange how bold even the most timid dirt-digger can become. Time was when merely the thought of spearing a wiggling worm on a fishhook fairly, struck terror to my soul. Now you should see me pick up between thumb and forefinger a tasty angle-worm and convoy him over to the fish who live in the lily pool. Or, better yet, behold the callous way in which I can smash an offending grub—and smashing is one effective way of getting rid of them. They seem to lie just under the surface of the soil in the early morning hours, lingering near the scene of the crime, and it's easy to uncover them at that time.

WEDNESDAY:

Driving home together from the flower show the other afternoon, Vi, (my good partner in garden adventures) and I spied an extensive lay-out of cold frames and flower plots all abloom, over on the right side of the road. "Vi," I said, that must be that Mr. So-and-So who had the unbelievably low prices in his pamphlet." She nodded, and we turned in at the driveway. Well, we bought and bought—rich, dark blue petunias, some light blue ones (heavenly blue), several plants of that brilliant Geum that is so very difficult to place just where it belongs, but affords such a delightful contrast when well planted; and sea-holly (Eryngium amethystinum), which I've long wanted and found at last.

In one of her charming garden books Mrs. Francis King speaks so lovingly of Eryngium. "Sea-holly! I could sing its praises for pages! Sea-holly has never seemed to me to find its perfect companion for cutting until, in the trial garden, acquaintance was luckily made with the annual statice (sinuata bonduelli). The beauty of its foot-high branching stems covered with tiny canary-yellow flowers, when cut and held against the bluish sea-holly, can hardly be imagined!"

But to get on with the list, seven low, compact plants of hardy Marguerite were selected, and some strange yellow stuff—name unknown. Then at the last there was a gift. Ever notice how gifty all real gardeners are? Loaded into the back of the car along with the purchases was a box containing a dozen thrifty annual pinks (dianthus) for each of us—"just thrown in for good measure."

FRIDAY:

Up and dressed at ten minutes past five on Thursday morning. Donned galoshes and old blue sweater and hurried out to the garden, determined to get the new plants in before breakfast. The geum (Mrs. Bradshaw) was settled nicely near buff perennial foxglove. This is my first venture with

WHAT TO PLANT IN JUNE

VEGETABLE SEED: Cauliflower, celery, cucumber, cowpeas, gherkins, gourds, pumpkins, New Zealand spinach, squash and crowder peas.

MELONS: This is a fine month for planting all kinds of melons, both watermelons and the late varieties of cantaloupes.

VEGETABLE PLANTS: Tomato, pepper, eggplant, cabbage and collard plants may now be set out for fall use. Sweet potato plants may be started now.

WATER GARDENS: Egyptian and American lotus, water lilies, water hyacinths, water lettuce and cabomba may be planted.

BEDDING PLANTS: This is a good time to fill in the vacancies in your porch and window boxes.

FLOWERING BULBS: Gladiolus bulbs may be planted all through June. This is probably the best month for planting dahlias, especially for fall blossoms. Tube roses, cannas and caladiums may now be planted. June is the accepted month for planting German iris.

LAWNS: A good thorough fertilization of the lawn should be made now in order that a good root system will be grown for protection through the summer drought that usually occurs during August or early September. Bermuda lawns may be started now either from the seed or from the roots. For the best results with your lawn, cut it at least once each week, whether it seems to need it or not.

What Has Happened to Justice?

men she had promised to marry. The rural postman said she had had a great deal of correspondence. All her letters, however, had apparently been destroyed in the fire. According to Myers, she had some eight or ten rings. Did this mean she had that many suitors?

Right in the middle of all this investigation work the authorities learned something that startled them considerably, for they heard that, three or four days before the tragedy, the body of a woman had been stolen from the dissecting room of a medical school 60 miles from the Hurley farm.

The medical school officials said that the dissecting room had been broken into one night and the theft had been discovered the following morning. They were unable to explain the disappearance but had believed it was done either by students of a rival school, by students of their own school who might have taken the cadaver as a lark, or that distant relatives of the dead woman had seized it to save the remains from dissection. They admitted they had not connected the robbery with the Hurley mystery.

Had the stranger who drove through the mud in the dead of night, two or three days before the tragedy, carried with him this stolen body?

The authorities decided that this might well have happened. They thought that an old shack, a few rods from the Hurley farmhouse, would have been an ideal place in which to hide the corpse. The shack had been used as a storage place for junk of all kinds and the menfolks had rarely entered it.

Nothing more was uncovered about the Hurley mystery. The official verdict stood —Genevieve had slain her father and brother and then lost her own life.

WOMAN, GREETED, FLEES IN AUTO.

A few months after the tragedy Mrs. Molly Darling, a former neighbor and close friend of Genevieve Hurley, was shopping in a store in Buhl, Idaho, where she now resided, when she saw a woman she recognized at once. Mrs. Darling stared at the other woman, open mouthed, eyes popping out of her head, and for a moment could not speak. Then she gasped out three words——

"Why, Genevieve Hurley!"

The other woman started, gave a startled cry, threw one hand over her face, and ran from the store. Outside she entered an automobile, which immediately sped away. Mrs. Darling could not tell whether someone else was in the car, but she was positive she had recognized the woman

Did she really see Genevieve Hurley? The authorities insisted that she couldn't have, for was not Genevieve dead and buried?

So it ends, as mysteries do, leaving us quite up in the air.

Very possibly if these events had happened in a metropolis and been subjected to all the high pressure police work and newspaper sleuthing accorded the usual big city thriller, the Hurley case would not be the riddle it is. Although rural police forces have done some fine work on murder mysteries, the fact remains that they have not the equipment nor the resources of a metropolitan department.

One can believe, for instance, that if the Albert Snyder murder had taken place on a farm out in the country it might never have been solved. Similarly, if the celebrated Borden case of Fall River, Mass., had happened in one of the large cities it, too, might have ended differently.

RESEMBLES FAMOUS FALL RIVER CASE.

The Hurley case, as a matter of fact, bears several striking resemblances to the Fall River mystery. One cannot help but feel that, in certain respects Lizzie Borden and Genevieve Hurley were sisters under the skin, for they were both embittered, fiery tempered spinsters, and jealous almost to the point of insanity.

One recalls that there were apparent attempts to poison other members of the Borden family a day or so before the hideous climax. Lizzie's well-to-do and close-fisted father and her hated stepmother both had vomiting spells two days before they died.

It was later proved that Lizzie bought poison at a local drug store. One cannot but regret that this testimony was not permitted at her trial.

No doubt the reader recalls what happened. Lizzie and a servant were alone in the house the morning of August 4, 1892. Lizzie told the servant that Mrs. Borden had gone out on a sick call. A little while later, while the servant was taking her usual late morning nap, Lizzie found her aged father hacked to death on a sofa in the sitting room.

And the stepmother? Lizzie told neighbors, who flocked to the house immediately after the daughter's announcement of the crime, that Mrs. Borden had received a note to go see some one who was sick. "But I don't know but what she is killed, too," she added, "for I thought I heard her come in."

It wasn't until some time later that some one went into Mrs. Borden's bedroom and found her. She also had been slaughtered with an ax or hatchet. More than that, she had died about two hours before her husband.

Lizzie was accused, timidly, of the murders. And eventually she was tried—timidly. And acquitted.

She inherited several hundred thousand dollars and died a few years ago, after a life spent in seclusion, leaving much of her large estate to cat, dog and bird charities.

No, she was never able to back up that sick call story.

picked up a man, as you advised me. Two of them, in fact."

She sat down in the nearest chair. Then, after a long breath, she said, "I've broken through."

Stella threw back her head and laughed uproariously. "You look it. Why, your eyes are all shiny. You're happy, Eunice. Whatever in the world——"

Eunice laughed softly. "The first one I picked up was man sized, but only a boy. The second one—O, my!—was the real thing."

"But what have you done with him? Where is he?"

"O, I've just—f-filed him for reference."

Stella stood there in the middle of the floor, looking down at her little cousin in opened-eyed amazement.

"And I've been nursing a drunk, too. A drunk, wounded and bloody."

"A drunk! You!" Stella screamed. "But you did have a shock, and they say that one always jumps to the other extremes when a change is overdue."

"Do they? You're so clever, Stella. You know so much. And I've got to support a family—or until I can get them jobs. But that's Number One."

"There's some food for you in the dining room, Eunice. Who was it telephoned Jewkes?"

"Number Two. He took me driving, and gave me some sandwiches and a banana. Then he had to go back to the hos— I mean he had an important engagement. Where are your father and mother?"

"Gone to the movies."

"I'm so glad. Then I won't have to explain to Aunt Sue about missing dinner—not right away."

"Explain?" Stella registered disapproval. "But we don't explain to parents. It spoils them."

"O! And, Stella."

"Yes?"

"Are the men of our generation very easily discouraged? I mean, if you flick them off, pretend you don't care, do they—do they follow it up? Come after you again?"

Stella pondered. "Did he try necking?"

"No. O, my, no! But do they come after you again?"

"I suppose that depends on the man. On how hard hit he is."

Eunice sighed happily. "Then I guess that's all right. I was kind of scared for a minute."

They heard a honking outside in the road. Stella's young man, calling for her in the up-to-date manner.

Eunice was arranging flowers in the library early the next morning when she heard the door bell ring. A moment later Dr. Fred Clynes came into the room.

His greeting was also up to date. In response to her demure, "Good morning," he went over and stood beside her.

"You—little—monkey! You little monkey!" His eyes were devouring her. "You had me guessing, all right, for about seven hours. I thought your parting words last night were somehow familiar, but I did not remember until four o'clock this morning that I had said them myself. Where were you yesterday afternoon when I was talking with Stella on the veranda here?"

Silently she pointed to a chair near the window.

"So. I see. But who was Stella talking about?" he demanded. "Some intimate friends of yours that you wanted to avenge? On me?"

She laughed delightedly. Sometime she would tell him, perhaps, but not now. O, not now! Then he had her in his arms, had her mouth against his, and the heavens were opening.

When she drew her lips away she clung to his shoulders, her face buried in his neck.

"Darling," he whispered, "darling! Your heart's going all pitapat. Are you scared?"

"No—yes—no—it's only— O, I didn't know that kisses were like that!"

And she wondered why Dr. Fred laughed so as he hugged her and called her priceless. But when she looked up at him his eyes were all shiny and full of mystery and reverence. As they would have been in another age of the world, when maidens were bashful and strange—and afraid of everything.

Over the Garden Wall

Geum, though Vi grows it beautifully. She has discovered if the stems are plunged into warm water immediately after cutting, the blossoms will not wilt.

Plants of the lovely blue Lobelia were placed near the petunias of various shades of blue. For next year, there's a planting that must be tried. It is Lobelia (ramosa tenuior) in front of verbena (venosa). The Lobelia with its deep blue against the reddish purple of the verbena is said to be quite unusual and charming. Sometimes a rich, live shade of blue like that of Lobelia will pick up an uninteresting section of a planting almost like magic.

SATURDAY:

Some of us who used to go in almost exclusively for pastel shades have come to love a hint of strong color in our gardens —a touch of crimson, orange or even red, well placed. Louise Beebe Wilder goes so far as to take up the cudgels in defense of poor old magenta. Well, it needs a champion, but no matter what color combination you work out for it—it's magenta right on!

Growing Lilies From Seed.

With a little planning and forethought, your garden may boast the beauty of some member of the lily family continuously from May until September.

In the opinion of Mrs. Thomas C. Erwin, if one would have real success with lilies, he should grow his own plants from seed. In her gardens on Oakdale road, Mrs. Erwin has lilies at all stages of development; and the beauty of her regals at blossom time is a picture long to linger in the memory. One plant seen in her garden this past spring had 22 perfect buds in a cluster borne on a stalk that appeared to be about two and a half inches in diameter. And, mind you, this giant lily was only three years from the seed bed!

If, when purchasing, lily bulbs could be carefully dug with roots undisturbed, and the transplanting accomplished immediately without bruising or drying-out, every garden could then easily boast lilies of many varieties flowering over a period from May until September. But a great many of the more desirable bulbs are imported, and thus reach the buyer in a somewhat weakened condition. Or, if the scales are badly shriveled, the bulbs may be practically ruined.

Such lily bulbs more often than not deteriorate after the first season and may altogether disappear—while lilies raised from seed in your own garden go on improving in size and quality as the seasons pass. The only requirement is a well-prepared seed tray, plus a fairly good stock of patience. Try your hand at raising regals this way.

It is very easy to increase your stock of Madonnas, also. Twist out the faded flower stalk gently and plant it, lengthwise, in mellow, sandy soil, allowing the top to extend above the ground for a few inches. Give this a good sprinkling and keep it as moist as you can throughout the summer. A little scale will form at each joint, and next spring a nice crop of small Madonna lily plants will reward you.

Does College Pay?

the 3,806 men of President Gifford's study into three groups:

1. Those with "substantial campus achievements," including editor-in-chief of a magazine, winner of an important oratorial contest or member of a debating team, manager of a major team or important student newspaper, major class officer or member of an honorary senior society, or leader of a dramatic or musical club.

2. "Some campus achievement," including member editorial board of a magazine, manager of a minor team or magazine, minor class officer or member of social fraternity, member of minor athletic team or of a major varsity squad.

3. "No campus achievement"—just plain two-legged student.

It is impossible to go into all the technical details of this important study, especially the combinations of several factors in relation to future success. Taking, however, the man with "substantial college achievement" it is clear that the men who went in for public speaking and debating and the ones who ranked high for literary effort in the editorial field are the ones who are now drawing the highest median in the Bell Telephone System.

These types of campus achievement foreshadowed future business success almost as well as high college grades. No doubt most of these men had high grades. Next in order of subsequent success come the managers of major teams or important student newspapers. Next comes those with social achievements, such as major class officer or member of an honorary senior society. Next to these come those who made athletic achievements, and lastly, those who were leaders of dramatic or musical clubs.

Another thing that has always been assumed to indicate future success has been working one's way through college. This has been lauded as giving a man grit, determination and the work habit that would carry him to future practical success. In this study at least, this factor had no significance. The men who earned their expenses had been equally successful, but no more successful than the man who went through on flowery beds of ease.

In all these studies there are too many individual exceptions for any young man to conclude that we have unearthed a set of iron-clad rules or sure-fire prophecies of future failure or success. Enough men who did poorly in college have risen high in later success to prove that a young man who has not ranked high in college should not conclude from this alone that he has no chance.

HER LEG HEALED AFTER 23 YEARS

Mrs. Peter Olsen, Corning, Iowa, who was entirely healed of leg sores after suffering 23 years, urges all sufferers to write Dr. H. J. Whittier, 174 Westport Bank Building, Kansas City, Mo., for his new free copyrighted book which explains a home treatment for leg sores, varicose ulcers, milk leg and varicose veins, that quickly stops the pain and heals. Your Stars and How to Know Them

By Evangeline Adams

The World's Most Famous Astrologer

NEPTUNE is revolutionary, mystical, romantic, sometimes irresponsible, always remote. It causes nervousness and restlessness; lends itself often quite unconsciously to pretense and deceit; and inspires or disorganizes, according to the way we receive its powerful influences.

Neptune governs artistic, aesthetic and inspirational pursuits. It favors the pulpit, the rostrum, the stage and the screen. It governs diplomacy and aviation.

It is so vast, so slow, so mystical, so little understood that it is rightly called "The Shadow Planet."

Days when Neptune is in power are excellent for salesmen. At such times, insurance agents and promoters and all others depending on the silver tongue will be full of pep. Look out for them, and make sure that any proposition you discuss with them is something you really want to do. If you don't, you may find that you have done the wrong thing before you know it. Their propositions may be honest enough, but not at all essential, to your happiness. If, on the other hand, you are a salesman yourself, go to it. With Neptune's help, you could sell the mayor of Roquefort a moon made out of green cheese!

Naturally, being the shadow planet—ruling camouflage, pretense—Neptune also rules the motion picture industry, whose business is to present a counterfeit representation of life.

Most picture stars were born strongly under the influence of Neptune. It was the latter's position in Rudolph Valentino's chart, for example, that made him a much more successful lover on the screen than in real life.

But the best example of Neptune's influence on a movie star is, perhaps, the late Lon Chaney. In Mr. Chaney's case, success of some sort in the theater was foreshadowed—you might say it was almost guaranteed—by the fact that his Jupiter (ruling money, glory, honor and success) was friendly to Venus (ruling entertainment and the arts). But the type of success which he achieved was indicated by the fact that his Mercury (ruling the intellect) was in Pisces (Neptune's sign) and in aspect to the Moon (ruling the public) to Uranus (ruling originality) and to Neptune itself (ruling camouflage, make-up, and the motion picture industry).

As in the case with most people born so strongly under Neptune, there was a natural secretiveness indicated in Lon Chaney's horoscope; and he was, as everybody knows, the motion picture star about whose private life and actual personality the public knew least. Even his best friends were never sure that they knew the real Lon Chaney. The uncanny power which he had to conceal his natural features behind the most bewildering variety of make-up known to modern theatricals seems to have extended to his personality. Like a true son of Neptune, he camouflaged himself so that even his best friends did not know him. And I should not be surprised if his wonderful knowledge of make-up died with him.

Incidentally, Mr. Chaney had Neptune in Taurus, ruling the throat, which gave him his extraordinary ability, revealed for the first time in his one and only talking picture, to place his voice after the manner of a ventriloquist. Most people who have succeeded in operatic and other purely vocal careers have been strongly under Taurus; and many of the world's greatest ventriloquists have had Neptune, as Lon Chaney had, in Taurus, the throat sign.

Until 1929, Neptune had been for about 15 years in the sign Leo, which rules the theater and all other forms of amusement. This position of the shadow planet accounts astrologically for the vast strides made by the shadow screen during those years. In 1928 Neptune passed over into Virgo, one of the factors which rules the voice; and it is significant that at just that time the talking pictures began engaging the thoughts and activities of the entire moving picture world.

Since Neptune is due to remain in its present sign, Virgo, for another period of 15 years, there will, no doubt, be marvelous improvements made in this field.

Another problem which must be met during Neptune's passage through Virgo is the question of labor and all matters pertaining to housing, feeding and clothing the public. The employer must do everything in his power to appeal to the intelligence and reason of those in his employ; and the laborer in every industry and profession must realize that if he is to hold his job, his demands msut be within the bounds of reason. Both employe and employer must make money or the whole structure will fall and end in disaster for all concerned.

It is not beyond the imagination to conceive that failure to heed these astrological warnings might be the cause of the war which is threatening within 15 years, because of the revolutionary planet Uranus being in the sign Gemini, ruling the United States.

The influence of Neptune in Virgo will also have a subtle and upsetting effect on the health. Neptune rules the cerebrospinal nervous system, and Virgo rules the abdominal organs, including the diaphragm, bowels, spleen and pancreas, and sympathetically the lungs, liver, hands and feet. The individual should guard against going to extremes in overworking, and being too exacting or intolerant of the shortcomings or what appears to him to be the stupidity of others. Cerebro-spinal fever, spotted fever or meningitis may be prevalent during these 15 years, as well as troubles which come as the result of poor elimination or the system becoming too depleted.

Psychiatrists, osteopaths, hydropathists, as well as those who employ mental therapy or drugless methods in curing diseases may be more in demand than those who depend wholly on drugs as a method of cure. On the other hand the authorities may find it necessary to be more diligent than ever to suppress the traffic in drugs, as Neptune will not only stimulate the activity of the illicit drug dealers, but cause people who have any desire for narcotics to be willing to go to greater lengths in order to satisfy their abnormal craving.

Those who do research work and writers of fiction, particularly of a fanciful or semi-scientific and prophetic character—the Jules Verne and Marie Corelli types—will be stimulated by this position of Neptune. But if the imagination is not made use of constructively, either in literary work or otherwise, it may then have an upsetting effect on the nervous system. Where there is not a balance between the mental and physical, there will be danger of obsessions, false fears, and a tendency to exaggerate the importance of trifles.

Neptune always exerts its influence with special force on those born between February 20th and March 21st. But during its passage through Virgo, people born between the 20th and 24th of February, 21st and 25th of May, 23d and 28th of August, 23d and 27th of November of any year, will be especially responsive either favorably or the reverse to the vibrations of this planet.

People born during the following periods will find it necessary to exercise a great deal of philosophy and self-control in order to maintain a balance between the mental and physical:

1888	from	May 28	through	Dec. 25
1889	"	Mar. 22	"	July 19
1889	"	Oct. 25	"	Dec. 31
1890	"	Jan. 1	"	May 16
1928	"	Sept. 21	"	Dec. 31
1929	"	Jan. 1	"	Feb. 18
1929	"	July 24	"	Dec. 31

Of course, Neptune's influence is not necessarily "bad." Nothing which gives vision, imagination, inspiration could be wholly that. And sometimes, when combined with other planets, it endows its children with truly remarkable gifts.

When I was a young woman in Boston, I numbered among my friends a distinguished lecturer of that day, W. J. Colville, who was in some ways as good an example of the effect of the planets on man as any individual I have since met. Colville possessed, among his many talents, an uncanny gift for capturing the minds of people in his audiences, or perhaps it would be better to say "tapping their brains." This was due to the fact that his Mercury was in aspect not only to the mystical sign Neptune, but to the occult Uranus and the practical Saturn.

My Harvard friends were very much interested in him and contrived all sorts of tests and traps for him. One night they planted in his audience one of their most expert mathematicians, a man who thought in logarithms as naturally as you do in words. Colville was equal to the test. He captured this man's mind so completely that he talked for an hour on mathematical problems of which he himself had absolutely no knowledge.

I mention this fact to show how important the effect of the different planets are on what we do and how we do it. Here was a man born with the Sun in Virgo—a conventional enough sign—and the Moon in Aquarius, which denotes poise and self mastery performing in this extraordinary way simply because psychic Neptune and occult Uranus gave him this unusual power to take other people's minds, and practical Saturn added the power to materialize his gift.

As many of you know, I began these week articles by writing about the signs of the Zodiac. But it must be obvious from the incident I have just described and the others which I have been giving these past few weeks that the planet you are born under is quite as important as the sign.

DOES NEPTUNE INFLUENCE YOUR LIFE?

Neptune, the planet governing artistic, inspirational or dramatic pursuits, has a great deal to do with our lives, according to Evangeline Adams. It is particularly powerful for those born strongly under its influence. In the accompanying article, Miss Adams explains the astrological significance of Neptune and the part it plays in the lives of some people.

If you were born during any of the following periods you'll be especially interested in the accompanying article:

Between February 20th and March 21st any year.

HIGH SCHOOL DEVELOPMENT IN GEORGIA

NO. 18—THE DEVELOPMENT OF VOCATIONAL AGRICULTURE IN GEORGIA

Eighteenth of a series of weekly articles dealing with high school development in Georgia. They are furnished to The Constitution through Dr. Joseph S. Stewart of the University of Georgia, chairman of the Georgia committee on accredited schools.

Vocational agriculture is being taught in 4,000 high schools, including every state in the Union, as a direct result of the legislation by the three distinguished Georgians whose pictures are shown on this page. The Morill act in 1862 did much to liberalize college education and make possible the research and scientific development of agriculture.

The Smith-Hughes act is likewise aiding in liberalizing the high school curriculum and making it function in the lives of the pupils.

A boy from the farm may select each year three academic subjects along with his vocational agriculture and graduate with twelve academic and four vocational subjects or units.

The vocational teachers are on the job 12 months in the year and are visiting the boys in the summer helping with the farm projects. These visits to the home farms and the interest created in the boys' projects usually awaken a like interest in the parents and cause them to seek improved methods and new products, resulting in the adult classes.

The vocational or pre-vocational classes in agriculture have long since justified the foresight of Senator Hoke Smith and his co-laborers. Georgia needs more of these departments.

There are 3,000 counties in the 48 states, so 4,000 vocational departments average more than one to a county, but this is not yet true in Georgia.

I said in 1904 that the state should give the $65,000 oil inspection and fertilizer fees to the encouragement of at least one high school in each county free to all the white youth with at least one year's work in agriculture and some form of manual training.

J. S. STEWART.

BY L. M. SHEFFER,
State Supervisor for Agricultural Education, Athens, Ga.

Fourteen years ago there was not a single high school in Georgia offering instruction in agriculture on a vocational basis. Today there are 152 teachers of vocational agriculture employed in the high schools of the state who last year gave systematic instruction in agriculture to more than 12,000 people.

The phenomenal growth of this type of education in Georgia has been brought about largely as a result of the passage of the national vocational education act in 1917, the report of the national committee on objectives of secondary education and the improvement of country roads and consolidation of rural schools.

The national vocational education act, known as the Smith-Hughes law, provided financial aid for encouraging the teaching of vocational subjects, including agriculture, in the public schools of the various states.

The development of good roads made it possible to replace the one-room country schools with standard high schools, easily accessible to country children. The coming of these schools created a demand for a type of education based on the local needs.

L. M. Sheefer, state supervisor for agricultural education, Athens, Ga.

Vocational education was greatly stimulated when the national committee on secondary education in 1917 set up the following objectives, known as the cardinal principles of education: (1) health; (2) command of fundamental processes, such as reading, writing, arithmetic; (3) worthy home membership; (4) vocational efficiency; (5) citizenship; (6) ethical character, and (7) worthy use of leisure.

Vocational agriculture as taught in the high schools today is a natural outgrowth of these principles. It is taught by men who are graduates of four-year, fully accredited agricultural colleges. They have had professional training in school organization and methods of teaching. They are farm-reared and understand the needs and aspirations of country boys. They teach agriculture to the boys in the high schools on the same basis as any other subject. In addition to this they give instruction to adult farmers in evening or night classes.

The boys enrolled in agriculture may take a two, three or four-year course, which includes a study of farm crops, live stock and poultry, horticulture and farm management.

A vocational agricultural course is designed to train for vocational efficiency. It functions in the daily lives of those pursuing the work and is reflected in the practices on the home farm.

The content of the course is built around the idea of a balanced farm program which must involve the following principles: First, one or more crops that will yield a relatively high cash return; second, at least one crop that will increase the fertility of the soil; third, enterprises designed primarily to supply the farm and home needs, such as year-round garden and orchard, landscaping school and home grounds, forestry.

Every boy in a vocational agricultural class is urged to start a bank account and to save a part of the money that he makes from his project work. It is desirable to set a financial goal. He should attempt to save a definite sum while he is taking his high school agricultural course, generally set at $500 as a minimum for the four-year course.

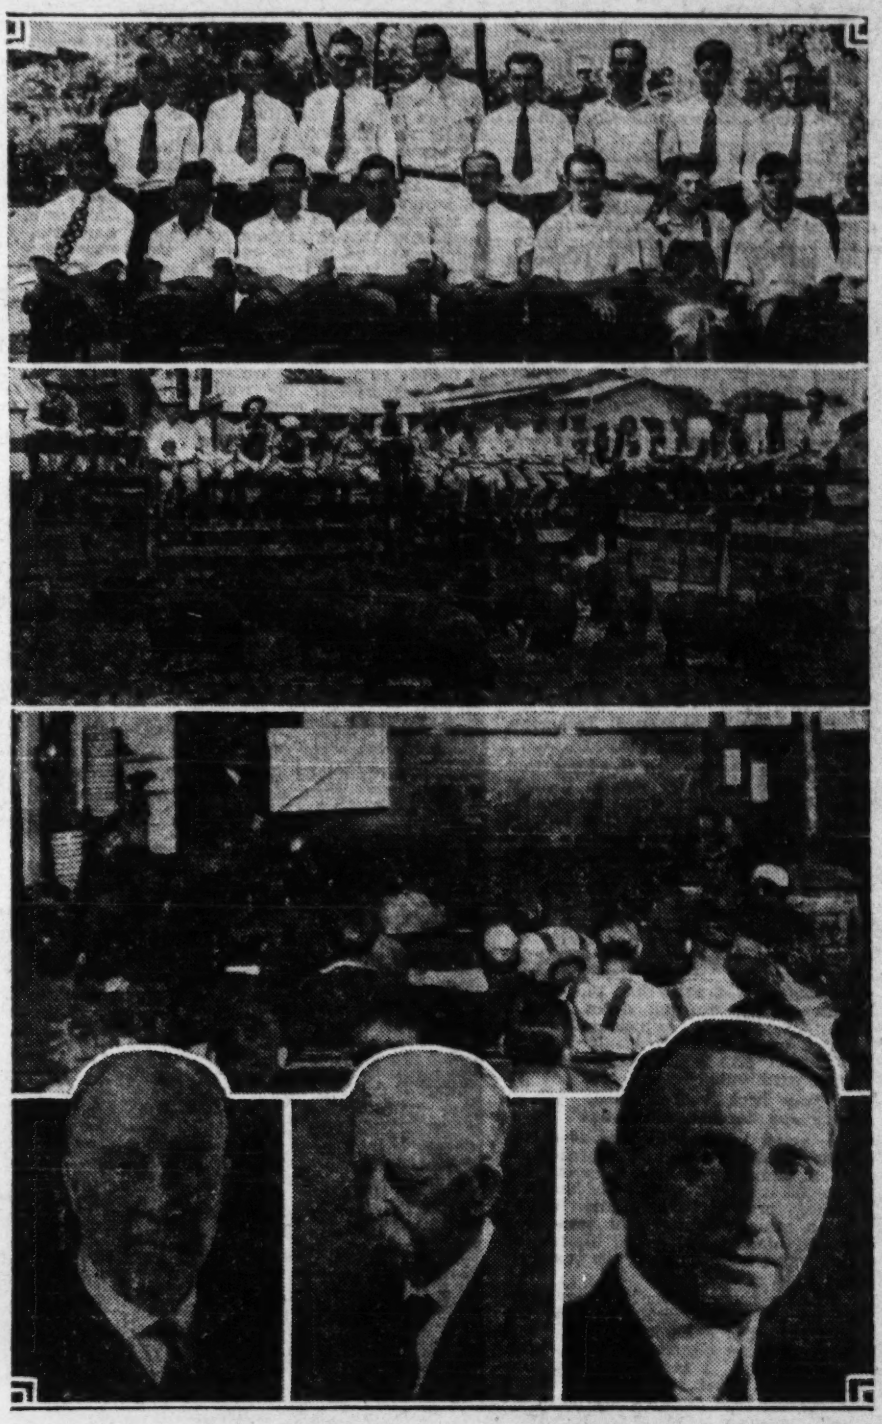

The objective of vocational agriculture is to give training to boys who are to farm. From a study made recently of approximately 1,000 former pupils who had studied vocational agriculture two years or more and are now out of school it was found that 63.13 per cent are farming, 8.49 per cent in work related to agriculture, and 4.25 per cent have studied or are studying agriculture in college.

As an outgrowth of vocational agriculture the organization known as the Future Farmers of America came into existence. This organization, which is nationwide, is composed of farm boys who are enrolled in vocational agricultural classes. At the present time there are about 1,500 members, representing 92 rural communities, in the state.

The purposes of the Future Farmers of America as set forth in the constitution are: To nurture a love for country life; to promote thrift; to encourage recreational and educational activities; to study farm problems; to encourage co-operative effort; to render unselfish service to rural communities; to develop rural leadership; to strengthen the confidence of the farm boy in himself and his work; and to improve farm practices through the application of scientific methods.

There are four grades of membership in the organization, namely: Green Hands, Junior Farmers, Georgia Planters and American Farmers. Each degree is attained upon accomplishment in farming and leadership ability. Hundreds of boys in Georgia are putting forth their best efforts with the hope that their achievements may bring to them the honor of being raised to the Georgia Planter or American Farmer degree.

Some of the local chapters are carrying on outstanding activities. At Sale City, Ga., the boys have erected a brick building, which is being rented to a druggist for $240 per year. The rentals from this building provides a scholarship loan fund to help worthy young men of the community continue their education in agriculture at college.

The top picture shows a number of Georgia's future farmers. These boys received the Georgia Planters Degree at summer school in Athens, last July. The second photo is of vocational boys at Pavo, and the hogs they have raised. Below is seen an adult vocational class studying problems of cotton production in Barrow county.

The three men pictured are the Georgians responsible for the vocational work now being done in schools of this state: Ex-Senator Hoke Smith, former Congressman Dudley M. Hughes, and Senator Walter F. George.

In a recent talk, Bennie Cobb, who is now a student at the Georgia State College of Agriculture, stated: "I could not have attended college had it not been for money loaned to me by the Sale City chapter of F. F. A."

At present there are ten other chapters in the state that are raising such scholarship loan funds.

Adult education is stressed by teachers of vocational agriculture. During the present year 96 per cent of the teachers of vocational agriculture in Georgia have conducted classes for adult farmers. They enrolled in regular classes during the present year 5,335 Georgia farmers. These farmers met in small groups for ten nights or more and were led by teachers of vocational agriculture in discussions of farm problems common to all.

This phase of the vocational program is having its effect upon the rural communities served by teachers of vocational agriculture. A typical example of the work being done is illustrated in Hart county. Before evening class work was started in the Shoal Creek community only two men were keeping poultry as a cash enterprise. Today as a result of seven years of evening class work carried on by Guy T. Gard, the Shoal Creek community has over 9,000 hens in commercial flocks and during the year 1930 realized over $25,000 from the sale of poultry products.

Dr. James E. Boyle, professor of rural economy, Cornell University, in an article that appeared in the New York Tribune, March 15, 1931, stated: "It is the evening class movement, the movement among adult farmers, that promises to transform southern agriculture. The evening class for farmers from 18 to 80 years old is the most impressive thing in agricultural education that has developed in this generation."

It is remarkable how this type of instruction fits into the scheme of our rural high schools, and how much it can mean to a rural community when it has the active co-operation of the people. A department of vocational agriculture puts the vital spark into a rural school which brings out all of its latent possibilities.

THE UPPER CORRIDOR

SECKATARY HAWKINS

Quickly I followed Jeckerson back into the dark cavern. Jeckerson turned swiftly toward the dark contraption against the wall—he pulled the lever—and the door in the rocky pass swung sut.

"Now, quickly, Hawkins!" exclaimed Jeckerson in a low voice. "We haven't much time to lose if we want to save those two kids—I didn't want Phillips to be unduly alarmed, but when he told us that he saw two men come out of this cave and go down to the river, I began to fear—"

"Fear what?" I asked, nervously. "Not that Grundy and Cap are in danger—"

"Yes, in danger of death!" muttered Jeckerson, with an angry growl. "This mystery has been running long enough—those who seek the emperor's sword have grown desperate—and the one man who's been protecting Grundy and Cap has just left this cave and gone to the river—"

"Who were those two men who just left here, then?"

"One was the man who owns the trained bear—the man with the high fuzzy hat—he is the fellow who has been coming down the river in that old Noah's Ark that your high order spy system has reported on several occasions. I imagine he sells animals of all sorts—you remember that Phillips said he just left this cave with another man, and they each led an animal—one a kangaroo and the other a baby elephant. I think your old fuzzy-hatted man is a dealer in circus animals—and he is so interested in selling them that he has left the cave tonight—and left our two young friends to the mercy of those who—"

A sudden, far-away sound suddenly came to our ears. It was the wailing cry which had been haunting these caverns for many days.

"Come on," whispered Jeckerson, "our time is precious!"

Jeckerson turned on the light that came from the large square tin box at his belt, and I drew my pocket flashlamp, and together we hurried through the cavern. I felt a chill run up my spine when Jeckerson headed for the opening through which we had seen, earlier in the evening, the big black bear disappear. My hair stood straight up as I saw Jeckerson walk right into the rocky entrance, but I followed him manfully. My hand that held the flashlight was shaking so violently that the ray of light danced up and down against the rocky sides of the passage through which we passed. Suddenly I heard Jeckerson give a little cry, and his light went out.

"Stay back!" he cried. "Don't come any farther, Hawkins!"

I stood stock still and shot my light ray downward. It showed Jeckerson down in a hole, gripping the edge of the rock with both hands. I rushed forward to help him, but he is an athletic fellow, and even as I neared him he had pulled himself up and was climbing out of the treacherous hole.

"Lucky thing for me!" he murmured as he turned again to face the hole into which he had fallen, and again got his electric lamp working. "Jehosaphat! I thought I was gone that time, Seck. Gosh! What a nasty hole! A stepping-off place for the unwary. Cast your light down and see what lays below."

Together we placed our lamps into the depths of that murky pit. Below we saw the light reflected dimly in a swirling surface that denoted water, and something that made the water move.

"It's the dark pool!" I whispered.

"You may skin me alive if it isn't!" ejaculated Jeckerson. "Quite a nasty stepping-off place, if you ask me. I wonder if those Chinamen knew that trap was here—"

"If you had gone down into that water, Jeckerson," I said, "it might have been 'lights out' for you."

"Thank the blessed star under which I was born!" he exclaimed, fervently. "I wouldn't want to meet the mystery of that dark pool face to face just now. When this business of ours in this cavern is finished, Hawkins, we will want to solve the mystery of that dark pool—"

His voice stopped suddenly. There came a pattering of swiftly running feet. Jeckerson suddenly moved backward, pulling me with him. The pattering feet were coming closer, and we waited. We listened to the running feet, expecting them to come our way, but the sound gradually seemed to rise, and we found ourselves looking upward as the footsteps seemed to pass over our head.

"There's a passage somewhere above us," whispered Jeckerson.

Together we moved around the treacherous stepping-off place, and shoved into the farther recesses of the cave. Our lights were making our pathway bright as day, but the place was so wholly unfamiliar and the underground so ghostly that we were not quite prepared for the sudden sight of the great black bear that had been apparently sleeping somewhere near us. At the first flash of our lights the big beast raised its head and looked at us, and then lazily began to pull its huge body into an upright position, facing us finally on its hind legs, and towering above us to such a height that we were quite appalled at its huge bulk. It did not attempt to attack us, however, but gazed at us steadily in a most pathetic way, as if trying to show us that it was not an enemy, and begging us not to hurt it. But hardly had it gazed at us for a minutes before it perceived the sound of pattering footsteps above us, and the big bear turned its eyes upward, and then along toward a side of the cave. We followed its gaze and saw a sort of incline running upward, formed of solid rock against the wall of the cave. Before we could move, the bear had dropped upon all fours and was making for this incline. We watched him take his clumsy bulk up that steep ascent with surprising speed, and then we followed.

We had put out our lights as we started to ascend. It was a short climb until we found ourselves at an arched opening in the rock, and stood looking in amazement down a long corridor the entire length of which was lighted with Chinese lanterns. We paused and stared at the interesting scene that lay before us. Midway down the dimly lighted corridor stood a boy—it was Cap! poor little fellow—even now the dim light from those lanterns showed us his pale face wracked with pain, as he turned at the sound of the padding feet of the big black bear—and then a light of joy broke over his face—

"Brother Bruin!" he cried, and ran toward the bear. The big beast rose upon his hind feet and stood, as the little fellow ran to it and put his arms around the shaggy hide. "Oh, Brother Bruin! I'm so glad—so glad—they've got Grundy, and you must help me, Brother Bruin. Where have they put him? Show me the way, Brother Bruin! I've treated you kindly—I know you will show me—I must get him away, Brother Bruin—I must save Grundy—where have they put him—"

* * * *

And then a new light fell out upon the corridor, as a door opened. Little Cap looked up swiftly. A hissing sound came from the doorway—and the big, black bear swiftly moved away from Cap and falling upon all fours, lumbered quickly down the corridor. Little Cap stood transfixed, gazed steadily at that doorway from which the light was now falling upon the corridor floor. And little Cap's hands seemed suddenly turned to stone—his whole body was rigid, his lower jaw was dropped—he was the perfect picture of fear—

"Ah! So, it is the honorable pale flower returned to miserable abode of despicable Chinese," came a voice from the opened doorway through which the light fell upon the corridor floor. And then, slowly came a figure from that open door. It was a Chinaman. He was dressed as a mandarin, in full Chinese garb. His arms were folded, his hands hidden in his wide sleeves. There was an evil smile upon his face. He walked out into the middle of the corridor and stood looking down upon the boy. And behind him came a half dozen more Chinese men, all dressed in their native costume. "Have you returned to tell us where is honorable sword of our most honored ancestors?"

"No!" The word fairly leaped from Little Cap's lips. His eyes flashed defiance at the Chinaman. "It is not your sword. It didn't belong to your ancestors. I was fairly away and free—it was only one thing that brought me back—Grundy! He it was—I came back to save him! You think he knows where the emperor's sword is—but he doesn't—nobody knows but I—and I won't tell anyone but who has a right to know. You haven't that right, Fan Wing! You shan't know!"

The Chinaman chuckled. He turned and muttered something to one of the Chinese behind him.

"I shall send for honorable Lui Fong," he said, turning again to Little Cap. "I have no further interest. Chestnuts pulled out of fire by simian burn fingers of same. Let your answer keep for telling to honorable Lui Fong—"

"Where have you put Grundy?" cried Little Cap, as he leaped forward and hammered his fists upon Fan Wing's fancy breast cloth. "I'm not afraid of you, Fan. You can't make Grundy suffer for something he does not know—tell me, where have you put him?"

A shadow fell across the corridor floor as a new figure emerged from the open door. It was a tall, fat, pigtailed Chinaman whose lower lip hung, and whose eyes squinted from the fat around them.

"Ah! Forgive me, if I heard what you said, honorable Cap. At last we shall make you speak. Always the honorable Colonel who teaches black bear man's ways—he has saved you. But now he is not here. He! he! he! Yes, now we shall know. He cannot save you—"

"You wouldn't dare!" cried Cap, defiantly. "The Colonel would put you all in prison—"

"But the honorable Colonel is not here," put in the fat Chinaman. "Now it is I—Lui Fong—who is in charge. Come, I shall answer your question. I shall show you where your honorable Grundy is."

Cap sprang forward. He believed every word the Chinaman had said. But the fat Chinaman suddenly gripped him about the shoulder, and swinging him around, stared into his eyes, their faces close together.

"Where is the emperor's sword?" he demanded, fiercely.

"You'll never know?" cried Little Cap. And how I admired his bravery now! In the face of overwhelming odds, he still defied them!

"So, it is well. Come, then, we show you where you will find Grundy!"

We saw them take him up the corridor. Every Chinaman in the group went along. They stopped in front of an overhanging crag that jutted out above the door they opened—we saw them shove the boy into the opening—we heard them closing the door, barring it on the outside—we heard the clank of a chain—and then the Chinamen came back, each one with a solemn look upon his face except the fat one, and the one whom we knew as Fan Wing! They were smiling!

* * * *

Jeckerson crouched like a cat watching a mouse. How it was that we were not discovered, I shall never be able to explain—but then, Jeckerson is the famous Watertown detective—and he did not get that reputation for nothing. He kept me close to him, in that dark corner—we were not five feet away from the Chinamen as they came back down the corridor and entered the open door. As the light from that open doorway disappeared from the floor of the corridor, Jeckerson pulled me quickly out of our hiding place.

"We've got to free those two boys, Hawkins," he said, and there was a seriousness in his tone which told me that he was very much afraid of what would happen shortly. "We won't likely be able to open that bunch of locks they have hanging to the chain on that door down yonder, but we can take a look, anyway, if you're game—"

"Of course I'm game," I said, "if it will help out those two kids, Jeckerson—"

"Come along, then," he whispered as he moved out into the corridor; he stopped shortly; "be very careful," he added; "tip-toe all the way, and be ready to run if those Chinamen come out again—"

Softly we tip-toed the length of the corridor until we stood in front of the queer door, made of thick oaken boards, but so roughly cut as to leave space between each board, enough for us to have seen any light emerging, had there been any light in that dismal prison, in which Grundy and Cap had been locked. No light came from between those boards, but voices did—and we pressed our ears close as we heard them.

* * * *

It was Grundy's dear, familiar voice that first we heard—dear old Grundy who always seemed to be helping somebody out of trouble—

"I'll get you out of this, Cap—trust me for that. I'll never let you suffer—"

"I know you won't, Grundy," came Cap's weak, little voice, as though he were tired out; "you been good to me, Grundy—"

"Who wouldn't? You've been fair and square, kid—you've got a square deal coming to you, and I'll see that you get it. They'll not hurt you as long as I am able—"

"But you—Grundy! They mustn't hurt you—"

"Don't worry—I've been used to hard knocks—I'm aiming to see that you get back to that father and mother from whom Fan Wing took you—"

"Fan would kill you—"

"Yes, I know that. That's why I haven't done anything up to now. I want to know everything first, Cap. I want to know the reasons, you see. And Lui Fong—I want to know what is going on in his Chinese mind—and then I'll be able to do something—"

"You mustn't risk yourself for my sake, Grundy—"

"Don't worry, Cap! There won't be any risk. I'll see you safe in the arms of your mother, some day, and then I'll be on my way again, alone this time. I'll find a place in the world, somewhere. I'll earn my place in the sun, as the Colonel says. And what's more, I'll always be glad that I sent you safely back home—"

"But why do this for me, Grundy? I'm sick—it won't be long now, for me—but you are good and strong—why worry about me? It isn't worth it, Grundy—and it might cost you so much—"

"I don't care what it costs, Cap. Once I had a mother—that was long ago. And I had a daddy, too, just like you have, somewhere. And when I turn you back to your daddy, Cap—well, I'll be thinking of my own daddy—he was a fine man, my daddy was, as I remember him, now—and it would be just what he would want me to do for you, you see, if he knew. But of course I'll never see my daddy again—but even so, well—I'd like to have him think that I'd done just as he expected of me. Now, you understand."

It seemed as though, while Grundy had been speaking, little Cap had fallen asleep. We did not hear any more talk from behind that oaken door, but we heard a labored breathing, as of a sick boy soundly sleeping, and then I imagined I heard the sound of Grundy pulling a blanket over the sleeping boy, before he himself lay down to rest.

Jeckerson was pulling my sleeve and motioning with his finger to his lips to come along and get going without making any noise.

Which we did.

HAVE YOU HEARD SECKATARY HAWKINS ON THE AIR?

East Saturday evening at 5 o'clock (eastern standard time) Seckatary Hawkins and his pals give their half-hour playlet of the latest adventure happening on the old river bank near their clubhouse.

These sketches come from Station WLW, Cincinnati.

It's just as good as a show, too. You hear Seck talking and all the other characters who take part in that week's story, and the action is full of thrilling, exciting moments.

Tune in next Saturday and hear it. Curtain rises promptly at 5 o'clock, when you hear the steamboat whistle blow—and you're down on the old river bank with Seck and his pals.

Seck Hawkins Awards Books To These Pen Pals

Dear Pen Pals:

Vacation time finally has arrived, and all of you no doubt are planning something to do. Some of you will take trips to different places, and some will spend a delightful vacation at home. How are you going to spend yours? Tell me, in your next letter—and remember each letter has a chance of winning a book of our club's earlier adventures down on the Old River Bank:

* * * * *

Some pen pals say: "Oh, I wrote three or four letters already and I did not win a prize yet. Yes, that may be so, but that's not the way to win. Remember that old, trusty slogan that I have repeated so often: "A Quitter Never Wins, and a Winner Never Quits."

* * * * *

All those who read this page for the first time today should fill out the membership blank at once and send it in, and thus join the steadily increasing army of pen pals that reaches from coast to coast and from Canada as far as South America. Not only that, we have members in nearly every foreign country on the globe.

* * * * *

The meeting of our club will now come to order, and we take pleasure in presenting to you some of our pen pals in different states, who win with their letters a book of our adventures. If you happen to be one of those who have written before and failed to win, don't be discouraged, but make up your mind to try again, like the member who wrote this letter:

Dear Seck:

I am making another attempt to merit one of the much-cherished prize story books of Seckatary Hawkins. Of course I am not in a class by myself for wanting one. Any boy or girl would appreciate that good fortune. You know the old slogan, "A quitter never wins"—well, I am no quitter, and that is why I am trying again.

Deck Seck, I got quite a thrill and many good morals out of the regular meetings of the Seckatary Hawkins Club. The fair and square method of doing things should appeal to every well-meaning boy and girl. I also enjoy the mysterious and thrilling happenings on the river bank. They keep one in touch with the wonders and benefits of outdoor life, in which every boy and girl should enjoy to take part. To enjoy good health, clean thinking and fair and square action, I hope our membership will reach to the farthest-off corners of the earth, so all may enjoy the benefits of these meetings.

Thanking you for your sincere effort, I am your sincere member and pledge myself to our fair and square emblem.

All of us will be interested in a letter that contains something of unusual interest, as this one does, from a pen pal down in dear old Georgia, who gives us a good word picture of famous Stone Mountain through the seasons:

Dear Old Seck:

I live in Georgia near Stone Mountain. And for the benefit of some boys and girls who have never seen Stone Mountain, I will tell you about it at different seasons.

In the spring when the trees begin to turn green, the mountain looks like a greyish stone set in a large grove. Around the edges of the mountain and up the sides pink, blue and yellow spring flowers bloom, adding a touch of color.

In the summer the mountain glows in the sunshine, and seems to shade from deep blue to purple.

When the trees turn red, yellow and brown in the fall, the mountain is prettiest of all. Yellow and purple fall flowers bloom around its base and up its side. If you will look closely, you can see dots of yellow and purple.

In the winter the trees look like gray shadows against a greyer mountain—a mountain that looks forbidding and cold.

Any time you are near you will see what is called the steep side. A great sculptor has begun the carving of a monument to sing the praises of southern heroes.

When it is raining you can only see half way up the mountain. And often a dense fog hides the carving from sight.

Yours, fair and square,
CLYDE JUHAN II.,
Stone Mountain, Ga.

Here's a suggestion from a pen pal in California, who is clipping out our club page and daily strips and pasting them in a book to keep for future pastime:

Dear Seck:

I have a suggestion to make to the boys and girls who are so unlucky to not win a book.

Take the every-day comic and the weekly paper—put the day comic for one book, and like this Monday's comic, then you put Tuesday's comic under Mondays.

And the same to the weekly paper. That is what I am doing.

Well, Seck, I hope this wins a book. I am positive it will. Don't you think it will?

Yours, fair and square,
MELVIN DOWLER, 12,
157 W. 98th St., Los Angeles, Cal.

A pen pal in Iowa sends us the next winning letter, which is done in verse, and which is very good effort:

Dear Seck:

I am writing you a letter
To let you know again
I love your page, and to your club
I'll ever true remain.
I've tried five times to win a book,
But have not succeeded.
I hope my effort this time
Will prove to be what's needed,
That I may show my friends a book
That I won from you,
And be as proud as they are,
Who have books they won, too.

EDGAR PEARA,
1532 Clay St., Davenport, Iowa.

From old Kentucky we hear next, a pen pal telling us how he and his pals put on a play with the characters from our adventures:

Dear Seck:

I think I have something to tell you in this letter which might please you very much.

A few of my pals and I started up a club, and one of my pals had a book of yours which he won.

We had a play in which we read out of your book, and we played the parts of Jude the Fifth, Lasky, Harkinson, and a lot of others. But we could not get Hobbs Ferry on the stage.

I am a little fat, so I took the part of Seckatary Hawkins. I guess you know what book that was (the Red Runners), and we liked it very much.

This is the second time I wrote to you, for the first time I never won, and I will try harder every time. For I like that good old slogan, "A quitter never wins and a winner never quits."

Hoping to win a book this time.

Yours, fair and square,
EARL ROBERT WALZ, 11,
959 Western Ave., Covington, Ky.

The meeting will now be adjourned till next week, same day on this same page, so be sure to read what comes next. If you have not yet joined our club, fill out the membership blank at once and send it in with a stamp for your club button and membership card. And don't forget to tell me how you are going to spend your vacation this summer. I'll be watching for your letter every time the mailman passes by. There'll be a radio meeting from Station WLW next Saturday at 5 p. m., eastern time. So long!

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

WHAT PRESIDENT IS THIS?

"Macedonia" was our last week's password. I told you I would make them more difficult for you, and now you won't say they're too easy.

This week we will have a password that should come right easy for you if you remember what you learn each day in school. The test in this password today will be to see if you can figure it out without looking it up first in any of your school books. Here it is:

PRINCE FEAR LINK

All the letters are jumbled up, as usual, and it is up to you to take a pencil and rearrange the letters properly, until you have the name of one of our presidents. Of course it will be easier if you first look in your books and see the list of our presidents, but ask your daddy or your teacher if they can help you figure this one out without referring to any book. And see how long you keep them guessing.

A NEW CONTEST EACH WEEK

READ THE RULES CAREFULLY

Write on one side of paper only. Make your letter interesting to other pen pals who may see it in print, as well as Seckatary Hawkins. Limit it to not more than 200 words. Try for good penmanship and correct punctuation. Your age must be given, as well as your full address. Above all, WRITE PLAINLY. Address all letters to Seckatary Hawkins, in care of The Constitution.

PRIZES WILL BE SECKATARY HAWKINS BOOKS

Dear Seck:

May I join your club? I have been reading your stories a long time, and like them fine.

I will tell you how I look. I have brown eyes and hair a light complexion and weigh 88 pounds.

I go to school at Brantley High school. We go on a truck and do we have fun? Our school was out the 24th of April. I had measles the last week and did not get to go. I won the prize for getting the most head marks in my class. Made my grade and will be in the 7th next year.

Listen, Seck, I live close to a mill and pond. Come and we will go fishing and swimming. I like your motto, "Fair and Square," and your colors, blue and white.

I guess I will ring off before my letter gets too long.

Yours, fair and square,
MYRTICE TYLER,
Route 3, Buena Vista, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I read your pages in the paper every Sunday, and like them very much. I must tell you how I look. I am a little girl with long curls. I am in the 5th grade, and am 9 years old.

The beach is my summer home. We have been going to the beach 8 years. I was a tiny kid then. We have lots of fun there. We make castles in the sand and we dig small ditches and let the water come up to the castle and say there is a flood and it will wash the castle away.

Yours, fair and square,
DALLIE NELME,
Route 2, Wadesboro, N. C.

Dear Seck:

I want to tell you what the flag stands for. I like to read your adventures and I want to win one of your books.

In the years that have passed since the United States adopted the Stars and Stripes as its emblem, the flag has become to the American people a symbol of national growth, power and influence, of union and of liberty. What the flag stands for in the hearts of the peop'e has been admirably expressed by Henry Holcomb Bennett in the following lines:

"Hats off! Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums;
And loyal hearts are beating high:
Hats off! The flag is passing by!"

Yours, fair and square,
KATE KAY (15),
Route 2, Suwanee, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I read your stories in both the daily and Sunday paper, and find them very interesting. The only thing wrong about them is that you have to wait till tomorrow or next week to find out what is going to happen.

I am 12 years of age, and will graduate from the seventh grade May 29. My favorite hobby is reading and I should like very much to win one of your books.

I like your club colors, blue and white, and also your club slogans, "Fair and Square," and a winner never quits and a quitter never wins.

Yours, fair and square,
EVELYN HOLLIS, (12),
R. F. D. 4, Atlanta, Ga.

Prize Letter

Dear Seeckatary:

I am certainly very glad to be able to write about our flag, because that is a very interesting subject.

I am quite sure that Old Glory means a whole lot to every boy and girl in the United States. If it does not, it certainly ought to. And Why? Is it not the oldest flag in existence? Why, of course, it is. It was adopteed June 14, 1777.

Everyone that goes to school or has gone has at sometime studied abut the flag. What does your flag mean to you?

What has it meant ever since it waved o'er us in 1777? To us it means freedom, liberty, independence and happiness, all through the United States of America.

Other nation's flags mean just as much to them. But many nations' inhabitants are not free, have no liberty, no independence and are therefore unhappy.

Let your flag mean all these things to you. Let Old Glory stand out foreever in the hearts of young America, and we always will be free, have liberty, independence and be happy.

Yours, fair and square,
DOROTHY HERWIT, (12),
1038 Oak St., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have never written to you and wish I could be one of the pen pals.

I am a little girl ten years of age, promoted to the 6th grade. I believe I will never stop trying until I get one of your books. I think the club has a real good motto, "A quitter never wins," because I think and know it is true. I am glad the club colors are blue and white, because they are part of the flag colors. Gee, we put them together and we have red white and blue. I think it is nice don't you?

I read your adventures each week. I think they are the most interesting part of the paper.

We have a forest, both back and front of our house. Trees on both sides of the house, but not so many. We have lots of flowers in both back and front yard. Our Chinaberry trees are in bloom.

Yours, fair and square,
KATHERINE FULLER,
Bowden, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I read your page in the paper every Sunday and like them very much.

I will tell you about myself. I am a girl 11 years old. I have black hair, blue eyes, weigh 79 pounds, and five feet tall. For pets I have a dog, four little kittens, a billy goat, and my two sisters and I have a big white cat. He is 14 years old and he has not got a tooth in his head. My father found him in a barn when he did not have his eyes open. While I am writing this letter he is in the room beside me. Tell all pen pals to write me. I will answer all letters I get.

Yours, fair and square,
NONA NELME,
Route 2, Wadesboro, N. C.

Dear Seck:

It has been a long time since I have written to you. I guess you thought I had forgotten you and the club, but I had not. School was going on, that is the reason I didn't have time. But school is out now. O! boy, how glad I am.

Tell all the club members to write to me, because I like to have pen pals.

I have written to you many times, but haven't succeeded in winning a book. I like to read any kind of good literature. I have read many good books, but I don't believe I have read any as good as yours.

We live on a little farm about three miles from our town. There are woods about the house, but we have a good time. We took an old inner tube and made us a ball and so we play ball some times.

There are 10 in the family. Mother an daddy and five brothers and two sisters.

Yours, fair and square,
ALICE HENRY, (15)
Stockbridge, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Don't it feel good to know that study and school are over? Just think there will be no more lessons to learn for three months. I was promoted to the fifth grade this year.

We have about 1,000 chickens, all of them are white. I have 22 of my own. If you look across the field that they are on it looks as white as snow.

I wish you would hurry up and come look for the treasure that I told you about in my last letter.

Say, Seck, do you like guinea pigs? I have 12. I have seven white ones, the rest are colored.

Yours, fair and square,
JEAN HENDRICKS,
R. F. D. 4, Talbotton, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I read your adventures every week. They are so interesting I can hardly do without reading them. I want to be a member of your club and try to win a book. Of course I don't guess I can win one, but I can try. How is everything down on the old river bank? Fine as always I guess. O! how I like the club colors, blue and white, and the motto, "Fair and Square."

The school that I go to has the name of Othello. It isn't such a pretty name, but has a fine school.

I am 12 years of age and will soon be in the seventh grade. I like my teacher fine. Will describe myself. I have brown hair, blue eyes and have light complexion. I am a member of the 4-H Club. I like it fine, but I like yours the best, and I guess everybody does that reads about it. I have read and heard about clubs all my life, but yours is the best I have ever heard about. I want all of you pen pals and club members that can, write to me.

Yours, fair and square,
MARY POORE,
Route 3, Box 147, Woodstock, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Do you have to take exams? Do you dread them? I do. In case you have forgotten how I look, I was 12 years old December 17, 1930. I have brown hair and hazel eyes. For pets I have a dog, over eight years old, but very small. He is a rat terrier.

When I heard of the dagger in the story I thought probably Grundy was little Paul's brother and Cap knew he was in trouble. How foolish it sounds beside your explanation. Well so long!

Yours, fair and square,
LOUISE BENNETT,
806 Isabella St., Waycross, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I like your colors, blue and white. I am writing my first letter. I love to read. Reading is my hobby. I am 12 years old and I am in high 6th grade. I have dark hair and blue eyes. I like your motto, "Fair and Square," and will live up to it.

Yours, fair and square,
RUTH JONES,
1040 Manigault St., S. E., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I've just finished reading the Seckatary Hawkins page in The Atlanta Constitution. Gee whiz, but its exciting! I get shivers all up and down my spine when I read it.

I've been trying to live up to our motto, a winner never quits and a quitter never wins, ever since I've been a member of the Seckatary Hawkins Club, which has been a year or two.

I'm still trying to win a book of the Seckatary Hawkins adventures and am still hoping to get one. But I'll not give up, for then I'd be a quitter, and a quitter never wins.

I am 11 years of age and am in the fifth grade.

Yours, fair and square,
CELESTE GORMLEY,
395 College St., Cuthbert, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I live in the country and have a black German police dog, whose name is "Collie." I am 12 years of age and am promoted to the eighth grade. I am proud of our colors, blue and white, because they are my favorite colors. Our motto, "Fair and Square," is a good one, and I try to live up to it.

I want the pen pals to write me and I will answer all the letters I receive. I have one pen pal, a girl in North Carolina, but I want some more from different states and from foreign countries.

Yours, fair and square,
DORIS RIDGWAY,
Route 1, Canon, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have been a member of your club for some time. I have been reading your pages in the paper and enjoy them very much.

I am saving up every page and making a book. I have a brother that reads your pages too, and he enjoys them, too. I am a little girl 12 years old and hoping to win a book very much for a quitter never wins and a winner never quits.

Yours, fair and square,
MARY WEBB,
Route 1, Franklin, Ga.

Delicacies from Sour Milk

Grandmother Knew What Wonders Sour Milk Could Do With a Luscious Cake or Cookie Recipe. Modern Cooks Also Know the Magic of This Ingredient in Desserts and Pastries.

WHAT used to be a major misfortune in grandmother's kitchen—the "turning of the milk"—she quickly transmuted into lovely black and red chocolate cakes and other confections. And yet, despite the fact that households have come to rely on the safety of pasteurized milk, the art of sour milk cookery is still very much alive.

A homemaker does not wait for the sizzling hot days that melted the ice and soured the milk to make a rich flavored, soft textured, moist cake. Fortified against these mischances with efficient refrigerators and pasteurization, she buys, when she wants to follow an old recipe or one of her own originals, a bottle of buttermilk made scientifically and uses it as she would the thick curds. This is a product not only cheaper but more uniform, so that there is no need to vary the recipe according to the degree of acidity. To make old-fashioned desserts that call for clabber she buys certified milk, pours it into a clean shallow pan, covers carefully and waits for it to sour naturally. Or she adds a commercial tablet to the pasteurized product, which produces results in twenty-four hours.

This is the preliminary to most interesting dishes, cakes, pastry and entrees with an Old World flavor.

In these recipes we have used the method for adding soda.

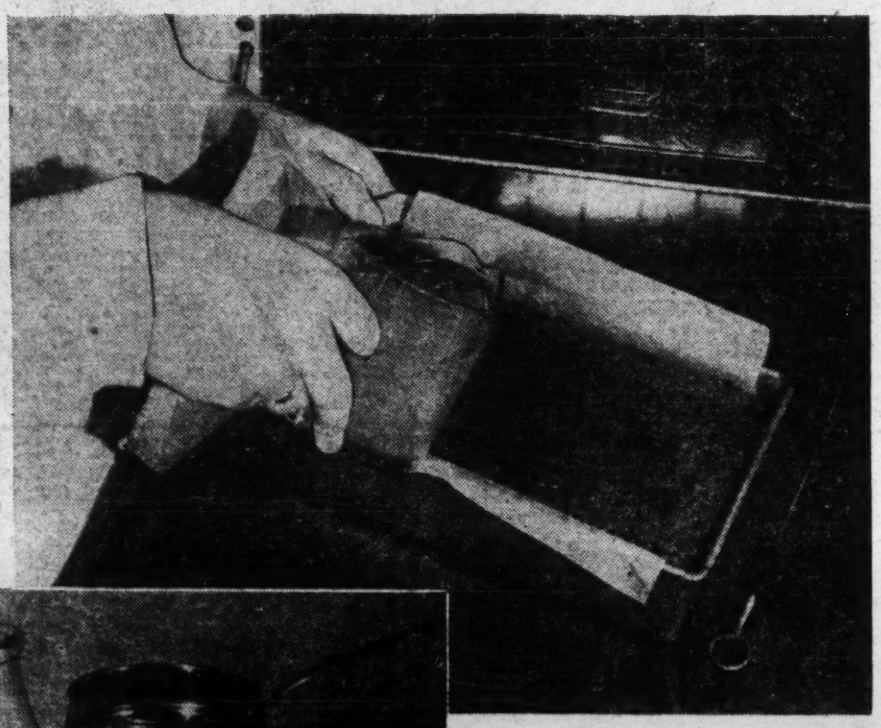

Whether dissolved with hot water and added to the wet ingredients, or added to the sour milk, or sifted carefully with the dry ingredients, the chief point is that it must be thoroughly mixed and dissolved, or the dish may be discolored and have a "soapy" taste.

Orange Fruit Cake

1½ oranges
1 cup nuts
1½ cups seeded raisins
2¼ cups sugar
¾ cup shortening
3 eggs
1½ teaspoons soda
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups bread flour
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Squeeze the juice from the oranges and add ¾ cup of the sugar. Remove the skin from between the sections and most of the white pulp remaining in the peels. Grind the orange peel, nuts and raisins together in a medium fine grinder. If they are not fine enough with first grinding put them through again. Cream the shortening well; add 1½ cups of sugar gradually; beat in the eggs. This mixture should be light and fluffy. Stir in the ground fruit and nuts.

Orange cake is bathed in orange juice and left to stand overnight absorbing extra flavor. At top, sour milk souffle.

Sour milk raisin pie

Photographs by Zerbe

Sift the soda and salt with the flour and add alternately with the sour milk, then add the vanilla.

Divide into two loaf pans lined with paper and bake in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) for about an hour and a half, or until a cake tester comes out clean without batter clinging to it. Remove from the oven and pour the orange juice and sugar over the cakes at once. Cool in pans and do not cut for twenty-four hours.

Sour Milk Pie

2 eggs
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
¾ cup sugar
¼ cup butter
¼ cup molasses
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
1 tablespoon flour
Pinch of salt
1 cup of seeded raisins.

Beat eggs, add the other ingredients and cook in double boiler, stirring constantly until thick. Cool slightly and bake as usual for a two-crust pie.

Sour Milk Souffle

1 cup sugar
2 cups sour milk or buttermilk
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
1 tablespoon gelatin.

If possible, use the fresh sour milk or buttermilk. If the milk to be used is very thickly clabbered beat with egg beater until smooth. Add the sugar and salt to the egg yolks and stir into sour milk mixture. Cook ten minutes, stirring almost constantly. Soften the gelatin in two tablespoons of cold water and stir into the hot liquid just before removing from the fire. Stir to make sure it is completely dissolved. When cool add the vanilla and fold in the egg whites beaten stiff. Pour into individual molds or one large mold and set in cold place to harden. Unmold and decorate with whipped cream flavored to taste.

Mock Birds

4 lamb hearts
½ cup breadcrumbs
1 cup milk (sweet)
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper.
⅛ teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
4 tablespoons fat
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk.

Wash and remove veins and arteries from the hearts. Make a stuffing of the breadcrumbs soaked in the milk, seasonings, chopped parsley and onion. Stuff the hearts and dredge with flour. Sear and brown them in the fat. Then place in a deep baking dish, adding the sour milk and a little water. Cover closely and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until the hearts are tender, basting often. This will require about one hour.

Sour Milk Fudge

2 cups sugar
4 tablespoons cocoa
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon lemon extract
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup broken nut meats.

Mix sugar, cocoa and milk, then let boil without stirring until it will form a soft ball when dropped in cold water. Remove from the fire and add butter. Do not stir. Allow to cool two minutes, beat until it starts to thicken, then add the nutmeats and flavoring. Pour quickly into a buttered dish and when nearly cold mark into squares.

Luncheon Potatoes

Make a sauce by beating together in order named:

1 cup thick sour milk
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon mustard
¼ cup vinegar
1 tablespoon finely chopped chives.

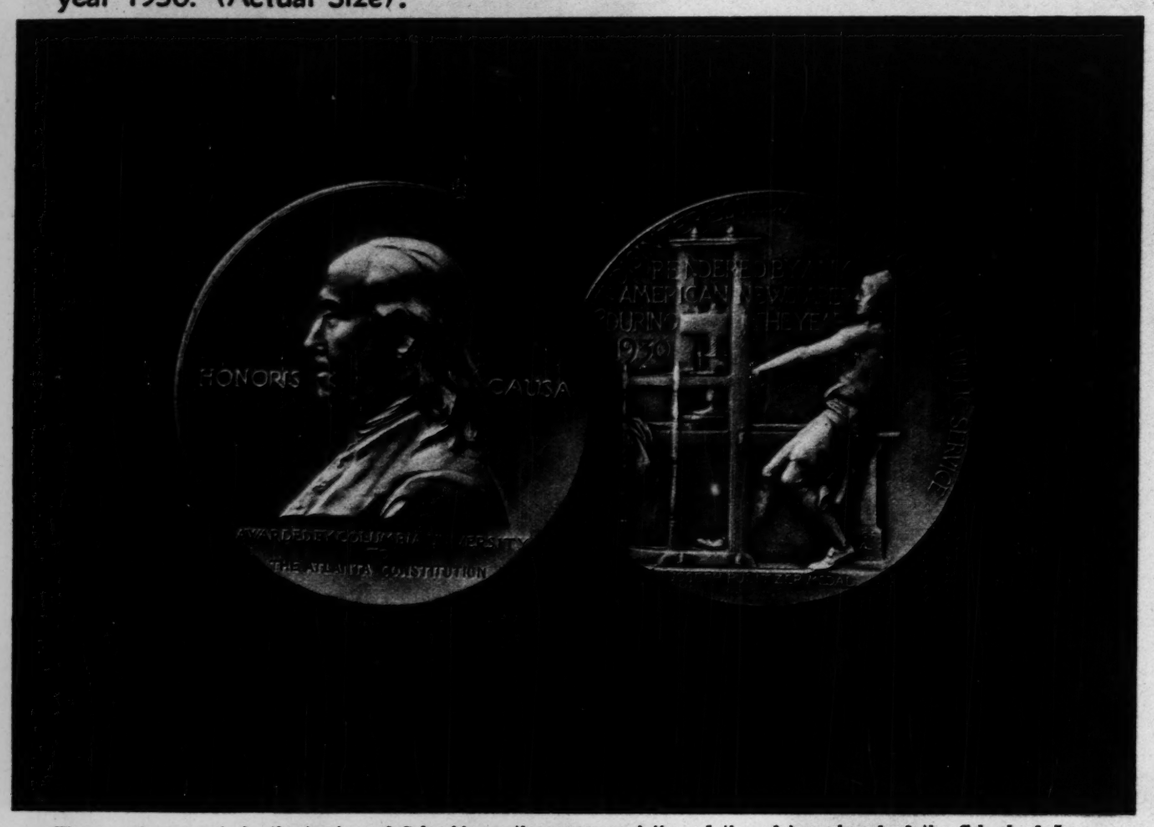

Pour over freshly boiled potatoes and serve at once.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

SUNDAY, JUNE 7, 1931

The Pulitzer Gold Medal Award to The Constitution "For The Most Disinterested and Meritorious Public Service" of Any American newspaper during the year 1930. (Actual Size).

The award was made by the trustees of Columbia on the recommendation of the advisory board of the School of Journalism of Columbia University, established by Joseph Pulitzer. The weight of the medal is equivalent to that of 500 gold dollars. It was delivered to The Constitution during the past week and will be on exhibition this week in the window of the George Muse Clothing Company on Peachtree street.

PUTTING A PREMIUM ON NERVE AND MUSCLE—One of the members of the Harris Twins and Loretta trio balancing himself on a lofty perch atop the Rhodes-Haverty building, far above the hustle and bustle of Atlanta's streets. (Kenneth Rogers)

"WORKING OUT" WITH A SKYSCRAPER LEDGE AS A PROP AND ATLANTA'S SKYLINE FOR A BACKDROP — The Harris Twins and Loretta, with the recent Fanchon and Marco "Society Circus" Idea at the Fox, took enough time off while in Atlanta to execute some breath-taking stunts on the top of the Rhodes-Haverty building, hundreds of feet above the street. Here is one of the stunts, in which an error of a fraction of a second in "timing" or the misjudgment of a few inches in distance would have precipitated one or two of the acrobats into space. (Kenneth Rogers)

FAT . . . or VIM

. . . Food can be turned to either

The modern method of reduction, now used by doctors the world over, is based on a late discovery. Science has found that a great cause of obesity lies in a defective gland. That gland's secretion has much to do with nutrition. Its main purpose seems to be to change food into fuel and energy.

When that gland is weak, the secretion small, too much food goes to fat. Then the right way of reduction—the doctor's way—is to supply that lacking substance from a sheep gland. This to turn more food into fuel energy, and less to fat.

This discovery has done much to change the whole situation. All modern doctors employ it. Excess fat, in late years, has been disappearing fast.

Notice the Results

Marmola prescription tablets embody this gland factor at its best. A world-famous medical laboratory prepares them to fit the average case. People have been using Marmola for 24 years—millions of boxes of it. So the results appear now in almost every circle.

Look about you. Note how slenderness prevails. There is little "fat and forty" among people who know. Women are more youthful, men more active. And this gland factor, prescribed by doctors or taken in Marmola, is a major reason. Most of you have slender friends who will gladly tell you this.

No starvation is required. A diet too restricted is condemned. Simply take four tablets of Marmola daily until weight comes down to normal.

Don't wait longer. Don't waste time and money on fictitious helps. Use what multitudes have used with such amazing success. Go get Marmola now.

SIDNEY SMITH

WHAT DO YOU WANT NOW?

ANDY— WILL YOU GO IN MY CLOSET AND BRING MY DRESS TO ME LIKE A GOOD BOY?

WHICH ONE IS IT? WHAT DOES IT LOOK LIKE?

OH— THE ONE— YOU'LL SEE IT THERE— IT'S A SORT OF A LAVENDER COLOR— IT'S ALMOST PINK— YOU WOULDN'T CALL IT MAUVE — IT'S A SORT OF A PEACH COLOR— YOU CAN'T MISS IT—

HAS IT GOT A LOT OF FUNNY LITTLE GEE-GAWS ON IT— WITH A SORT OF RUFFLED WHAT-CHA-MAY-CALL IT?

NO— THAT'S NOT IT— IT'S THE ONE WITH THOSE FUNNY LITTLE — OH— YOU KNOW WHAT I MEAN— ON IT— THEY COME ALL THE WAY DOWN THE SIDES—

YOU MEAN THE ONE WITH ALL THESE THING-A-MA-GIGS ON IT?

NO— THAT ISN'T IT— CAN'T YOU SEE IT? IT'S THE ONE WITH ALL THOSE DOO-DADS ON IT— IT'S RIGHT BEFORE YOUR EYES—

HAS IT GOT A LOT OF LITTLE WHAT NOTS ON IT— AND NO SLEEVES?

NO— IT HAS LITTLE JIGGERS ALL AROUND THE WAIST THAT HOOK UP WITH A BUCKLE AND HAS A LOT OF THOSE FUNNY LITTLE WHAT NOTS ON THE BOTTOM—

OH— YOU MEAN THE ONE WITH THE LITTLE PURPLE WHAT-CHA-MAY-CALL-ITS ON IT—

YES— THAT'S IT—

OLD DOC YAK

WHERE THE DICKENS DID THAT THING GO?

NOW WHERE IS THAT COLLAR BUTTON?

IT'S OVER THERE UNDER THE CHAIR IN THE CORNER—

THANKS

JEALOUSY

LISTEN, SANDY - WHERE'S THAT CAT? SOUNDS LIKE IT'S IN THAT BARREL AND HE'S SO WEAK HE CAN HARDLY YOWL -

MEOW!

POOR KITTY - JUST LOOK AT HIM, SANDY - HE MUST BE ALMOST STARVED - HE'S SO WEAK AND THIN - BUT DON'T YOU WORRY, KITTY - I KNOW WHAT'LL FIX YOU UP -

YOU JUST COME WITH ME - IT'S A SHAME, A NICE KITTY LIKE YOU WITH NOBODY TO LOOK OUT FOR YOU - GEE - 'TISN'T FAIR - IF YOU WERE FED UP FAT YOU'D BE A SWELL CAT -

WHAT YOU NEED IS A REAL HOME - PLENTY TO EAT - A NICE PLACE TO SLEEP AND SOMEBODY TO PET YOU -

BREAD AND MILK - I GUESS THAT DOESN'T TASTE SO BAD, EH? GET AWAY, SANDY! BEAT IT - DON'T BOTHER KITTY WHEN HE'S EATING -

YES SIR - YOU'RE LOOKIN' BETTER ALREADY - A GOOD, SQUARE MEAL WAS ALL YOU NEEDED TO MAKE YOU GOOD AS NEW -

WELL, KITTY - WE'VE GOT A FULL HOUSE HERE OR I MIGHT TAKE YOU IN, FOR A STEADY BOARDER - BUT YOU'LL BE LOTS BETTER OFF OUTSIDE ANYWAY NOW THAT YOU'RE FED -

A STREET CAT LIKE THAT WOULD NEVER BE HAPPY AS A HOUSE-CAT - IT'D CRAMP HIS STYLE - WHY, WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH SANDY?

SANDY! WHAT ON EARTH IS THE MATTER WITH YOU? YOU DON'T MEAN TO TELL ME YOU'RE JEALOUS OF AN OLD STREET CAT -

WHY, YOU OLD SILLY - AS IF I COULD EVER EVEN LOOK AT ANY OLD CAT A SECOND TIME, WHEN I HAVE YOU - YOU OUGHTA KNOW ME BETTER'N THAT -

HAROLD GRAY

SAY - I JUST THOUGHT O' SOMETHIN' I'VE GOT SOME SWELL COOKIES HERE I'VE BEEN SAVIN' FOR YOU - DOES THAT PROVE I STILL LOVE YOU?

Private Life of a Pair of Shoes

THE OTHER SHOES LAUGHED AT US WHEN WE CAME INTO THE SHOE-STORE -

THE BIG STIFFS! SIZE ISN'T EVERYTHING - IT'S CLASS THAT COUNTS AND WE HAD THAT -

YOU BET - THAT'S RIGHT -

I'LL NEVER FORGET THE DAY SHE CAME IN AND BOUGHT US - IN SPITE OF THE AWFUL STYLES SHE LOOKED LIKE JUST A GIRL -

SHE HAD THE CUTEST LITTLE BABY BOY - WE FITTED HIM PERFECTLY -

IT WAS OUR JOB TO GUIDE HIS FIRST STEPS - THOSE WERE GREAT DAYS -

WE WERE HARDLY WORN AT ALL WHEN HE OUTGREW US - BUT WERE WE THROWN AWAY LIKE OTHER SHOES? NOT ON YER LIFE -

WE WERE CARE FULLY PUT AWAY WITH HIS RATTLE AND A LOCK OF HIS BABY HAIR - THAT WAS YEARS AND YEARS AGO - HEIGH HO -

THAT GIRL MOTHER IS A WHITE-HAIRED GRAND-MOTHER NOW BUT WE AREN'T FORGOTTEN - OFTEN SHE SITS AND HOLDS US - SOME TIMES SHE CRIES SOFTLY - WE KNOW WE REMIND HER OF LONG-GONE HAPPY DAYS -

AND WE TOO HAVE MEMORIES OF COARSE BROGANS AND FLASHY PUMPS THAT LAUGHED AT US ONCE - THEY DON'T LAUGH ANY MORE, OR EVEN SQUEAK - THEY'VE BEEN QUIET FOR FORTY YEARS, WHILE WE'RE NEARLY AS GOOD AS NEW -

HAROLD GRAY

MAKE IT SNAPPY - - ONE REEL - BY TINK

SAY, STRANGER, I'VE JUST BEEN ROBBED BY A BOLD BANDIT WHO GRABBED MY WATCH LIKE THIS —

PLUCKED MY SCARF PIN THIS WAY, — REACHED INTO MY POCKET -

AND TOOK MY WALLET IN THIS FASHION AND THEN —

HE RAN AWAY LIKE THIS -

I WONDER WHAT'S KEEPING HIM ???

SURE. GO RIGHT NOW IF YOU'D LIKE

OH, I THINK IT'S PERFECTLY THRILLING

FOR PETE'S SAKE, WHAT'S SO THRILLING ABOUT IT?

ARE YOU SURE IT'S QUITE SAFE?

SAY, YOU'VE BEEN SEEING MOVIES WITH CHINESE VILLAINS-- THAT'S WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH YOU

WHY, THE WAITERS ARE DRESSED JUST LIKE --- WAITERS

WHAT'D YOU EXPECT? MANDARINS?

WHAT DO YOU WANT TO EAT? CHOP SUEY?

OH, I DON'T KNOW. I WISH WE HADN'T COME

JOE, THERE'S A WAITER HERE WHO LOOKS EXACTLY LIKE FU MANCHU IN THE MOVIES

YEAH? HE PROBABLY TEACHES SUNDAY SCHOOL ON HIS DAY OFF

OH, HEAVENS, HERE'S A WAITER COMING OVER TO US

WELL, IT'S ABOUT TIME SOMEBODY TOOK OUR ORDER

WHY, HE SPEAKS ENGLISH!

OKAY

BRING US NUMBER 46

ARE WE SUPPOSED TO EAT ALL THIS? AND DRINK ALL THAT TEA?

THIS IS A SMALL PORTION, THE MENU SAYS

THERE ISN'T ANY OPIUM IN THIS CHINESE SAUCE, IS THERE, JOE?

MORE MOVIE STUFF! WHAT DO YOU THINK THIS PLACE IS? A DIVE?

JUNE-7-31

I CAN'T SWALLOW ANOTHER MORSEL. AND THAT FU MANCHU WAITER HAS HIS EYE ON US. I KNOW HE HAS!

CHECK PLEASE!

IT WAS GOOD OF YOU TO TAKE ME, JOE, BUT I FEEL SO RELIEVED TO GET OUT SAFELY

FER TH' ...

HUH?

YOU DONE THAT ON PURPOSE—YAS YOU DID! YOU LEFT THE LID OFFA THAT PAINT BUCKET JEST SO I'D SET IN IT.

WELL, YOU'LL HEAR MORE ABOUT THIS WHEN SOMEBODY SEES ME PANTS.

YOU'LL GET YOUR BLOCK KNOCKED OFF.

THAT'S WHAT

WHERE'S ME BRUDDER MOON AT?

HE'S OUT!

WELL, I MUST BE GOING, MISS SCHMALTZ.

HERE, HERE, KAYO! WHAT'S THIS.

WAIT A MINUTE.

I WISHT MOON WAS AROUND.

I GUESS I'LL HAVE TO BEAT UP THAT FATHEAD PAINTER MESELF.

NO YOU WON'T! GIVE ME THAT BRICK!

OH DRAT THIS WIND!

I THINK I'LL BOUNCE THIS BRICK OFF HIS BEAN.

I SAY YOU WONT!

WHO SAYS I WONT?

WELL, WE'LL SEE.

I SAY—

PLOP!

THANKS. NOW RUN LIKE EVERYTHING.

MY WORD!

LORD PLUSHBOTTOM FIGHTING? TSK TSK-TSK

YEH—AND HE TOLD THE COP IT WAS THE FIRST TIME IN HIS LIFE HE EVER RODE IN A PATROL WAGON—JEST IMAGINE!

OH WELL, HE'LL SEE A LOT OF THIS WORLD IF HE HANGS AROUND ME.

CORKY IS JUST ABOUT HALF AS BIG AS I AM, ISN'T HE UNCLE WALT?

JUST ABOUT.

THEN THE FENCE I CAN ALMOST SEE OVER MUST LOOK AWFULLY HIGH TO CORKY. DOESN'T IT, CORKY?

SURE

AN' THAT OAK TREE MUST LOOK LIKE A WHOPPER TO YOU, CORKY. 'MOST AS BIG AS THE BIG REDWOODS WOULD LOOK TO ME.

CLIMBA TREE.

AN' IF I WAS YOUR SIZE, PAL WOULD SEEM TWICE AS BIG TO ME. ABOUT AS BIG AS A LION.

GO SEE LION.

AN' GEE! UNCLE WALT WOULD BE A GIANT! HE MUST LOOK LIKE ONE TO YOU.

BIG GI'NT.

OH BOY, WOULDN'T A DOOR BE BIG — AN' THE KNOB HARD TO REACH! I'M GLAD I'M NOT SO SMALL ANY MORE. CORKY.

AN I S'POSE A NICKEL FOR ME IS AS BIG AROUND AS A QUARTER FOR YOU.

WE GO BUY CANGY BAR.

AN' THE CANDY BARS ARE TWICE AS BIG FOR YOU AS FOR ME.

WANNA CANG-Y BAR!

SO YOU GET HALF OF ONE OF 'EM. THAT MAKES IT EVEN.

THAT PHONEY NICKEL

WELL HE GOT AWAY THAT TIME!

BUT IF I EVER SPOT HIM AGAIN I'LL TEACH HIM TO HAND A PHONEY NICKEL TO MY KID!

HERE, BUDDY, SOMETHIN' COLD AND WET FOR A NICKEL.

HEY YOU THIS IS PHONEY.

OH YEAH?

CAN YOU BEAT IT THE WAY SOME BIRDS MAKE A FUSS OVER A NICKEL?

Tarzan

by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

© 1931, by Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc. All rights reserved.

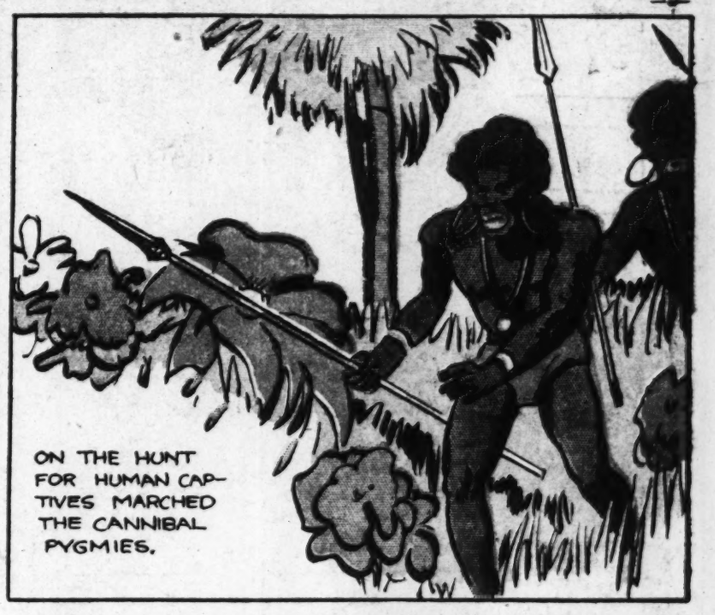

THE LAST BOB AND MARY HAD SEEN OF THEIR FATHER WAS WHEN THEY KISSED HIM GOOD-NIGHT BEFORE HE LEFT HIS AFRICAN RANCH TO ATTEND A DANCE AT A DISTANT ARMY POST.

THE NEXT MORNING, THE CHILDREN VENTURED TOGETHER INTO THE JUNGLE TO "SHOOT" BIRDS AND ANIMALS, WITH A CAMERA.

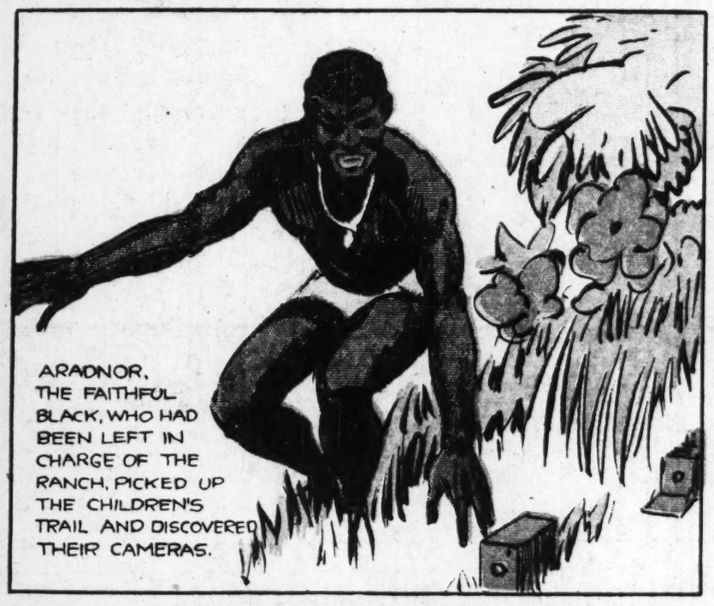

ON THE HUNT FOR HUMAN CAPTIVES MARCHED THE CANNIBAL PYGMIES.

THAT DAY THE CHILDREN FAILED TO ANSWER WHEN THE COOK AT THE TREVOR RANCH BLEW THE HORN FOR THE NOONDAY MEAL.

ARADNOR, THE FAITHFUL BLACK, WHO HAD BEEN LEFT IN CHARGE OF THE RANCH, PICKED UP THE CHILDREN'S TRAIL AND DISCOVERED THEIR CAMERAS.

THE TRAIL LED TO THE VILLAGE OF THE CANNIBAL PYGMIES BUT ARADNOR DID NOT DARE RISK ENTERING THE STOCKADE UNTIL NIGHTFALL. THEN HE CLIMBED OVER THE WALLS.

WITH A SINGLE BLOW HE DISPOSED OF THE GUARD OUTSIDE OF THE PRISON HUT.

THUS IT WAS THAT ARADNOR SAVED THE CHILDREN FROM THE CANNIBAL PYGMIES.

THAT MORNING AS THEY WERE HEADED BACK TO THE RANCH ZUGO, THE GREAT APE, MADE THE ATTACK THAT RESULTED IN ARADNOR'S DEATH.

NEXT WEEK

INTO THE RIVER OF CROCODILES.
